Careful, Cautious and Canny

IN Canada it was all right for manufacturers to pause when the tumult and confusion of war shook the ground beneath their feet and unsteadied them. But it is not all right for Canadian manufacturers to go into temporary or permanent hiding at this time of national necessity and opportunity. On the contrary, it is time for a broad forward movement.

The man who shrinks from battle, even though the forces opposed may appear overwhelming, takes away from the strength of his comrades. If he deserts, dire punishment is meted out to him. Winning or losing, battle-time calls for men who will fight until overthrown or slain. The careful, cautious, and canny man—manufacturer, wholesaler or retailer—never rises to be a great merchant.

When the war is over, the honored and rewarded men among soldiers and merchants will be those who never faltered, who kept their face to the foe, and who fought dauntlessly to the very end.

The valiant-hearted business men of Canada—retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers—are advertising NOW

Experts Look For Another Retreat of German Armies

Although the Official Bulletins Are Short, the Indications of Futile German Efforts toBreak Allies' Centre at Any Cost Show That the Invaders Are Desperate---War Office at London is Optimistic.

LONDON, Sept. 29. — The end of the battle of the Aisne, with complete success for the allies, is declared by military officials here to be in sight.

Speculation generally turns to new movements of troops. It is possible that the Indian troops (who came by way of the Suez Canal, and not across Canada) have entered the field of action. There are many significant reports that would bear out this, but the censorship prohibits their being sent out at the present time.

One thing is certain. The War office is more optimistic than at any time since the opening days of the battle of the Marne.

The English and French communiques are exceedingly terse. That issued from Bordeaux says:

"There is nothing new in the general situation. All is relatively quiet along part of the front. Nevertheless, in certain places, especially between the Aisne and the Argonne region, the enemy has again attempted violent attacks which have been repulsed."

The British statement says:

"Last night the enemy attacked our lines with even more vigor than at any previous time. They, however, met with no more success than on previous occasions.

"There is no change in the general situation. The Germans have gained no ground. The French have advanced here and there."

The night communique from the French War Office was as follows:

"First—On our left wing the reports on the situation are favorable.

"Second—On the centre our troops have successfully withstood new and very violent attacks. We have made some slight progress on the heights of the Meuse. In the Woevre region a thick fog has caused a suspension of operations.

"Third—On our right wing (Lorraine and the Vosges), there has been no change in the situation."

With heavy reinforcements on the German right and the French left, the attempt to crumple up that wing of the Kaiser's forces is still in progress. Never before in the history of recent wars has there been such a determined and prolonged attack on a given point as that being made by the allies. Day after day they have pushed forward, literally by inches. Despite the juncture effected by Von Boehm, bringing fresh troops from Belgium, with the army of Von Kluk, the advance has continued to gain ground. The dearth of news is taken to mean that the battle is surely nearing its final stage. It is remembered that just before the crucial day of the Marne there was similar scarcity of information. No one would be surprised to suddenly hear that the Germans had begun to leave France, bag and baggage.

Indications of the tremendous efforts of the German soldiers are to be seen in the fact that the crack Prussian Guard has been almost cut to pieces. Companies having a normal strength of 250 men are reduced to 100 men, and practically all of the officers with which they went into action have been replaced by new arrivals, the others having been killed.

The opposing battle lines are said to be almost within view of each other at all points. The operations have not changed for days, so far as tactics are concerned, the allies constantly pressing the German right wing, and the Germans in turn hurling their best corps at the French centre to create a diversion.

The Central News yesterday received the following despatch from its Paris correspondent:

"Both the allies and the enemy, far from being exhausted after more than a fortnight of continuous fighting, appear to be throwing increasing vigor into their operations. Exceptionally fierce engagements are now being fought, particularly on the allies' left.

"It is impossible, owing to the rigorous press censorship, to divulge all the information whereon the opinions of your correspondent are based; nevertheless, one cannot help expressing the view that the Germans are fighting with the violence of desperation and the allies with the energy of those upon whose sight the dawn of success is beginning to break.

"The movement of the German troops on the left of the centre to support the menaced right wing reveals in itself the policy of desperation—an attempt to achieve victory at a staggering cost. This movement, however, appears to be completely failing.

"Our men, despite the enemy's reinforcements, are still gaining ground and if the essentials of good spirits and excellent organization count they will continue thus to gain."

LAST TIME WITH CHIEF.

Ontario Cabinet Spends Half Hour In State Chamber at Toronto.

TORONTO, Sept. 29. — The constant stream of people, gathered from all ranks and conditions of life, which flowed steadily past Sir James Whitney's bier in the legislative chamber throughout yesterday afternoon and evening demonstrated in no uncertain fashion the hold which he had taken on their hearts.

The first parties to tender silent respects included the members of the Provincial Cabinet, the delegates from the Ottawa House, and several immediate friends and relatives of the family. Alone for the last time the Ontario council members ranged about their Premier even as they ranged about him for years at the council board. Outside the crowd was collecting, but for the space of half an hour the Ministers were alone with their chief. They will serve as pall-bearers in the last ceremony at Morrisburg to-day.

New Prince of Albania.

ROME, Sept. 29.—Prince Burhan-Eddin, son of ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid, has been elected prince of Albania, to succeed Prince William of Wied, who fled into Switzerland a month ago and is now reported to be a volunteer in the army of the Kaiser. His election was by the Albanian Senate, which is dominated by the Turks. The correspondent states that Essad Pasha has arrived at Dibra and declares his intention of proceeding to Durrazzo at the head of an army of 10,000 men.

RUSSIANS IN HUNGARY AUSTRIANS NOW IN FLIGHT

Rout of Austro-Hungarian Army is Complete and all Artillery Has Been Taken—Russians and Germans Are in Death Grip Between Eydkuhunen and Lyck.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—A despatch from Petrograd says:

"The right wing of the Austrians has been driven back beyond the Carpathians into Hungary, where they are being pursued by Russians.

"The Austrian debacle is complete and they have lost all their artillery. The Austrian left wing has retreated to Cracow. The Russians have occupied another of the forts of Przemysl which is now entirely invested.

"On a line of battle beginning at Eydkuhnnen in the north and extending through Goldapp to Lyck, just inside the borders of East Prussia, the Czar's forces and a great first line army of Germans are now in a death grip. Sleet and rain are falling constantly, the roads are badly cut up, and what appears to be a rigorous winter is just beginning. The Germans are strongly entrenched in previously selected positions, while reinforcements for the Russians have been coming up from Warsaw for several days.

Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief, has made the following announcement:

"An engagement near Sopotskin, on the Niemen river in Russian Poland, and Drussсniki, came to an end with the retreat of the Germans. The enemy has approached Ossowiecs from the north and has begun the bombardment of the fortress.

"In Galicia we have occupied Debica, on the railroad east of Cracow and between Rzessow and Tarnow.

"A numerous column of the enemy is retreating from Przemysl in the direction of Sanok, 38 miles southeast of Jaroslau. In their flight they abandoned artillery and automobile transports.

"At Colouje we defeated a detachment of the enemy and captured his artillery and many prisoners. Continuing the pursuit we entered Hungary."

The Russian armies in Galicia are said by the Petrograd War Office to have occupied six of the passes in the Carpathian Mountains. A movement south of Lemberg has been successful in cutting off Hungarian reinforcements.

At the nearest point of the Russian advance they are only 50 miles from Cracow, where the German authorities have taken control and are making feverish attempts to organise an effective resistance. Despite swollen rivers and continuous rains the Czar's armies forge ahead.

The huge extent of the Russian operations makes it difficult to comprehend the entire significance of events now transpiring. The fortress of Przemysl, now well to the rear of the Russian advance, is sorely beleaguered. O · of the main forts is in the hands of the besiegers.

The Austrian retreat through Galicia is described as one long tragedy with the Cossacks wreaking a terrible revenge for early Austrian atrocities. Guns, men and munitions fall in to their hands every day. The number of prisoners and quantities of supplies is said to be beyond all estimate for the present. The Cossacks are sweeping the fugitives into Cracow in great droves, operating almost within sight of its towers.

The attempted German advance from East Prussia has been stopped after bitter fighting.

IS READY FOR TURKEY

Russia is Said to be Prepared to Declare War

ROME, Sept. 29.—It is reported in diplomatic circles here that Russia is prepared to declare war on Turkey and that she will exact demobilization from the Ottoman Empire.

Meanwhile the closing of the Dardanelles is imminent. Russians now here and in Switzerland have been warned to return to Russia before Oct. 6, when the last Russian steamer will sail for Odessa from Genoa.

The cruiser Goeben, it is announced, has passed through the Bosphorus and will join the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea. There is no doubt now that Italy is prepared to strike at short notice. The first line army of 450,000 men has been quietly mobilized, and preparations made for the calling of one million reservists to the colors. The Italian fleet, too, is ready for service at any moment. All reports have agreed that Italian public opinion would welcome a declaration of war against Austria immediately. tI is believed now that Italy is waiting for an excuse to enter the war. Almost any overt act would do, but Italy is said to feel that she cannot enter the war with the avowed intention of attacking Austria simply to regain her province.

MONS IS ON FIRE.

Some Part of Allied Forces Is Shelling Belgian City.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The Belgian city of Mons, where the British lost the first important engagement of the war, is reported to be on fire. The Germans have used it as an organization base, practically all troops passing south from Belgium going through that city. It is not known what part of the allied forces have succeeded in shelling to town.

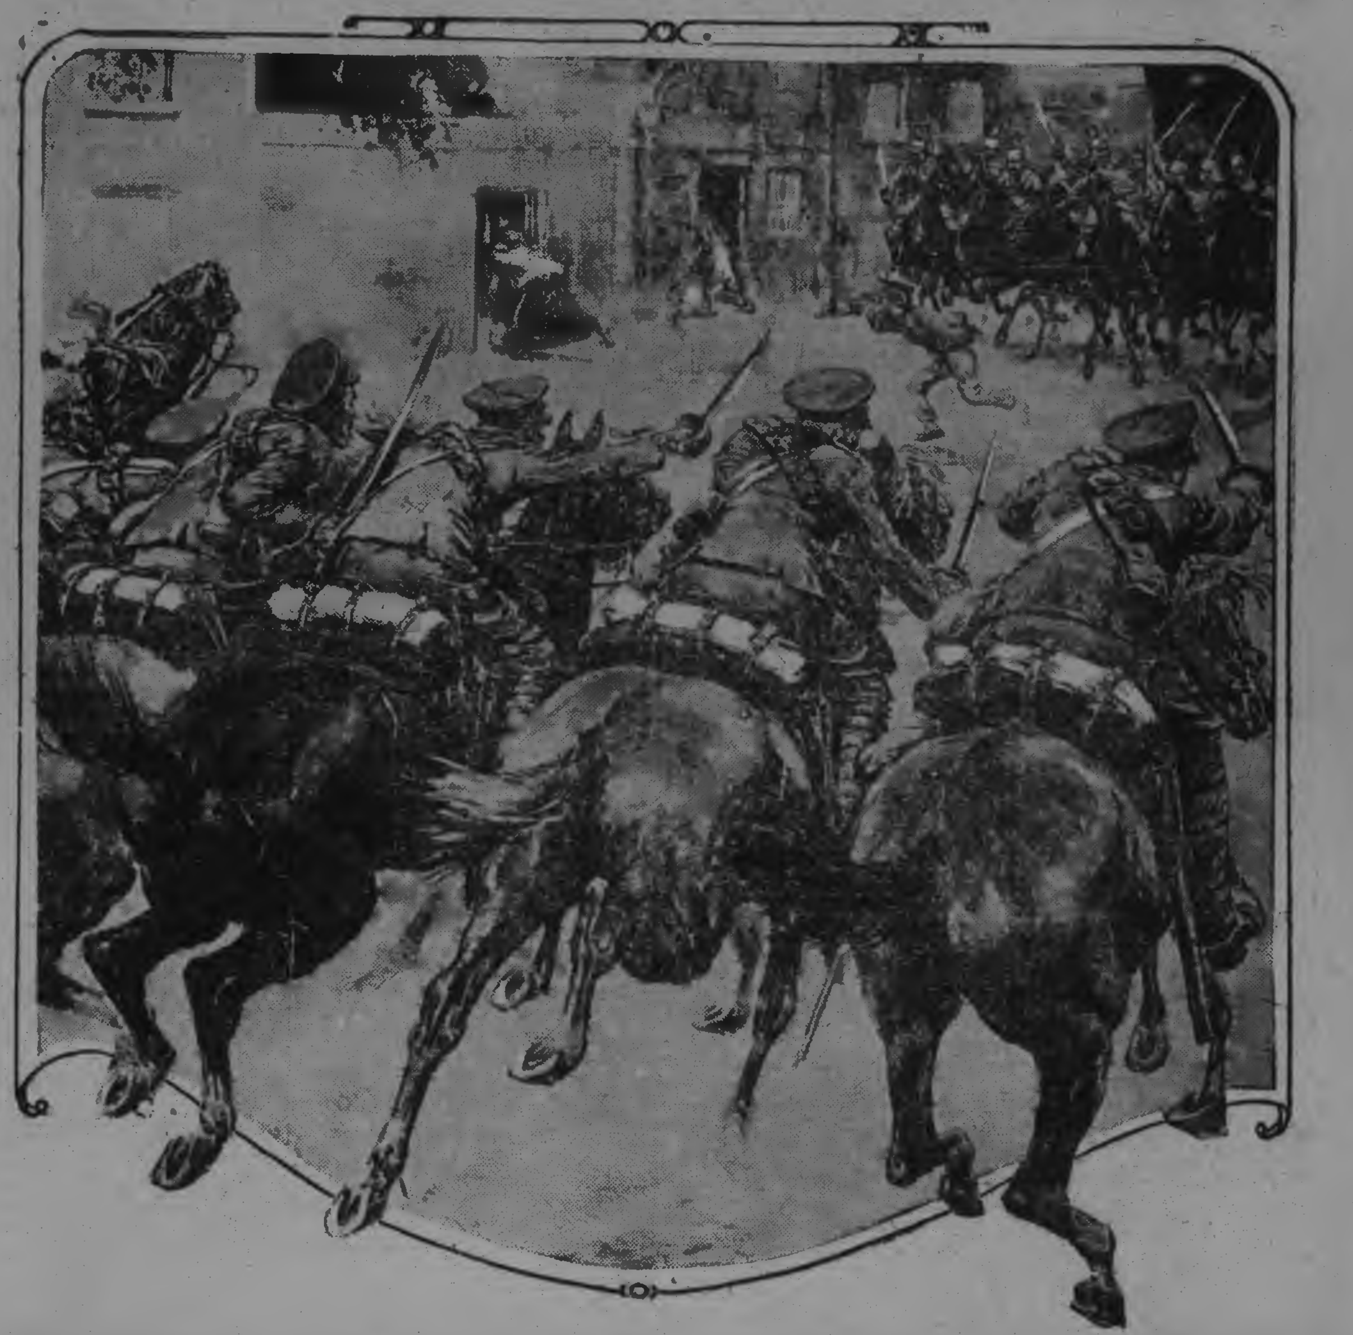
"WE CAME PLUMP ON THEM ROUND A CORNER OF A LITTLE VILLAGE"



English and German Cavalry Duel with Swords in France.—From a drawing by Philip Daud, who made his picture for the story told a correspondent by a British huzzar: "We ran plump on a party of the 4th German Cuirassiers round a corner of a little village. Absolute surprise for both of us. Before you could wink we were flying at one another as hard as the horses could go, and the villagers were yelling and scrambling into the houses on either side of the road. There was no firing, it was absolutely a proper cavalry charge, like you see in the pictures—horses going hell-for-leather and every man sitting hunched up under the No. 1 guard and hoping he wouldn't get his knees crushed by the fellows on each side of him. Lighter though they were, the Hussars went at a pace that more than compensated for their inferior weight. The Cuirassiers in full stride and on fresh horses might have ridden over us, but, slower at the 'take off' and, as was subsequently proved, mounted on horses already ridden to death, they were taken at a tremendous disadvantage. Twenty-seven of them were killed and twelve were taken prisoners."

GERMANS OPERATE LARGELY BY MEANS OF SPY CORPS

British Press Bureau Description of Operations Tells How One German Hid in Church Tower and Used Hands of Clock as a Semaphore—Officers and Men in Plain Clothes in Evacuated Positions.

LONDON, Sept. 29. — The Official Press Bureau issued last night a descriptive account of the operations of the British force in France and the French armies in immediate touch with it, communicated by an eye-witness present at the headquarters of Field Marshal Sir John French. This account supplements that issued Sept. 24 from General Headquarters:—

"Sept. 25, 1914. — For four days there has been a comparative lull all along our front. This has been accompanied by a spell of fine weather, though the nights are now much colder. One cannot have everything, however, and one evil result of the sunshine has been the release of flies, which were torpid during the wet days.

"Advantage has been taken of the arrival of reinforcements to relieve by fresh troops the men who have been in the firing-line for some time. Several units, therefore, have received their baptism of fire during the week.

"Since the last letter left General Headquarters evidence has been received which points to the fact that during counter-attacks on the night of Sunday, the 20th, the German infantry fired into each other as the result of an attempt to carry out the dangerous expedient of a converging advance in the dark.

"Opposite one portion of our position a considerable massing of hostile forces was observed before dark, and some hours later a furious fusillade was heard in front of our line, though no bullets came over our trenches.

"Espionage plays so large a part in the conduct of the war by the Germans that it is difficult to avoid further reference to the subject. They have evidently never forgotten the saying of Frederick the Great: 'When Marshal Soubise goes to war he is followed by a hundred cooks; when I take the field I am preceded by a hundred spies.'

"Men in plain clothes signal to the German lines from points in the hands of the enemy by means of colored lights at night and puffs of smoke from chimneys by day. Pseudo-laborers working in the fields between the armies have been detected conveying information, and persons in plain clothes have acted as advanced scouts to the German cavalry when advancing.

"German officers and soldiers in plain clothes, or in French or British uniforms, have remained in localities evacuated by the Germans, in order to furnish them with intelligence.

"One spy of this kind was found by our troops hidden in a church tower. His presence was only discovered through the erratic movements of the hands of the church clock, which he was using to signal to his friends by means of an improvised semaphore code. Had this man not been seized, it is probable he would have signalled to the German artillery at the time of their arrival the exact location of the headquarters and staff. A high explosive shell would then have mysteriously dropped on the building.

"Women spies have also been caught; secret agents have been found at the railways observing entrainments and detrainments. It is a simple matter for spies to mix with refugees moving about to their homes; difficult for our troops, who speak neither French nor German, to detect them."

Prussian Guards Annihilated.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 29.—According to despatches received in Bordeaux from the front the Prusisan Guard has been cut to pieces during the fighting of the last three days. The strength of some companies has been reduced from 250 to 100 men. Virtually all the original officers of the Guard have been killed or wounded, and the battalions have been annihilated.

Britannia Off New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A cruiser believed to be the Britannia last evening joined the British war vessels which since the beginning of the war in Europe have been patrolling the entrance to New York harbor. She steamed directly in from sea and joined the auxiliary cruiser Caronia.

MALINES CITY IS SHELLED

Cathedral of St. Rombaut is Almost Destroyed

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 29. — A Central News special correspondent says: "I have just returned from the Belgian city of Malines, which has been bombarded by the Germans for the third time, although the town is open and is not making the least defence.

"Yesterday (Sunday) people were returning from church at 9.30 o'clock in the morning when a shell fell in the midst of a group, killing several. The remainder fled to a cafe. Soon afterward a shell exploded in the cafe, wounding several.

"The rain of shells continued, fifty an hour. The first fell in the railway station, and eight others fell in the Place de la Gare. The neighborhood affected by the firing included the station, the barracks, a cabinet maker's establishment, the Sisters of the Poor headquarter, and the national stamp factory. Many private houses and other buildings collapsed, blocking traffic.

"The forts of Waelhem and Wavre replied until evening.

"The Cathedral of St. Rombaut has been almost completely destroyed and its tower is badly injured.

"It is officially stated that on Saturday a German detachment, comprising a brigade of infantry, two regiments of cavalry and six batteries of artillery, including two heavy guns, was surprised during a march from Brussels to Termonde, near Alost. The Belgians attacked on both front and flank and the Germans fell back in disorder toward Assche, leaving many prisoners, wounded and several caissons."

COL HUGHES RETICENT

OTTAWA, Sept. 29. — When Col. Hughes was asked yesterday if the report of the appointment of Major-Gen. Alderson to the command of the Canadian army division was correct he refused to make any statement. So far as can be learned it is taken for granted that Gen. Alderson will get the appointment, although it has not yet been made officially.

The choice of Gen. Alderson would be popular in military circles. Gen. Alderson is an able and experienced officer, wit ha long and brilliant record. He commanded some of the Canadians in South Africa and was very popular with them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

PLAIN TALKS FOR PLAIN PEOPLE.

Sir,—With your permission I should like to say a word or two to the people of the W. Riding of Peterborough upon the latest stage of development which the world has reached in its struggle to get justice and an equal opportunity for all. In the past we see that there was very little but highway robbery on land and piracy on the seas. Every phase of life was a scene of disturbance. Philosophy produced the murder of Socrates. Religion produced endless wars. Science was merely the hand-maid of superstition. There was no great trade. In a word all that we know as organization efficiency or control in the present day was absent. Might was right. The world has been trying to change all that. It has been endeavoring to show that Right is Might. Manifestly right can never prevail unless those wishing it to do so are strong enough to see that it does. But how can they do so unless they introduce popular on state control where heretofore has been that strange doctrine of "Let things alone." If we let things alone and let them as the phrase means take their natural course what will happen? Might will prevail over right. Freedom of action, of trade or of rule means so long as the people remain unorganized they will fall a prey to the cunning and the strong. The old theory of freedom in the trade or government of the people has gone never to return. In the words of the great English economist Kidd, "We have, therefore, public opinion tending more and more to side with the inherently weaker cause, and, under the stimulus of the altruistic feelings, coming to propose measures that leave the laissez-faire doctrine of the past far behind."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

GERMAN FINANCE AND THE WAR

A recent issue of the Revue des deux Mondes, the great French review, contains a passage on the origin of the war which is worthy of attention. The future historian, it says, "will understand that the present war was a financial arrangement made on the eve of bankruptcy, as much as it was the result of megalomania or a craze for fighting. Financial Germany was in great difficulties; its colossal operations had always been unfortunate; it had schemed too much, risked too much, made too large advances in goods and money to customers of doubtful credit, both in Germany and throughout the world; it had accustomed its buyers to prices and transactions which did not leave the necessary profit to the manufacturer or to the German capitalist, and it was necessary to do something drastic to bolster up the financial edifice which was tottering to its foundations. And so it was to give to Germany in debt the huge sums in the Bank of France and an indemnity, quite as much to satisfy the threats and swagger of the military party, the pan-Germanists and the dreamers of a greater Germany, "that William II. was driven to declare the present war."

SAVED FROM WATERY GRAVE

Lindsay, Sept. 29.—A narrow escape from drowning was recorded Sunday about 12.30 o'clock when a young son of Mr. Fred Scott, east ward, slipped into the Scugog and was rescued by Mr. Sam. Raymond just in time to prevent death.

The lad and his sister were playing on a boathouse platform, which was slimy with weed water, and in some way he slipped into the Scugog. His sister's cries for help were heard by several men. Mr. Sam Raymond ran to the water's edge and seeing young Scott floundering about in the water, jumped in with his clothes on and succeeded in bringing him to shore.

Although the boy was in a precarious condition on being taken from the water he was soon resuscitated. The prompt action on Mr. Raymond's part saved the boy from a watery rave and is receiving the highest of commendation.

BAND CONCERT REALIZED $109

The Women's War Fund Committee beg to state to the public that at the Patriotic Concert so generously given by Mr. Gliddon of the Conservatory of Music and Salvation Army in the Armouries on Friday evening, Sept. 25th, slightly over $109 was cleared for the fund in charge of the women. They desire to thank publicly those who so generously gave of their time and labor, the newspaper offices for free printing, the officers in charge of the Armouries for the use of the building and one and all who were helpful in this so worthy cause.

IMPROVEMENT AT LINDSAY STATION

Lindsay, Sept. 29.—The work on the G.T.R. station, which was recently damaged by fire, is progressing rapidly, and although a new structure will not be erected, the station will look good as new. A rubberoid roof is being laid on both the station and verandah, which is being painted green and tne exterior of the building is being treated to a coat of drab. The interior is also receiving considerable attention and when the work is completed a decided improvement in conditions will be noted.

MR. G. W. HATTON CROWN ATTORNEY

It is generally understood that Mr. Geo. W. Hatton, barrister, of this city, will be the next Crown Attorney in succession to the late R. E. Wood, his name having been forwarded to the Ontario Government with the recommendation that he be appointed to the position. There is no doubt the government will be guided by the recommendation and will appoint Mr. Hatton at an early date.

Appeal is Dismissed

Brightman's Claim for $2800 Allowed in Court of Appeal for Ontario

The judgment was pronounced by Sir William Meredith, Chief Justice of Ontario, as follows:—

"I think it would be a gross scandal if this appeal were to succeed. The money the Respondent lent went into the hands of the Appellant. That money was to be re-paid when it was collected from the bank with whom it was deposited, and yet the Appellant is putting forward the claim that he is entitled to both sums. There is not the slightest foundation for his refusal to pay.

I think the action is maintainable on two grounds:

1. That there was evidence that Welsh was authorized by the Appellant to borrow this money upon his account. If that were the case of course there would be liability to pay.

The other ground is that the arrangement when the money was lent was that it was to be repaid to the Respondent when the Bank paid the money. If so it seems to me that the money was recoverable when it was received from the bank as money had and received by the Appellant to the use of the Respondent. There is nothing in the pretence put forward now in regard to the drunkenness of the eldest brother. The provision of the will is not what I understood Mr. O'Connell to say it was. There is no forfeiture of the eldest son's share unless at the time when the youngest should attain the age of 25 years he (the eldest son) should be dissipated and the provision is that in that event he is to receive only the interest on the share, and if at the expiration of the two years the executors are of opinion that he has reformed he is to be entitled to his share, and if not it is to be divided between his two brothers.

There is no evidence that any forfeiture has occurred, and when the money was borrowed from the Respondent the youngest son had not attained his majority.

The appeal wholly fails and must be dismissed with costs."

Mr. D. O'Connell, acting for Mr. Gordon, represented Quigley in whose behalf the Appeal was made and Mr. S. T. Medd represented Brightman who opposed the Appeal.

The case just referred to was tried in the High Court last Spring by one of the Toronto judges and Mr. Brightman's claim for $2,800 was allowed with all costs. Mr. Medd represented Brightman at that trial and Mr. G. N. Gordon defended the case on behalf of Quigley. Shortly after the press gave out that Mr. Quigley would appeal the case to the Appeal Courts in Osgoode Hall, Toronto. That was done and the hearing and judgment given as stated.

ANNUAL RALLY DAY AT ST. JAMES CHURCH

Large Attendance at Services on Sunday and Banquet Last Evening

St. James' Methodist S. S. observed their annual rally day services on Sunday last. The services were very appropriate through the day. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion with flowers, fruit, vegetables and grains. The pastor, Rev. J. N. Clarry, took the morning service, his theme being "Going Forward," urging the Sunday school, with all the other organizations of the church to be united with the church proper, as a unit in furthering the cause of righteousness and truth. The Sunday school session in the afternoon was one of great profit and blessing to all. The members were favored with the presence of Rev. J. G. Brown, a former pastor, now of Vancouver, B. C., who gave a helpful address to the boys and girls, taking for his text, "And the young child Jesus grew in—," appealing to the boys and girls to pattern after the life and development of the child Jesus. The attendance and offering substantially exceeded previous years, the attendance being 463, as against 376 a year ago, the offering being $22.79, as against $21.40 a year ago. A pleasing feature of the service was the attendance of a large number of the members of the Home Department. A crowded house greeted the Rev. J. G. Brown at the evening service. Mr. Brown took for his text, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" This was a forceful and eloquent appeal to the young men and women to come to a point of decision in their life where they could say, "Hitherto I have been controlled from without, now I must be controlled from within my own heart, being transformed by the power and life of Jesus Christ."

On Monday evening a fruit banquet and entertainment was given by the Sunday school, assisted by Miss Kemp and Mr. Hill, soloists. A large attendance availed themselves of this social time. After the program the friends adjourned to the basement and partook of fruit and refreshments.

Much of the success of the rally day services was due to the faithful services and good management of the chairman of the decorating committee, Mr. H. Carte. The teachers and officers all co-operated in making these services a decided success, and they should prove a valuable forerunner for the special evangelistic services beginning next Sabbath, October 4, with Rev. H. T. Crossley as evangelist.

OBITUARY

SOLOMON BARRETTE.

A highly respected citizen of Peterborough, in the person of Solomon Barrette, passed away at 290 Westcott street this morning, in his 74th year, after an illness of about a month. Deceased was born near Montreal, but when a mere child came to Peterborough, and had resided here over 60 years. After settling in this city, he married Miss Mary Gordon, who survives him, besides a son, Edward, of Toronto, and a daughter, Mrs. F. Guerin, of 290 Wescott street, and two brothers, of Montreal. Previous to his death he had been lockmaster at lock 3 for several years, and was highly respected by all who knew him. The funeral takes place on Thursday morning at 9 o'clock from 290 Wescott street, to the Church of the Sacred Heart, interment taking place in St. Peter's cemetery.

CHARITY BOARD HOLD SESSION

At the meeting of the Central Charity Board last evening Relief Officer Miller presented his report for the past month as follows:—

	Last month.	During 1914
Groceries	$128.00	$1140.00
Wood	21.60	576.80
Tickets	......	8.05
Homes and sundries ...	142.50	1918.15
Total	$292.10	$3643.00

The attention of the meeting was drawn to a case of a man and wife coming to Peterboro from Brantford a short time ago and almost immediately after tehir arrival the husband took sick and went to the hospital. At present they are dependent on the city for the necessaries of life. The Relief Officer was authorized to provide the man and wife with railroad fare back to Brantford.

THE DEATH OF THEODORE HAULTAIN

The Review is in receipt of a telegram announcing the death in Toronto of Theodore Haultain, eldest son of Arnold Haultain, the well-known author and journalist. While Theodore Haultain is likely a stranger to the citizens of Peterborough, his father, Arnold, is very well known to some of the older residents of this city. Mr. Arnold Haultain was a son of Major-General Haultain, of the Madras army. Mr. Arnold Haultain was born in England and came to Peterborough with his father, and went to school with Mr. E. A. Peck and Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P. Later, Mr. Arnold Haultain went to Toronto as secretary to the late Goldwin Smith, whose biography he wrote a year or so ago. Mr. Arnold Haultain is at present in Switzerland.

The late Theodore Haultain was born in Toronto 27 years ago. He received his education in Toronto. He was employed by the C. P. R. in the city of Winnipeg. He also was in Switzerland for a while. His funeral will take place upon the arrival of the 11.22 train Wednesday morning from Toronto.

ABOUT OLD ZEB'S ESCAPE

He is Arrested as a Moonshiner, but Gets Away

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

I HAD an idea that the old possum hunter was making illicit whisky and that he could lead me to his still if he would, and one day I said to him:

"You aren't afraid that I am a revenue spy, are you?"

"Lawd, no!" he laughed.

"Tell me about some of your experiences," I said.

He smiled, and it was several minutes before he said:

"I got three or four bad scares, but none of 'em was ekal to the one I'm now going to tell you about. My still was a small one, and to make any profit I had to carry my own kegs away. I had three or four ten gallon kegs, and after a run I'd shoulder one and carry it six miles over the mountain to a sartin place and sell the stuff. One day I brung a keg up to the house, so's to git an airly start, an' I find the ole woman lookin' mighty upsot.

"DO YO' SURRENDER, ZEB WHITE?"

"'Zeb White,' she says, 'yo' ar' gwine to git cotched tonight, as sure's yer born! If yo' ar' jest don't say nuthin' except that sulphur water is good fur my rheumaticks. Now go on, and may the Lawd be with yo'.'"

"That was queer talk," I said.

"Powerful quare, sah, but it turned out all right. I'd got about half way over the ridge and was feelin' that I'd git through all right, when a man suddenly steps out on the path in front of me and cales out fur me to stand. Other men cum up outer the Earth, as it was, and I knowed I'd been took. I stood still and sez:

"'Wall, who is it, and what's wanted?'

"'Do yo' surrender, Zeb White?'

"'In co'se, but what d'ye want?'

"'We want yo', sah, and we've got yo' at last! Bin layin' fur yo' fur three months past.'

"As I walked along with 'em I knowed they had a dead case on me. They had a camp not fur away, and when we reached it I made out that there was five men in the crowd. They was jest tickled to death, too, over my captur'. They took the keg off my shoulder and put handcuffs on me, and I heard one of 'em say I would git at least two y'ars in prison. Bimeby the boss o' the gang lifts up the keg and smells of it and sez:

"'Zeb, yo' must hev put a heap of water in this whisky!'

"Then another man smells o' the keg, then another, and purty soon I seed they was puzzled. Bimeby I see one of 'em pulls out a gimlet and bores a hole, and when I seed what cum out o' that keg I was so dun knocked out that I couldn't speak. If it wasn't water I'm a possum! The ole woman's words about sulphur water and rheumaticks bit me all at once, and I began to laugh. That set the boss of the gang almost wild. He yelled at me:

"'Zeb White, yo' ole reprobate, but I'm a mind to throw yo' over a cliff! What ar' yo' doin' with a keg of water on yo'r shoulder?'

"'It's fur the old woman's rheumaticks.'

"I never seed five madder men in all my bo'n days," laughed Zeb, "and sum of 'em were fur givin' me the switch. As they had no proofs agin me they had to take off the handcuffs and let me go, but I tell yo' it did hurt their feelin's to do it. When I got home the ole woman sez:

"'Zeb, did yo' find company on the mountain?'

"'Yes. Five revenue men.'

"'Did they seem to feel powerful bad about it?'

"'They did, fur suah. When did yo' change them kegs on me?'

"'When you went back to the still. I just felt what was gwine to happen and wanted to save yo'.'"

"That was a sharp trick," I said as the old man refilled his pipe.

"Couldn't be beat!" he chuckled. "And the next keg o' whisky all went fur shoes, kaliker and snuff fur her."

"One Eye Open."

Some years ago in London a Frenchman stepped into a hansom and was asked:

"Where do you wish to go?"

"One eye open," he replied.

"Right," said cabby, who understood nothing and drove off. After a time, same question, same answer. Finally the driver descended and demanded further information.

"One eye open," still was the answer. Cabby furious. A crowd assembled, a policeman appeared on the scene and demanded the whole story. Then the mystery was solved. The fare wanted to be driven to 1 High Holborn.

RIVAL EDITORS.

Good Reason For Bitter Attacks Made by French Papers.

SOME years ago there were in Paris two papers, the Razor and the Scorpion, which were always attacking each other.

Every week people bought the Razor to read how it cut at the Scorpion and then purchased the Scorpion to learn how it stung the Razor.

A certain philanthropist, feeling pained to see such animosity displayed, invited the two editors to dine, in the hope that over good fare he could make peace between them. At the appointed time one lean, melancholy man presented himself and was ushered in. After an interval, as no other guest appeared, the host demanded:

"May I ask, are you the editor of the Razor or the Scorpion?"

"Both!" said the sad eyed man.—New York Journal.

A Useless Pause.

"To oppose the new woman is like opposing the tide with a broom. Better still, it's like Calhoun Clay."

The speaker was Dr. Horace C. Newte of Denver, who has for a long time been championing the slashed skirt on the ground that it makes for hardiness and prevents cold.

"Calhoun Clay," he resumed, "was getting married. Little and lean, he stood at the altar beside a tall and robust bride of 180 pounds or more. The ceremony proceeded regularly until, in the bride's reply, the words 'to love, honor and obey' were pronounced.

"At this juncture Bridegroom Calhoun Clay held up his right hand. A pause ensued. In the silence Calhoun said:

"'Excuse me, pahson, but Ah would have us wait a moment an' let de full solemnity o' de words sink in—especially de last two. Ah's been married befo'.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Time to Turn.

Grace was a country girl whose parents sent her to the city to attend college. When the holidays came around and she came home her mother gave a reception in her honor.

Some of the girl friends asked Grace to show them her new gowns. Obligingly she brought out several modish gowns, and, holding up a particularly pretty one of silk, she said:

"Isn't this one perfectly beautiful? And, just think, it came from a poor, little, insignificant worm!"

Her hardworking father was seated near, watching the performance, and he replied:

"Yes, darn it, and I'm that worm!"—Lippincott's.

National Movement.

"Hubby, as an appeal for suffrage we suffragists are going to all wear red gowns. As a silent protest the antisuffragists are going to come out in green gowns. As a counter protest we propose to come back with purple gowns."

"Well, what of it?"

"That will be $80 for me, please."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Way It Looks.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Rumors of an ultimatum from Russia to Turkey had considerable to do today with causing an advance in the price of wheat. Closing quotations were steady at ⅝c to 1⅝c above Saturday night. Corn suffered a net decline of ⅜c to ¾c, but oats finished with a gain of ½c. In provisions, the outcome varied from unchanged figures to a rise of 45c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 28.—Wheat opened easier on weaker Liverpool cables, but firmed up later on good buying by exporters and fair general demand for cash wheat. Oats held fairly steady.

While the cash demand is active, the amount of business transacted is light, the spreads being too wide, causing few offerings to be put on the market.

The weather over the prairie provinces is ideal for the movement of grain, and predictions are for a continuance. Inspections totaled 2405 for Saturday and Sunday, against 2872 last year, and in sight 1150 cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—The situation in grain here today showed no improvement from last week. The enquiries received from abroad were few in number and lower in price. Much the same thing occurred in flour. The demand for cheese was also light and the receipts of butter, which were large, lowered prices for all grades.

Receipts of eggs continued small and prices firm. The only buying of hay that is going on appears to be for government account. Provisions were quiet.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Sept. 28.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 268 cars, comprising 4616 cattle, 1426 hogs, 2579 sheep and lambs and 227 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice heavy steers sold at $8.60 to $8.75 for loads and a few odd cattle at $9. Loads of good butchers' were worth $8.25 to $8.50; loads of medium to good at $7.75 to $8.15; medium, $7.50 to $7.75; common to medium, $7.25 to $7.50; inferior heifers, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $5; common cows, $3 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6.75 to $7.50; common bulls, $5 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

The stocker and feeder trade is showing some weakness since the beginning of last week, when several buyers came and went without buying a single animal, as prices were too high. Choice steers sold at $7 to $7.25; good steers at $6.50 to $6.75 and stockers at $5 to $6.25.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were light, and prices firm at $70 to $100 each.

Veal Calves.

About 227 calves were on sale, the bulk of them being of poor quality. Choice calves sold at $10 to $11 per cwt.; good at $9 to $10; medium at $8 to 9; common at $7 to $8; inferior at $5 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were large. Ewes sold at $5.50 to $6.25; yearlings at $6.50 to $7; culls and rams at $2.50 to $5; lambs sold at $7.25 to $7.35; cull lambs at $6 to $6.50.

THE SEA THREATENS SOME DAY TO ENGULF NEW YORK AND BOSTON

In Time, Thousands of Years, Perhaps, According to the Geologists, the Ocean will Flow Over These Cities.

Government geological experts have calculated that New York, Boston, Philadelphia and all the other cities along the Atlantic coast will eventually sink beneath the ocean. They have observed that there has been a steady sinking of the whole coast, and they say that it is going on at the present moment.

Geologists have long recognized the fact that the Atlantic coast line was much farther out than it is now. There is a line from 100 to 300 miles off the present coast at which the water suddenly gets deeper. Out to that distance the water is generally about 300 feet deep. Then it plunges suddenly and becomes ten times as far to the ocean's bottom. The men of the coast survey have traced this line throughout the length of our coast line and find it similar all along. The geologists say that the continent once reached out that far and that there was the coast line, but a gradual decline through the ages has caused that line to retreat, until now it is where we know it.

From a geological standpoint this has happened in comparatively recent times. It has all been done since the glacial period. This brings it into the present period and makes the action new. In fact it is positively known to be going on now.

There is an ancient sill in the Charlestown navy yard at Boston with regard to which there is definite information as to its elevation. It was put in place seventy years ago; its elevation was given with relation to mean high and low tide, and also with reference to surrounding landmarks. With relation to the tide this sill has sunk seven tenths of a foot. With relation to the landmarks it has the same position, a positive proof that Boston harbor and the city about it have sunk seven tenths of a foot into the sea in the last seventy years.

The original mouth of the Hudson river is now 200 miles out to sea. The ships follow its old channel in leaving port even now. It is not known how long ago it was when the mouth of the river was not far out in the ocean. But it is almost a certainty that when a similar time has elapsed the present city will be an equal distance from the then land.

Similarly will Boston be submerged. Baltimore will disappear at about the same time and great portions of Washington. The great Mississippi is bringing down great deposits to raise its delta and counterbalance the decline. So low is New Orleans that it will be one of the first cities to sink below the sea level and be a municipality high walled against the enemy, the sea. Galveston has already felt the encroachment of the waters and has been forced to build itself a sea wall.

The geological survey makes topographical maps. On these lines are run at given elevations. For instance, a line may be run about Manhattan Island at a level twenty feet above the water at the Battery. It would submerge the customs house and extend up Broadway nearly to Wall street. From the east it would invade the financial district almost to Nassau street. It would overflow half the land between the city hall and the East river. Farther up it would submerge a narrower strip, but its intrusion would create great havoc.

A fifty foot rise of water would wipe Manhattan island out entirely. Of course, if these depressions came on very gradually the water fronts would be diked against their intrusions. In this way New York city might be saved from destruction for a very long time. It will inevitably become a city surrounded by a high levee, against which the ocean will beat with an ever increasing advantage. It might perpetuate itself by artificial means, but in the end it will be put in an impossible position. The waters will follow over the flats of New Jersey and of Long Island.

They will even beat back through the Delaware and the Chesapeake and get beyond the city and cut off communication with the main part of the land. Finally, New York will find itself a city down in a well far out from the mainland. Gradually the people who dwell in it will desert it and repair to the then mainland. The waters will eventually lap away the great walls that have been built to keep out the sea and will tumble in among the skyscrapers.—W. A. Du Puy's "Uncle Sam, Wonder Worker."

Presence of Mind.

Only the other day a great steel beam was being brought up to a giddy height by hoisting apparatus. As it passed a girder on which several men were at work the beam turned just enough to push one of them off, says Harper's Weekly. The man seized the beam and was swung far over the street. His weight gradually moved down the end of the girder to which he clung, and in a few moments he would have been thrown off, when a fellow workman sprang for the other end, thus balancing it, and together they were lowered to the ground.

Handicapped.

"Down in my part of the country if a man lays 50 cents on a stump and hoots like an owl he can get a quart of wildcat whisky."

"That wouldn't help me any. When I'm very dry I can't hoot."—Baltimore Sun.

Guarding an Army

Along with modern armies go dentists and specialists in specific ailments, and doctors whose knowledge makes them valuable in any physical trouble. All these men are apart from the surgeons. They might be considered a new factor in the war game. For the duty of the surgeon comes after the soldier is struck down. The task of the medical man whose services have in a big way for the first time been requisitioned, is in preventing the soldiers from falling under the advances of disease. His work is almost entirely preventive; it is not altogether new, but many of his methods have never been used in warfare. Medical science has made great strides since the South African war and even since the Russian-Japanese war. The big thing will be preventive inoculation.

The main diseases that the medical staffs of the warring nations have to guard against, and in the order of their likelihood of occurrence are enteric (typhoid) fever, cholera, diphtheria.

In South Africa typhoid killed more soldiers than shot and shell. Toward the end of the war the practise of inoculating the British soldiers was used. Though that method of combatting disease was very new good results were common. To-day it has reached undreamed of development and unless commanding officers impatiently limit the scope of the bacteriologists, the soldiers will likely be as free of typhoid as the citizen of any Canadian town.

THE SCIENCE OF WARFARE

What strides the science has made in war is proved by the statement of an expert that the artillery of to-day is at least one hundred and sixteen times more deadly than the batteries which slaughtered their thousands at Sedan and Gravelotte. In 1870 shrapnel fire, for example, only scattered thirty-seven death-dealing missiles. Now it scatters 340. A bomb weighing about 70 pounds forty years ago would have burst into forty-two fragments. To-day, when it is charged with peroxide, it breaks up into 1,200 pieces. It is estimated that such a bomb would effectually destroy all life within a range of 200 yards of the point of explosion.

So terrible in its powers of slaughter is the modern cannon that, if a body of 10,000 men advancing to the attack had to traverse a distance of a mile and a half under the fire of a single battery, they would be exposed to 1,450 rounds before they could cross the zone of fire, and the bursting of the shells fired by that battery would scatter 275,000 bullets (more than twenty-seven for each man) in fragments over the mile and a half across which they would have to march. Such is the perfection which artillery has attained, thanks to the invention of the quick-firing gun, to range-finders, and to the use of higher explosives.

To-day, too, the soldier can fire twelve times as many shots per minute as he was able to do a generation ago.

HELIGOLAND

The Island of Heligoland lies some forty miles out from the mouth of the Kiel Canal. It was ceded in 1890 to Germany by the late Lord Salisbury in exchange for a strip of land in East Africa. Undoubtedly this was an unwise move on the part of the British, as Heligoland became one of the strongest fortresses in the world, guarding the entrance to the Kiel Canal. The land ceded in exchange for Heligoland was scarcely worth anything, certainly is not worth anything in comparison to the strategic importance of Heligoland. It is, of course, true that twenty-five years ago Germany was not regarded as a menace to the world's peace, nor did she at that time possess the powerful army and navy which are hers to-day. It is unfortunate, however, that she was given Heligoland as she has endeavored throughout the twenty-four years since it came into her possession, to strengthen and improve her defences.

COSTLY AMMUNITION

It Costs Much to Feed Shells Into the Great Guns

Every time a big gun is fired $1,500 goes in smoke and a splash, and there were 372 such guns in the fleet which Admiral Callaghan led out of Spithead. Torpedoes cost ten times as much, but they have the advantage from the taxpayers' point of view, that they can be picked up again after they have been fired in practice.

Many of the big ships burn oil fuel as an auxiliary to their coal, or at least are fitted for that purpose, but there are 127 torpedo craft beside the submarines which burn oil fuel alone. In the aggregate their tanks and double bottoms can accommodate 10,315 tons of fuel, for which is paid $25 a ton.

The Freemasons have offered the Italian government the palace in which they have their headquarters, one of the largest in Rome, for hospital uses in case of war. The minister of war, in reply, said he would remember the kind offer in case of a general mobilization.

TWO NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Well By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

BALSAM OF PERU.

It Comes From a Tree That Will Grow Only In Salvador.

Naturally, one would expect balsam of Peru to come from Peru, but it does not.

Peruvian balsam comes from Salvador, and the little Central American republic has something of a corner on the market, for it seems to be the only country able to produce this valuable pharmaceutical resin in commercial quantities.

The balsam tree flourishes only along the western Pacific slope of Salvador, between the ports of Acajutla and La Libertad, a distance of not over forty miles, and covering an area of not more than 750 square miles. It is one of the most beautiful trees of the tropical forest and grows rather isolated from its kind. At full development it measures about forty inches in diameter and reaches a height of 80 to 115 feet.

The balsam or sap is gathered during the dry season and in the following manner: A hole is made in the outer bark either by pounding the surface with a blunt instrument or stone, thus separating the outer from the inner layers, or is cut with a sharp knife to form an opening six or seven inches long. From this portion of the tree then exudes, after a period of from five to eight days, the mature sap, which is collected by means of tying pieces of absolutely clean cloth over the wound, which absorb the liquid. When the flow ceases it is again stimulated by heating the tree by means of burning torches.

The cloths in which the sap has been collected are subsequently boiled, and this sap expressed mechanically forms the crude balsam. This is again boiled, foreign substances removed and the liquid poured into rectangular tins containing about fifty-five pounds each, and thus shipped to its final destination. A good balsam tree will yield from four to five pounds of sap a year, and if properly cared for will live to be a hundred years old.

A Mild Accusation.

Uncle Henry Barnes was one of the mildest of men. No one had ever seen him angry or impatient, but when his old time neighbor and supposed friend, John Ragland, deliberately cheated him out of $900 even his kindly, patient spirit was ruffled.

"Some time," he remarked to his wife, "I'm going to tell that man what I think of him."

One day he came home highly dissatisfied with himself. "I saw John Ragland to-day, and I told him straight out what I thought of him," he said.

"What did you say?" asked his wife.

"I told him I thought he was a very unreasonable man."

Peru's Sugar Cane.

Heavy production of sugar cane to the acre is one of the surprises of Peru. Where it is grown the land is level, and planting is an easy matter. When the cane reaches the height of two feet further attention in regard to cultivation is said to be unnecessary, and in from eighteen to twenty-four months maturity is reached. That the growth is luxurious may be known from the fact that an average crop of forty tons an acre is obtained, while sixty and even seventy tons is not uncommon. In other sugar-growing countries, including Cuba, twenty-five tons per acre are considered a good average, according to sugar experts.

THE SPORTING WORLD

ATHLETICS HAVE EDGE IN OFFENSIVE POWERS

There is Little to Choose Between the Braves and Mackmen on the Defensive

New York, Sept. 29.—Two fans in the stands at the Polo Grounds watched the Cardinals wallop the Giants. "It looks like a sure thing for the Braves now," said one. "Yes," replied the companion, "a sure thing that they'll cop in the National league and earn the dubious honor of meeting the Athletics in the world's series."

An outsider butted into the conversation, as outsiders are so prone to do at ball games. "Whad-ya mean, dubious honor of meeting the Athletics?" he bawled. "They're only human, and can be beaten the same as any other team. Look at the way the old Cubs cracked at last under Chance. The Athletics never were better than the old Chicago machine."

Has Never Been Settled.

The second of the first mentioned fans laughed good naturedly. "Friend," he said, "the question of the greatest baseball machine of all time is one that will be argued as long as the game is played. And never with any result save a flow of words. The machines of the game have always been so far apart in their existence as to never meet, and that makes the question of the superiority of one over the other almost hypothetical. The present team of Connie Mack outclasses each and every club in the National league so far that there can be no question of their superiority. It is quite true that in a short series they might possibly be defeated by the Braves. The possibility is very remote, however, and if you will take the trouble to look up the records you will see that the miracle that has placed Stallings' machine in the commanding position it holds today in its league would be nothing to the wizardy that would be necessary to bring about a triumph over the outfit of Connie Mack."

With Boston seven full games in the lead when the sun sank behind the bluff of Coogan, the words of the fan who considered the Athletics impregnable made such an impression on us that we delved a bit into comparisons of the two possible contenders for the world title. Considering their relative strength offensively only, this is what the figures show:

The Teams Compared.

The outfit piloted by the famous Connie has walloped the ball during the season to date for a team average of .271. Against this, Stallings' men have a record with the willow of .244.

In the games up to and including September 16, the Athletics have made 663 runs, 1227 hits and stolen 210 bases. The Braves during the same period have made 521 tallies, 1088 hits and pilfered all of 110 sacks.

These figures, of course, take in the averages of all the athletes that the respective managers have used during the season, and are not as fair a comparison as that of taking the regular players of each team and comparing them. Getting interested in the subject, we also did this, and found the following to be true:

Here in a nutshell, then, are the offensive figures on the regulars of the two world series contenders. Make your own bets.

WHEN THE LETTER B UPSETS DOPE

One fact that has been overlooked in the discussion of four-time flag winners in the National League is that whenever a team has a chance to win four successive years some club whose name begins with B comes along and upsets the dope. To illustrate:—

Chicago landed the championships of 1880, 1881 and 1882, and Boston finished first in 1883.

Boston landed the championships of 1891, 1892 and 1893, and Baltimore finished first in 1894.

Baltimore landed the championships of 1894, 1895, and 1896, and Boston finished first in 1897.

New York landed the championships in 1911, 1912, and 1913, and now it is almost a certainty that Boston will finish first in 1914.

So the Braves in keeping McGraw from accomplishing what was too much for Adrian Anson, Frank Selee and "Ned" Hanlon are merely following precedent.

REMEMBER THE ATHLETIC MEET

Lest you forget just jot down as part of your Thanksgiving Day program the athletic meet at Riverside Park at 2 p.m. The committee in charge are very anxious that there should be a big group of contestants to help swell the Patriotic Fund and they are also anxious that there should be a big group of contestnats. This is not a meet for the highly specialized athlete alone. There is a chance for the fellow who imagines himself a has-been to get back and enjoy the zest of competition. Don't stand on the side line and tell the other fellow how you used to do it, but get into the international tug of war. The Frenchmen say they are going to walk off with the medals. How about it Irishmen? A team is wanted from every nationality in Peterboro. If you want to know more about this see the physical director at the Y.M.C.A. Renew your youth and get into the game. Handsome medal of every man on the winning team. Ask about it. Talk about it.

Col. Lowther, ex-military secretary of the Duke of Connaught, who was wounded in the battle of the Aisne, is progressing satisfactorily at Neuilly, and hopes to be back in the thick of the fight shortly.

Her Choice.

They were sisters-in-law and reasonably well disposed toward each other. One was the mother of George, aged six months, and the other was the mother of Marian, aged six months and four days.

"Marian does not seem to grow very fast," said the mother of George, with a suggestion of commiseration in her tones. "George is much taller"—(height being measured in inches).

"Perhaps he is," replied the mother of Marian coldly, "but Marian weighs more."

"Oh, well," responded the sister-in-law, with a smile of high bred superiority, "of course I should not wish George to be gross."

COMMENT As You Like It

Still does Alexander the Great keep winning. He made the total 26 on Sunday.

"Nap" Lajoie made his 3000th hit on Sunday. Wagner secured his three-thousandth bingle earlier in the season. Truly the "fathers of baseball" have set up records.

McGraw has traded Rube Marquard, Eddie Grant and Arthur Bues to Chicago for Heinie Zimmerman. Bues is the only man who will make the change this season.

The drafting of Joseph and Maurice Shannon, twins, from the Asbury Park team of the Atlantic league has been announced by Joseph J. Lannin, President of the Boston Americans. Both are infielders.

It was announced at the headquarters of the National Baseball Commission that the names of players drafted by the National and American leagues would not be given out by the commission, but that the individual clubs would make them public when they so desired. This year the drafts were made secretly.

President Barrow, in an interview given out in New York last week, is credited with saying that though most of the clubs in his circuit lost money this season, they will be doing business again next year, but with a couple of changes in the make-up of the league. Jersey City is to be dropped, along with one other city, probably Montreal.

On excellent authority, secured from another quarter, it is said that the International League proposes to shift the Jersey City franchise to Brooklyn and the Montreal franchise to Pittsburg. An effort has been lately made to persuade President Lichtenheim to sell his Montreal franchise, but he, along with the other shareholders, refuse to do this. They propose to rebuild the stands burned this summer at Atwater Park.

In 1912 Rube Marquard had nineteen straight wins — now he has twelve straight—the other way. According to Grantland Rice the Rube sings:—

How speed the ages on their way,
  How old Doc Time must flutter by.
How brief, alas, each vanished day
  As centuries arise and die;
For here I see it jotted down
  On history's eternal slate,
Where Babylon was quite a town
  And I—had nineteen straight.

Within my den at night I read
  Forgotten legends of the years;
Gray age on age I lamp the screed
  Of Hector's fall and Helen's tears.
Aye, back beyond Time's fading ridge
  I trail with those who jeered at Fate,
When old Horatius held the bridge
  And I—had nineteen straight.

Dr. John Lavan, who is shortstopping for the Browns, has set one world's record anyway. He is the only ballplayer who ever took the degree of doctor of medicine after participating in a world's series. Lavan belonged to the Browns last year but was traded to Connie Mack with the agreement that he should be returned to the Browns this season. So Johnny drew $3,000 for being on the Athletics' pay roll, though he did no playing against the Giants in the championship contests. Then he returned to the University of Michigan and got his diploma as a doctor. Lavan has always been a good fielder, but until recently he was a batter with a nifty average of about .085. Then he was injured when an opposing player's spikes cut his hand and took an enforced layoff. During this time he practised batting and since he has been back in the game he has bene swatting the ball at a .350 clip. He is 24 years old and can play the piano with skill. When he gets through shortstopping he expects to become a regular sawbones.

THE ART OF ADVERTISING

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Mr. Broadrib, the proprietor of Broadrib's cleaning powder, gave me a territory to sell it in, sold me a stock on credit, and I located in a small town called Mercerville, in the center of my field of operations. I advertised largely in the country newspapers and canvassed in a buggy, carrying my package of the cleaner on the floor behind the seat. My field of operations was unfortunate, inasmuch as it was already occupied by a cleaner called the Excelsior dirt remover. I couldn't discover that there was any office for the agency of the article in my district. Indeed, the advertisement read that by addressing M. E. Tuttle, box 24, Hammerton postoffice, the remover would be sent for trial.

I found myself up against the Excelsior dirt remover continually. Wherever I called to sell Broadrib's cleaning powder I found that they had just received a package of the Excelsior remover for trial, and since the article was satisfactory there was no chance in that family for mine. I concluded to kill competition by means of the newspapers, not by attacking the remover, but by calling attention to my own goods by ingenious advertisements.

My first ad. I was well pleased with. It stated that a woman had put a number of soiled clothes to soak on Saturday night and on Monday morning had found them laundered. She was at a loss to understand how this had come about till she noticed that a tear in the paper inclosing Broadrib's cleaning powder on a shelf above the clothes had let out some of the contents, which had fallen in the washtub.

Every one who met me after seeing my ad. laughed heartily, and I noticed at once an increase of sales. But I soon saw that the Excelsior agent had resolved to fight me on my own ground. The Union County Clarion appeared with this ad.:

> The contract to remove the dirt for the foundation of the new schoolhouse has been awarded to the Excelsior dirt remover.

Being in for it, I sat down to think of a new way of overtopping the Excelsior folks with the following result:

> A farmer, having bought a package of Broadrib's cleaning powder at Brewerville, driving home got stuck in a mudhole. Throwing some of the powder under the wheels of his wagon, the soil was removed down to smooth bedrock, and the wagon wheels shone spick and span in the sun.

How long this war of ads. would have lasted had not my opponent become personal I don't know. The next ad. that appeared was as follows:

> The agent of Broadrib's cleaning powder washed his face yesterday, dropping a little of the powder in the water. The basin soon became filled with dirt. It was found that some of the water charged with this cleaning powder had passed through the ears and nostrils and washed out his brain.

Fearing that the campaign would degenerate into mud slinging, I resolved to find the Excelsior agent and gain his consent to a division of the territory. I addressed a note, signed with a fictitious name, to M. E. Tuttle, box 24, Hammerton postoffice, stating that I would like to buy a couple of dozen packages of the Excelsior remover and would call at his office for the purpose if an address were given. This brought the street and number, and I called.

I found a little cottage on a side street. Upon asking for the agent of the remover a young woman about twenty years of age entered the room and asked what she could do for me. I asked her if she was the agent, and she said she was. I told her that I was the person who wished to buy a couple of dozen packages of her Excelsior remover, but feared when I told her why I wanted it she would refuse to sell. She asked what I wanted it for, and I told her that I should use it to remove from that territory the agent of the Excelsior article, as she was interfering seriously with the sale of Broadrib's cleansing powder, which I was handling.

There was a slight quirking up of the corners of her pretty mouth as she replied that it would require a thousand packages to remove the agent, but if I cared to buy so many she would sell them to me at the wholesale price and with all the discounts she had obtained from the owners. I asked her if the thousand packages were her entire stock and if she would guarantee not to buy any more; also if there would be enough to remove the agent to my office as clerk and advertisement writer.

"Not if you propose to store the Broadrib cleaning powder and the Excelsior remover in the same building," she replied.

"Why not?"

"Together they would eradicate the ground under the building and it would collapse."

When we spoke seriously I learned that she was trying to support an invalid mother by selling the remover, and I took myself off to another field, leaving the one about Mercerville to her. But I paid her $15 a week to write ads. for me and made a fortune out of them.

I didn't feel like keeping all the profit to myself when the girl had produced it by her ingenuity in writing ads. So I offered to divide it with her. She refused to take it as a gift, whereupon I prevailed upon her to do so as my wife.

Aroused Her Curiosity After All.

"Don't want any," said a housekeeper from her second story window to a street vendor whose covered wagon was standing a few steps away and who had just pulled the bell.

"Don't want any what?" gruffly asked the vendor, who hadn't had even a chance to tell what his wares were.

"What have you got?" asked the housekeeper, whose curiosity was getting the better of her annoyance.

"Oh, never mind. You don't want any. Git up, Bob!"

"Now, I wonder what that exasperating man is selling, anyhow!" she exclaimed as the wagon disappeared around the corner.

Vengeance.

No doubt you have heard a woman tell of the horrible things she would do if a man should strike her. We have often wondered what terrible things a woman would do under such circumstances and to-day insisted upon an angry woman telling. After thinking awhile she said, "I'd hate him all the rest of my life."

How Coal Is Wasted.

A locomotive equipped with a three inch pop safety valve on boiler with 200 pounds steam pressure will waste 146.7 pounds of steam and about twenty pounds of coal every minute during which it is blowing off. This means that from 7,000 to 20,000 pounds of coal are often wasted each month by a single locomotive.

THEATRICAL

Wonderful in its sea pictures, beautiful in its photography, lively in its action and logical in its story, "Neptune's Daughter" with Annette Kellerman, a celebrated swimmer, as its star, delighted a large audience at the Grand Opera House last night. A more novel film has never been seen here. The picture in seven parts, gives wide scope to the display of Miss Kellerman's skill as a swimmer, and her swimming and diving feats would alone make the picture a most noteworthy one. The sea pictures which form a large part of the action are beautiful indeed and the photographer has done wonderful work. Nothing in the film line more interesting than "Neptune's Daughter" has been shown here in a long time and the public should not lose the opportunity at seeing it during the balance of its stay at the Grand.

World famous diver and natatorial actress, in "Neptune's Daughter," at the Grand Opera House.

WOMEN'S ART ASSN.

The annual meeting of the Women's Art association was held in the Studio on Monday evening, with a fair attendance of members. The president, Mrs. Vincent Eastwood, occupied the chair.

The following officers were elected :

Hon. President—Mrs. Dignam, Toronto.
President—Mrs. Vincent Eastwood.
First Vice-President—Mrs. Aylmer.
Second Vice-President — Mrs. Rush.
Third Vice-President—Miss Bennet.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Sherwood.
Rec. Sec.—Mrs. Fred Roy.
Treasurer—Miss Jean Neill.
Archivist—Miss Maude Rush.
Hon. Members' Representatives—Mrs. Fessenden, Mrs. Duncan Walker, Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, Miss Flora Collins, Miss Helen Denison.

The appointment of a librarian was left to a later date.

The conveners of the various committees were as follows :

Lecture Committee—Miss Morrow.
Exhibition Committee—Miss Hatton.
Social Committee—Mrs. Aylmer.
Reading Circle—Mrs. Mowat.
Musical Committee—Mrs. Gliddon.
Home Industries—Mrs. Palmer.
Medals for the Schools—Mrs. Rush.

The meeting was opened with the singing of the National Anthem.

A vote of thanks was passed unanimously to the press of the city for their kind courtesy to the association in connection with all their undertakings.

Also to Mr. F. M. Delafosse, for his unfailing and helpful interest through the past year.

The treasurer's report showed a satisfactory balance on hand for the work of the coming year.

The secretary's report was read, as follows :

The Peterborough branch of the Women's Art association can feel that interest in it is steadily growing. This is evinced by the increased membership and the large attendance at the lectures given under its auspices.

The executive committee met eight times. The meetings were well attnded and much interest was displayed by those present.

For delightful entertainments in the form of twilight musicales, we must again thank Mr. and Mrs. Glidden, of the Conservatory.

Mrs. Rollins, who has studied Browning until passages which are obscure to most people have become clear to her, kindly gave us a charming evening with the poet.

Lovers of art in Peterborough had the pleasure of hearing Mr. J. W. Beatty, R.C.A., lecture on "The Progress of Art in Canada." From this lecture we learned much that is unfamiliar to the general public, viz., the hardships with which the early artists struggled and the difficulties they encountered commercially, and these difficulties, he proved to us, have to-day to be contended with to a certain extent.

On April 2 His Honor Judge Huycke favored us with a lectureentitled "An Old Poem Made New." It was indeed made new, inasmuch as we learned to love and understand Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation of "The Rubaiyat" more than before. His honor's lecture was a veritable treat.

Greater interest than usual was shown by the children who competed for the medals offered by us. Six medals and 63 honorable mention cards were awarded, and the children's drawings were unusually good. These were on exhibition in our Studio during two afternoons, and many parents and friends of the children viewed them.

Miss Taylor, a pupil of Mr. J. W. Beatty, R.C.A., exhibited a collection of her drawing in the W.A.A. Studio.

We presented to one of the public schools a copy of a "Dutch Interior," by Israel.

Our Art Study club, under the leadership of Mrs. Mowat, continues to be very interesting. The meetings of last winter were devoted to the "Schools of Art Subsequent to the Renaissance."

Members of the executive acted as judges of the pictures shown at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, at which we offered, as we have done in past years, a special prize of $5.

In response to a request of our branch of the W.A.A., a committee on fine and applied arts has been formed in connection with the local branch of the National Council of Women. Our president is convener of that committee.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CHARLOTTE A. SHERWOOD,
Cor. Sec. W.A.A.

LOCAL FACTORY BUSY

The Bonner Worth Co. is one of the firms in this city which the war has helped to keep busy. Though it does not affect them directly, they receive the benefits indirectly, supplying the yarn for the weavers and spinners of the larger mills. At present they are in a very flourishing condition and have been for some time. This is one of the firms at present in this city who have all they can do.

MILITARY UNIFORMS

In many houses in the city there are uniforms, belts, some rifles, side arms, and other equipment belonging to the 57th Regiment. These in some cases have been left by soldiers now out of the city. The equipment is urgently needed and will be called for if a card is sent to Capt. A. G. Carruthers, 138 Hunter St.

Persons unlawfully having these articles in their possession are liable to a fine of $20.

THE SEA OF LOT

It is in the southeastern part of Palestine where the famous Dead sea lies. In the Old Testament it was known as the Sea of the Plain or Salt sea, but it is known today by the Arabs as the Sea of Lot. Its surface, which is lower than any other body of water, is 1,202 feet below the level of the Mediterranean.

The Dead sea is fed by the river Jordan from the north, but has no outlet, depending entirely upon evaporation. A portion of the sea is surrounded by cliffs which are destitute of vegetation. On the south shore is the ridge of rock salt, seven miles long and 300 feet high, known as the ridge of Sodom. Lava beds, sulphur and volcanic slag prove the existence of volcanic agencies at some period. The lake still casts up pieces of asphalt when the environs of the Dead sea are visited by earthquake.

Its proportion of saline matter is so great that it contains more than eight times as much as the ocean, and, while it is exceedingly fetid, yet its water is as blue as that of the Mediterranean, and to the bather it is very refreshing, and owing to its specific gravity it is difficult to sink. Nothing living exists within the waters of the Dead sea.—Buffalo Express.

Indecisive Battles, German Attack Has Failed

LITTLE CHANGE IN BATTLE FRONT---REPULSE OF THE GERMANS MAY MEAN ANOTHER ADVANCE OF ALLIES

SHELLING ANTWERP PROBABLE OBJECT TO CARRY WAR INTO ENGLAND

ITALY HAS ARMY OF OVER A MILLION MEN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 30.—The correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle with the Belgians, writing under yesterday's date, estimates that nearly 150,000 troops are engaged in a desperate battle along the line extending from Termonde to Aerschot. This battle, the correspondent says, appears to be the last effort on both sides. Belgian resistance in the face of the superior German artillery is magnificent. As regards Antwerp, it is not easy to make any definite statement until the result of to-day's (Tuesday's) battle is known. In any case the town is well provisioned and defended. The German losses in the last few days must have been enormous, certainly many thousands have fallen.

Paris, Sept. 30.—The official statement says: "First, on our left wing, north of the Somme, the action continues to develop rapidly between the Oise and the Aisne. The enemy has delivered a vigorous attack on Tracy Le Mont, northeast of the forest of Aigue. They were repulsed with heavy losses.

"Second, on our centre there is relative calm along the entire front, which extends from Rheims to the Meuse. Between the Argonne and the Meuse we have made slight progress. In the Woevre district there have been severe battles. Our troops have advanced at several points, notably to the east of St. Mihiel. On our right wing in Lorraine and the Vosges there has been no change. In Galicia efforts at sorties made by the Austrian garrison at Przemysl have failed. The Austrian armies continue to retreat in disorder, losing numerous prisoners, artillery and war material."

Berlin, Sept. 30.—A report given out at army headquarters to-day says: "There has been general fighting on our right wing in France, but nothing decisive. The centre is quiet. The French advances in the vicinity of Verdun and Toul have been renewed."

London, Sept. 30.—A despatch to the Star from Petrograd says: "Among some remarkable war trophies arriving at St. Molensk is the entire stock of Emperor William's famous pedigree cattle and stud horses, captured by the Russians from the Emperor's estate at Kominten, in East Prussia. They were taken to Moscow and presented to the Russian Agricultural Institute for distribution to agricultural breeding associations."

JAP FLEET HAS LANDED A FORCE.

Tokio, Sept. 30.—It is officially announced that a portion of the Japanese fleet has landed a force which has occupied Lao Che harbor, in the neighborhood of Tsing Tau. They took four field guns abandoned by the Germans.

London, Sept. 30.—A despatch to Reuter from Berlin says the headquarters of the German general staff made the following official announcement last night: "On our right wing in France indecisive battles have occurred. Between the Oise and the Meuse it is generally quiet. The army operating against the forts on the Meuse was repulsed.

"The French have made new assaults along the line from Verdun to Toul. Our siege artillery has opened fire on the forts of Antwerp. The assault of Belgian forces against the attacking line has been repulsed.

"In the eastern theatre of war Russian assaults on government of Suwalki failed."

ALLIES PROGRESSING NORTH OF SOMME.

Paris, Sept. 30.—According to the official bulletin given out in Paris this afternoon, the turning movement of the allies north of the Somme is developing rapidly. German attack on Tracy Le Mont has been repulsed with heavy losses.

ITALY'S ARMY WILL NUMBER OVER A MILLION.

London, Sept. 30.—The Daily Mail's Venice correspondent says Italy will have, early in October, an army of 1,310,000 men in her own territory, divided into 30 army corps. The correspondent also says Austrian troops are still throwing up defence works along the frontier.

London, Sept. 30.—An Amsterdam despatch to the Central News says fugitives from Rhent report Belgian forces marching on Brussels are in contact with the Germans.

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT SET UP IN EASTERN GALICIA.

Petrograd, Sept 30.—Despatches from Lemberg state that all prominent Austrian provincial and civic officials, judges and ecclesiastical dignitaries attended the establishment of Russian civil government over Eastern Galicia, when Count Bobrinsky was installed as governor-general. Mayor Rutovsky made a speech of a most cordial character.

London, Sept. 30.—A Reuter despatch from Amsterdam says a message from Antwerp to the Telegraph says: "From various points the garrison made sorties and repulsed the Germans with heavy losses. The bombardment of the forts St. Catherine and Woelhen by the Germans continues. A single attack has been delivered by the Germans on forts Liezele and Breedonk."

GOVERNMENT DOES NOT CHARGE FOR INSPECTION

Many farmers seem to be still undecided as to whether the government or the government inspectors are charging them fees for inspection of hogs. It might be as well, once and for all, for the farmers and others to understand that the government and the government inspectors are not charging one cent to the farmer or anybody else for inspection or for any other similar purpose. The government pays its inspectors salaries and that is all they get.

ORATORIO ON OCT. 20

Proceeds Will go to Patriotic Fund

The Peterborough Choral society held the third rehearsal of the famous war oratorio, "Judas Maccabaeus," in the Collegiate Institute last night, in combination with the Conservatory orchestra. Mr. J. J. Turner has kindly given the use of the Grand opera house entirely free for the production on October 20, and the seats will be only 25 cents, booked in the usual way. The entire proceeds will go to the Patriotic Fund.

The committee earnestly hope that this date will be kept in mind, so that nothing comes on at the same time to affect the attendance, which should surely be large, in view of the efforts being put forward by these singers to produce this splendid work in so good a cause.

SEVERAL CASES OF DIPHTHERIA

There are several cases of diphtheria in the southern section of the city and in that part of North Monaghan lying south of the Exhibition grounds. It was rumored to-day that as several cases had developed among the children of the School of the Sacred Heart, that institution might be closed. The Review interviewed Dr. McPherson, M.H.O., and was informed that he intends to make an inspection of the pupils today. Any steps to be taken will be governed by the result of the inspection.

SENT LAST LETTER HOME FROM PETERBORO

Chief of Police Thompson has received a letter from Mr. F. Foster, of 62 William Street, Hamilton, in which he is enquiring as to the whereabouts of Miss Ada Peacock, between twenty and thirty years of age, who last wrote home to her mother in Lancashire, England, from Peterborough. Chief Thompson will be glad if anyone who knows of the whereabouts of the young woman will communicate with him.

SUDDEN ATTACK OF APPENDICITIS

Stanley Bishop, the 12 year old son of H. M. Bishop, 560 Homewood Ave., was taken to Nicholls Hospital on Tuesday evening in Comstock's ambulance, suffering from an acute attack of appendicitis, and was immediately operated on, the doctors in attendance being Neal, Frederick and Eastwood. No warning of the seriousness of his condition was given, he having no pain until the sudden attack seized him.

KING CHARLES SUMMONS HIS CABINET

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 30.—The Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. says King Charles of Roumania has summoned his cabinet in a special session to-morrow to decide Roumania's attitude toward the war.

REFUSED THEIR OWN BONDS

Germans Threw Burgomaster Into Jail for Offering Them

OSTEND, Sept. 30.—Burgomaster Max of Brussels continues to withstand the force of German tyrannny single-handed. After repeated attempts to collect at least a part of the levy made on the city, the Germans issued a final warning that it must be paid at a certain time. When the hour arrived Burgomaster Max appeared with a considerable number of German bonds, which he insisted represented cash. The militant authorities refused to accept the paper and he was thrown into prison, being released when the municipality finally gave up $6,000,000 to their heavy-handed conquerors.

GERMAN PRINCE LOOTS CHATEAU

Packed up Art Objects and Took Them Away

PARIS, Sept. 30. — Crown Prince Frederick William, during the first days of the battle of the Marne, had his headquarters at the chateau of the Baroness de Bays, near Champeaubert, Marne, famous for its collections of art objects. The Baroness de Bays writes, says The Paris Temps, thus:

The crown prince plundered the whole place. He stole medals, old arms, rare and precious vases, tapestries, icons, cups and gold souvenirs most dear to my family. He caused to be packed choice pictures and pieces of furniture, but some of these cases were left in the hasty flight of the Germans."

The baroness affirms, according to The Temps, that the German crown prince stamped with his heel upon the portraits of the Russian Emperor and Empress in the chapel of the chateau.

Carnegie Steel Co. has received an order from the government at Queensland, Australia, for 17,000 tons of steel, valued at $500,000. The order was given owing to the inability of European steel manufacturers to make shipments.

COL. HUGHES ISSUES PARTING MESSAGE TO CANADIANS

UTILITIES COMMISSION VERY BUSY

The busiest place in the city these days is the office of the utilities commission. The citizens of the city are coming in large numbers these days to register for the use of Hydro power. The staff has been kept busy making the registrations. The citizens have shown their loyalty and eagerness by coming forward and doing all they can on their part to help the commission. There will not be much change in the price for the first few months, but after that the rate will be lower, just as soon as the commission is in running order. They have not quite finished taking over their property from the Peterborough Light and Power Company, but that will be completed in a few days. The Peterborough Light and Power Co. and the utilities commission are working in conjunction, the Peterborough Light and Power men trimming the city's lamps. The Hydro have not their own linemen as yet.

CIVILIAN RIFLE ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED

A meeting was held at the Armouries last night for the purpose of organizing a civilian rifle association. The meeting was well attended by all classes of the community and the outlook is good for one of the best rifle associations in the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. E. L. Goodwill was elected captain and Mr. Frank Linton, secretary-treasurer, and they will be supported by a worthy executive.

After deciding to organize forty-five members signed the service roll call and took the oath of allegiance. Inspiring addresses were given, notably by Col. J. W. Miller, Major Rev. Canon Davidson, ex-Mayor Rush and others. The clergy are giving the matter their most enthusiastic support and all prominent citizens of the city are showing great interest in the movement, among those enrolling last night were some of the crack shots of the old Peterboro Rifle Association.

Rifles and ammunition are being requistioned and prior to work on the ranges the officers are making arrangements to have lectures and musketry instruction delivered to the members, and the tyros will have the opportunity of practicing with the miniature rounds in the Armouries.

Another meeting will be held in the near future before the lists are closed and it is expected that an extra large number will join. The membership fee is one dollar, the requisites of membership being: must be a British subject between the ages of eighteen to sixty years.

This association promises to be one of the largest and best in Canada and those conforming to the membership requisites would do well to join immediately.

Persons wishing to join before lists are closed should apply to Mr. E. L. Goodwill, Captain, or Mr. Frank Linton, Secretary-Treasurer.

Pamphlet Distributed to Members of Contingent Bids Them Farewell and Reminds Them of Their Work for the Empire --- Feat of Sending Force Has Been a Big One and is Credit to Dominion

QUEBEC, Sept. 30. — The following is in part the farewell message issued in pamphlet form by Col. Sam Hughes to the Canadian contingent:

"WHERE DUTY LEADS.

"Fellow Soldiers:—

"Six weeks ago, when the call came to arms, inspired by that love of freedom from tyranny dominant in the British race; actuated by the knowledge that, under British constitutional responsible government, you enjoyed the utmost of human liberty, you loyally and promptly responded in overwhelming numbers to that call.

"Twenty-two thousand men were accepted by the Motherland. To-day upwards of thirty-three thousand are en route to do duty on the historic fields of France, Belgium and Germany for the preservation of the British Empire and the rights and liberties of humanity.

"Lust of power; the subjugation of inoffensive and law-abiding neighbors; autocratic aggrandizement, have caused this war. In its cause the allies are guiltless.

"Belgium and Holland have long excited Prussian ambition for ownership. Austria has desired extension towards the Euxine and Aegean Seas —insane lust of conquest bringing ruin, rapine and misery in the train.

"It has been long predicted that when the Kiel Canal would be completed, Germany would begin the long-dreaded war. The Kiel Canal was completed early in July. War was begun before the end of that month. Germany was found absolutely ready and waiting. Great Britain, Belgium and France were unprepared. Three weeks elapsed before the regular armies of the latter countries could take the field.

"Soldiers! The world regards you as a marvel. Within six weeks you were at your homes, peaceful Canadian citizens. Since then your training camp has been secured; three and a half miles of rifle ranges—twice as long as any other in the world—were constructed; fences were removed; water of the purest quality was laid in miles of pipes; drainage was perfected; electric light was installed, crops were harvested; roads and bridges were built; ordnance and army service corps buildings were erected; railway sidings were laid down; woods were cleared; sanitation was perfected, so that illness was practically unknown, and thirty-three thousand men were assembled from points, some of them upwards of 4,000 miles apart. You have been perfected in rifle shooting, and to-day are as fine a body—officers and men —as ever faced a foe.

"That you will render a splendid account of yourselves for King and country is certain. You come of the right breed — English, Scotch, Irish, French, Welsh, German and American — your courage and steadfastness are proverbial. In South Africa, your presence was a guarantee of success. So in this most righteous struggle on the part of Britain. When side by side with soldiers from the Motherland stand the free men from the dominions beyond the seas; when Australians, New Zealanders, South Africans, Hindus, Newfoundlanders tread the soil of Europe then will the Prussian autocracy realise the gigantic power of liberty. And amid it all you will not forget that you war not on the innocent and lovely people of Germany. Your aim is the overthrow of tyranny and aggrandizement.

"Every man among you is a free will volunteer. No one has been invited. No more typical army of free men ever marched to meet an enemy.

"That you will bear yourselves, individually and collectively wherever duty may call you, as to win the respect of the foe in the field; the admiration and regard of the good citizens of all lands in which your lot may be cast; and the love and regard of those near and dear at home, is the conviction of all Canadians.

"May success ever attend you and when you return rest assured a crowning triumph will await you.

"Sam Hughes, Colonel,
"Minister of Militia and Defence for Canada."

PARIS RECEIVES REPORTS OF SHATTERING OF GERMAN WING

British Press Bureau Refuses to Confirm or Deny Advices That Allies Are in Full Pursuit of Germany's Western Army—Von Kluk Offered to Surrender if Allowed to Take Troops Back to Germany

LONDON, Sept. 30.—A Paris despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says:

"It is stated here to-night (Tuesday) that the German right has been entirely broken and is now being pursued by the allies. All the automobiles in northern France have been requisitioned for the purpose of pursuit.

"Armored motor cars with mitrailleuses are also being used to pursue the retreating enemy.

"The official communication issued at three o'clock demonstrates unmistakably that the Germans have been surrounded in the Somme Department, the French front extending further east.

"It is officially stated that Peronne has been recaptured."

The foregoing message has been referred to the British official press bureau which, while not objecting to its publication, takes no responsibility for its correctness.

The report is current that Gen. von Kluk, commanding the German right, opened a peace parley on Sept. 26 with Gen. Joffre, offering to surrender if his men were allowed to retire to Germany and guaranteeing that they would not again take part in the war. According to the story, Gen. Joffre flatly refused to consider such terms and directed that the attack continue. It is said the army of von Kluk is slowly disintegrating under the terrific assaults of the last few days and that a general backward movement has already set in. Large quantities of ammunition and many guns are being abandoned, according to the rumor.

The tighter censorship is felt in the absence of news from the seat of war where the greatest events are taking place. New estimates of German casualties place the German losses at 300,000 and those of the allies at 100,000.

An official statement made by the press bureau last night confirms previous statements that the German position on the Aisne was chosen and prepared long before the battle began.

Late reports reaching Paris state that the German right wing is now retreating from its fortified positions between the Aisne and the Somme rivers.

It is also reported that the allied armies have succeeded in cutting the German line of communication, and that part of Gen. von Kluk's army is in grave danger.

BOURASSA AND THE CANADIAN CLUB.

AN ITEM of some interest, the other day, was that concerning the movement to remove Henri Bourassa, the editor of Le Devoir, from membership in the Canadian Club of Montreal. The motion, moved by Mr. Lansing Lewis, was as follows :

> 'Resolved: That this club regrets to feel that the spirit which prompted it to extend the honour of its membership to Henri Bourassa, one of the most eloquent of our French-Canadian confreres, does not seem to have been either understood or appreciated by him, and the club now feels, in justice to those of our French and English fellow members who believe in a united Canada, and who are loyally giving their time, their money and their lives in the service of their King and country, that the treasurer should return Mr. Bourassa his fees, expressing the hope that he will live long enough to realize what it means to be a true patriotic and an honourable citizen."

The motion was worded diplomatically and was greeted with general applause. Had it not been for Mr. A. R. McMaster's objection that it should not be passed until Mr. Bourassa had been given an opportunity to defend himself, and should be ruled out of order, it is certain the motion would have carried. The motion was left to the Executive, and we think the Canadian Club showed its wisdom in not passing the motion. Mr. Bourassa should be given a decent opportunity to defend himself or to resign. Had he been expelled, the action would have savored too much of the criminal. The censure of his position is strong as it is.

But this feeling of disapproval extends farther than the circle of the Canadian Club. The news columns of Montreal papers contained concurrently with the report of the Canadian Club's action, an account of the burning of stacks of copies of Le Devoir and other papers that were stored in the top of Mr. Bourassa's garage, which caught fire from another garage. The fire is supposed to have been due to an incendiary, outraged by Mr. Bourassa's anti-Imperialistic attitude. Henri Bourassa is thus getting hit from all sides, and he should understand that the people of this country strongly disapprove of his attitude.

DENOUNCERS OF WAR.

MUCH has been written and much is being written in denunciation of war, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. If the egotism, uncharitableness, injustice and foolishness were winnowed out of it very little of it would remain. Why should any man set himself up as a lecturer of the people of this country for implied propensity to war? Why should he assume that they have a proneness to go into battle and shed blood? Why should he imagine himself to be of higher civilization or better sense than the great majority of his fellow-citizens? There must be something wrong with the mind of a man who regards horror of war as a feeling peculiar to himself and to a few other mahatmas who by meditation have brought themselves out of a natural state of ferocity. Human nature is indeed froward, and there are many evils for the moralist to cry out against, but he can safely take it for granted that Canadians are high enough in the scale of development to need no educating as to the repulsiveness of war. The man to whose understanding and feelings war is odious, ought not to have the vanity to think himself therefore more humane or enlightened than his neighbors.

Very cheap indeed is the notoriety to be gained by solemnly forbidding, in the name of mankind, the fostering of the war spirit. No normally-constituted man needs to be reproved for harboring war thoughts, or what in the cant of the pacificists is called "the lust of war." To pose as one with a mission for converting the people from war waywardness is to seek to impose. The people are in no more need of schooling in that particular than they are in the matter of avoiding fire.

Those who keep up their incantations against an imaginary war spirit in a peaceful people show that they are really driving at defence arrangements. These they denounce as preparations for war. If they were to come out against disease, a thing to which they would also find everybody opposed, they would by the same logic have to condemn the science and practice of medicine. The training of physicians and the carrying on of research to discover malignant germs and their anti-toxin, could as well be called the keeping up of the scourge of disease, as the providing of defence could be called the keeping up of the scourge of war. If a ruffian uses his bludgeon on an inoffensive citizen, if an anarchist throws a bomb into a churchful of worshipping men, women and children, is the crime to be ignored and the criminal to go unmolested? If not, then what of the policeman who, after the exercise of much necessary force, the taking of great personal risk, and the suffering of serious bodily injury, puts the criminal behind the bars? Is the policeman, too, to be considered a criminal? No more atrocious wrong could be done to worthy men than the pacificist does to our defenders by bracketing them with soldiers using weapons against a free and offenceless people in violation of plighted faith, and to put under the same sweeping ban of "war" the fighting on both sides.

Had there not been long and careful preparation for defence on the part of Belgium, France and Britain, these nations would now have been under the iron heel of Germany. The pacificists did their utmost to persuade Britain to leave herself naked to the weapons of savage and envious Germany. But they were not permitted to have their way. If Sir Edward Grey and Mr. Winston Churchill had not labored as hard to prepare Britain for defence as they labored to maintain the peace, freedom in Europe might to-day be at an end.

RESISTING POWER OF WATER.

IN the July American magazine a contributor, writing an article describing the development of a new type of fast motor boat, has given a most interesting description of the resisting power of water. He says that a solid stream of water shot out of a hose at tremendous velocity is just as powerful as a rod of iron. An extract from the article, giving an idea of the hardness and resisting power of water, follows :

"Here is a fact which is probably novel to the average man who has not spent much of his life thinking about motor speed boats. This is what we may call the hardness of the water, when a boat is running at speed. Water at 50 miles an hour is not the limpid liquid we are accustomed to bathe in. If you put your arm overboard from a hydroplane running at 50 miles an hour, and strike a wave crest, the probability is that you will break your arm or wrist, because at that speed the water has not time to give, not time even to change shape, and striking it is like striking so much metal.

"In the great hydraulic mining nozzles, where a stream of water under enormous head is used to wash down hillsides, a swordsman in attempting to cut into one of these streams will shatter the sword without being able to penetrate the water. The stream is like a bar of iron. The fact that water at relative speed is so hard—or that its inertia is so great, to be a little more accurate—is the reason why a skipping stone travels over the surface, and is the reason why a hydroplane boat slides over the surface instead of plowing its way through.

"The picture we must have in our minds, then, of a speed boat is that she is travelling, not in water, as we ordinarily understand it, but over the surface of a semi-solid, very much as a sled travels over snow. The hardness of water at 50 miles an hour we might compare with the hardness of cheese—at rest."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE FACT that Canada is actually in a state of war is vividly impressed by Newton MacTavish in an article entitled "War Time in Canada," which appears in the October issue of the Canadian Magaine. Mr. MacTavish reviews what has taken place in Canada as a result of the war, bringing together into compact, comprehensible form all the various activities of the Government ; in brief, he visualizes the operation of the Canadian governmental machinery which the war has set in motion. From the time of the summoning of the Governor-General and the Prime Minister to Ottawa to the call for further volunteers to go to the front, a vast amount of preparation and precaution is here outlined.

A Hundred Years Ago.

(Toronto Star.)

When Wellington and Blucher entered Paris, the Prussians wanted to plunder the city. "If they begin it," said Wellington, "the British soldiers will be turned upon them." Blucher was determined to blow up the Pont de Jena, and had actually mined it for the purpose, but Wellington promptly placed a British sentry there, and warned Blucher not to blow up that representative of the British army. And Blucher did not do it.

Dangerous Greed.

(Toronto Telegram.)

To the timorous who are hoarding unwonted quantities of provisions, it may be well to point out that if ever conditions should arise to justify their hoardings, they may find themselves in a position where there may be real occasion for fear. However law-abiding a community is, there may come a time which will prove that an empty stomach has no conscience.

Studying the Market.

(Washington Star.)

"Of course," said young Mrs. Torkins, reproachfully, "it's easy for a man to adopt an attitude of patient superiority toward the food. A man doesn't have to realize the increase in prices as a woman does?"

"What makes you think that?"

"I have been making an investigation. A ten-cent cigar doesn't cost a bit more than it used to."

Willie's Confession.

(Buffalo Express.)

When Emperor William's message to the President says that Louvain was destroyed, he confesses the case. It matters not how much he professes that his heart bleeds at the "necessity." Americans cannot admit the correctness of such reprisals without setting aside a fundamental principle of Americanism.

It's Not Pay They're After.

(Montreal Mail.)

When considering the splendid manner in which the men of Great Britain are enlisting, one should not forget that the pay of these patriots is smaller and all advantages are less than those of colonial volunteers.

Backsliding.

(Montreal News.)

In deciding to go on with the building of new battleships, President Wilson of the United States has deeply offended his friend and advisor, Rev. Dr. Macdonald, of the Toronto Globe, who has abolished all future wars.

The German Sausage.

(London Advertiser.)

A chain of sausage is no stronger than its weakest link.

FALL RAIN

By Walt Mason

The torrent pours down from the sky, and moistens the earth, hard and dry ; and the farmer cavorts in his barnyard and snorts, "Why didn't it come in July? Ah, then we were praying for rain, for baked was the meadow and plain ; and the corn and the oats lost their several goats, the husbandman suffered a pain. Then Pluvius sent not a drop, to rescue the perishing crop ; but now, when too late, it comes by the crate, and falls on the cornfield kerflop." And that is the species of thanks that Pluvius gets from the cranks, when the faucet he wields and refreshes the fields with the moisture he keeps in his tanks. His pastures are glowing and fresh, the cattle are putting on flesh; but the farmer is sore and he raises his roar, and sorrows his spirit enmesh. The soil is in shape for the wheat ; the outlook is cheerful and sweet ; but the husbandman weeps as he stables his sheeps, and kicks up a fuss and repeat. Oh, why should we grumble and whine, and shed sundry firkins of brine, over things that are dead? Let us all look ahead, for the weather is sure to be fine!

HUNGARY IS ABANDONED

Austrian Army Left Monarchy to Defend Itself

LONDON, Sept. 30.—From the latest events in Galicia and along the Carpathians the conclusion drawn is that the army has abandoned Hungary to its fate and has left the route to Budapest to be defended by the Hungarian national troops, says the Petrograd correspondent of The Daily Telegraph. The despatch continues:

"The Austrians continue to retreat before the persuing Russians and appear to have given up not only the defence of their country in general but also to have decided to abstain from further independent action. They are simply hurrying on to Cracow to join the right wing of the Germans and apparently intend to become a mere component part of the German army.

"Having passed the most difficult part of Uget Pass in the Carpathians, after dislodging the Honveds from three positions, the Russian troops have only some ten or fifteen miles to descend before reaching the Hungarian plateau, where there is not a single fortress or fortified position except such as may be hastily improvised in the form of earthworks by the Hungarian defenders."

"Christmas In Berlin."

ROME, Sept. 30.—(Via Paris.)—"Cheer up; we'll spend Christmas in Berlin," is the encouragement which Gen. Bennenkampf has offered to his men, according to a report received here from Russian headquarters.

The general proffered this word of cheer for the purpose of helping his officers and soldiers stand fast during the present discomforts and sufferings of war.

GERMAN SHIPS REFITTED.

Fleet in Kiel Canal Nearly Ready for Battle Say Visitors.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 30. — (Via London.) — Travelers arriving here from the Kiel Canal say that the Germans are busy placing new ordnance, which the Krupp Works has been experimenting with for the past two years, on the armored cruisers and dreadnoughts.

The canal is described as being crowded with warships, including the largest battleships. The arsenals are busy day and night, and long trains arrive continuously with immense guns for the ships.

The Germans are reported as declaring that the whole fleet will soon be ready to fight.

Making a Beach.

Weymouth owes the beginning of its popularity as a health and pleasure resort to an accident. In 1763 a west of England doctor whose name is now forgotten advised one of his patients—Ralph Allen, a prominent philanthropist of Bath—to "bathe his body in the open sea." By mere chance Allen selected Weymouth, and the first wooden bathing machine was built. Then crowds gathered to watch the "madman" enter the water. But the patient got better, told the Duke of Gloucester all about it, and—Weymouth was made.—London Tatler.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The farmers of Caradoc Township, Middlesex County, have decided to offer the Militia Department a gift of 30 horses suitable for war purposes.

The locomotive works at Kingston has received a big order from the British War Office, through Ottawa, for the supply of shrapnel shells for large guns.

Sir Charles Johnston was yesterday elected Lord Mayor of London for the term of one year, beginning Nov. 9, 1914. He succeeds Sir Thomas V. Bowater.

Official denial of the sinking of a French warship by the Austrian forts at Cattaro was made yesterday by the French Admiralty through the embassy at Washington.

Queen's University opened to-day and registration will fall short of last year mainly because of the war. Many science students have enrolled with the Canadian engineers.

King Victor Emmanuel, accompanied by Gen. Grandi, Italian Minister of War, assisted in the military manoeuvres held yesterday between Bracciano and Viterbo, Italy.

A vote to abolish the London, Ont., Board of Control, which has been in existence less than a year, will be taken next January. The majority of the aldermen are among those opposed to the present system.

Before Judge McDonald in the county judge's criminal court at Brockville, where he elected a speedy trial, Joseph Johnston pleaded guilty to five charges of burglary committed at Brockville, and was sentenced to five years in prison.

Clemenceau's Paper Suspended.

TOULOUSE, France, Sept. 30.—(Via Bordeaux.)—Ex-Premier Georges Clemenceau's newspaper, Homme Libre, which was transferred to this city from Paris, has been suspended for eight days by Gen. Bailloud.

The governor of Toulouse asked M. Clemenceau to take out several passages of an article in yesterday's issue which he considered too violently worded. M. Clemenceau flatly refused and the general confiscated the whole and ordered the suspension of the newspaper.

More Cholera.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—A despatch from Rome to the Exchange Telegraph says that a message from Budapest asserts that the Minister of the Interior has announced that 18 new cases of cholera were discovered in the city's military hospital Monday morning.

Chinese Destroy Bridge.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—What is feared may be the forerunner of trouble between China and Japan developed yesterday when Chinese troops blew up a railway bridge at Tayhubo, six miles from Weihsien on the Shantung Peninsula, where the Japanese forces are operating. It is said the action was taken because of a plan by the Japanese to seize all railway stations west of Weihsien.

The Japanese fleet yesterday bombarded Tsingtau for hours. Troops attacked Germans by land simultaneously and forced the defenders of the city to evacuate all their outer lines of defence. The casualties are said to be small.

Doesn't Hanker For Presidency.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Assurance from Gen. Villa that he will not be a candidate for President or vice-president of Mexico were forwarded to the administration here yesterday.

Gen. Carranza has signified his willingness not to become a candidate if Villa would give a similar promise and if all the military leaders of the revolution could also be eliminated as possibilities. None of the others have appeared as candidates.

Grain Soars In Austria.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—The rapid increase in grain prices is causing anxiety in official circles in Austria, according to despatches received here. Farmers are withholding their supplies, awaiting a further advance. Scarcely any grain is being offered.

Roumania Decides To-day.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 30—The Roumanian Cabinet will decide to-day whether it is to be war or peace for that kingdom. All eyes turn to the conference called by King Carl, who has been resolutely opposed to war. He is a member of the Hohenzollern family and his personal fortune is all in Germany.

The Bowes-St. House

How It Came by Its Repairs.

By LENORE E. CHANEY.

While Gilder bent eagerly over the quarterly report his agent sat back and watched him uneasily.

He was a big man—this agent—faultlessly dressed and bearing an air of ease and conscious well being very soothing to the senses. Faultless, too, was his manner toward his superiors—suave, deferent, but not too deferent.

Ah, that is a very great thing—to acquire a manner like that. If Gilder smiled, Burson radiated pleasure; if Gilder frowned, Burson breathed a deprecating regret, and yet he never roused the savage desire to kick that a more suppliant and cringing servant might have done.

For Burson respected himself, in a very modest and unobtrusive way, and thus begat respect in his betters. But for all that he often experienced troublesome days, and one glance at Mr. Gilder's lean face had conveyed clearly to Burson that this was going to be one of the most troublesome of them all.

"Ahem!" Gilder shut his spectacle case with a snap and glared at his agent. "I see profits far below normal again, sir. I notice in the Bowes street house alone the bill for plumbing is over $800 for the past year."

"I have been wanting to speak to you about the Bowes street place," began Burson, extracting a letter from the file at his elbow. "You see, Mr. Gilder, the Bowes street plumbing is in pretty bad condition; there's been quite a little agitation recently in some of the papers about an epidemic of typhoid down there, and this morning I got this letter from the head of the social settlement in the district."

"Lot of nonsense," was Gilder's only comment as he tossed the letter down half read.

"But you see they threaten a health board investigation."

"You ought to know as well as anybody, Burson, how little we have to fear from the board of health."

"Yes, I know they have been very kind."

"The point is what are you going to do to bring up this credit balance? At the present rate of decline another year or two may see the balance on the other side altogether," said Gilder.

Burson faced himself for a battle, though his manner was as suave, as gracious as ever.

"I am sorry to say, Mr. Gilder, that I can't see any way of stopping the leak unless you are prepared to spend a lump sum on new plumbing. In the Bowes street place alone a thousand dollars ought to be spent immediately. A great many of the tenements remain empty simply because they are not habitable, even for the sort of people who live in that section. We cannot reduce the rents without establishing a very bad precedent, and of course I could not put in any very extensive repairs without consulting you."

"Extensive repairs," ejaculated Gilder, now thoroughly aroused. "For heaven's sake, Burson, one would imagine you were letting on Fifth avenue instead of slum tenements! You are dealing with a class that has no business to expect luxuries. It's scum—plain scum, demanding new and up to date plumbing in its dens."

"Of course what you say is true," agreed Burson, "but times are changing everywhere, and I can assure you, sir, the people in the tenements now are not the sort we had there ten years ago. It grows increasingly difficult to deal with them, and in this Bowes street house especially we've had no end of trouble.

"One of my men was pitched down the steps only last week by a burly giant who declared he wouldn't pay his rent until the leak from the floor above was stopped. Of course we set him out, but it's had a very bad effect on the others, especially as the typhoid is very bad in the house, and the settlement workers have led them to believe it's entirely due to the pipes."

"More likely it's due to their own dirt and filth!" snapped Gilder, pacing wrathfully up and down. "But I look to you, Burson, to straighten this out. That's what I pay you for, and I expect you to do it."

"I have been doing my best. I intend to go down there myself this afternoon and look the house over. I am having a plumber meet me there to submit estimates."

At the word "estimates" a sudden gleam of suspicion lit in Gilder's eyes. "Estimates—graft! Aha!"

"I think I'll just go down with you, Burson, and we'll look it over together."

Burson's dismay was evident.

"Oh, Mr. Gilder, I'm sure you wouldn't like that! You've no idea how filthy and vile the streets and people are down there. It wouldn't do at all to go in your car, in the present state of things, and I'm sure you wouldn't relish the ride on the street cars."

This served, of course, to fix the idea only the more firmly in Mr. Gilder's mind. He would certainly go; of that Burson might be certain.

Once having made the resolution he forged calmly ahead, but before he had traversed half the distance from the street car to the entrance of the Bowes street house he had begun to realize some of the difficulties of which Burson had spoken. For one thing it was hot—the middle of September—and the smells were almost overpowering.

Hawkers with cans of lukewarm water, in which floated half cooked ears of green corn, others with slices of watermelon cut in the early morning and now covered with filth and flies, were everywhere in the dusty streets.

Added to these were the roar of the not distant elevated, the screaming of innumerable babies and the shrill whistles of gangs of street gamins, making a very inferno of dirt and confusion. Gilder was glad to turn into the comparative quiet of the Bowes street house.

Once inside, Burson took the lead and began at once the tour of inspection. The house had been designed for a far better class of tenant than now found a haven within its walls. It had originally two suits of apartments of five rooms each on either side of the narrow hall which bisected the house. But long ago these five rooms had been divided so that now they formed three suits each—two of two rooms and a single room.

The single rooms, dirty and dark as they were, found ready occupancy, for the rent was but half that of the two roomed suits. But, while nearly all of the single rooms were tenanted, many of the two room suits were empty. Gilder's reduced dividends were explained.

They were making the last rounds on the top floor when they heard a voice far below hailing Mr. Burson. The strength and assurance of it spoke eloquently of a full dinner pail.

"Ah, that must be Manders, the plumber!" exclaimed Burson, hastening toward the dark and rickety stairway. "Pardon me one moment, Mr. Gilder. I'll bring him right up."

Left to himself, Gilder started slowly toward the narrow window at the far end of the hall. Suddenly a door was flung open halfway down the hall, and the anxious face of one of the amateur nurses from the settlement peered out. At sight of Gilder her face cleared and she sprang forward.

"Oh, sir, I am so glad to see you! My patient is very sick—typhoid. I must have help. The doctor is somewhere in the building, probably with Casey's little girl on the first floor. Bring him as quick as you can." Then as she realized the blank look on Gilder's face anxiety again puckered her smooth brow.

"Oh, you don't think you can find him? What shall I do? I must—I know! You stay here—keep very quiet—he's delirious and won't notice the change. Don't excite him whatever you do!" and before Gilder could voice his protest she had pushed him through the door and sped down the hall.

Nauseated and highly indignant, Gilder looked about him.

The work of the volunteers from the settlement was apparent here, for the room was far cleaner than any Gilder had seen in the house. The patient lay on one of the settlement hospital cots, which with a deal table and one chair formed the only furniture in the room.

Gilder was a stranger to sickrooms, and a vagrant curiosity stirred him as his glance rested on the form of the sick man. In the dim light his features were barely distinguishable—his thin frame twitched restlessly under the light sheet.

Gilder half turned to go when suddenly the man sat bolt upright and stretched out his arms in the piteous appeal of childhood.

"Daddy—daddy!" he wailed. "Take me up, daddy; I am tired of my bed."

An onlooker might have seen a curious change in Mr. Gilder during this scene. At the first word from the sick man's lips he had stopped, one foot extended toward the door.

The trembling of his form grew until it was like a palsy, and the muscles of his throat moved convulsively up and down. Little beads of perspiration that were not caused by the heat stood out upon his forehead—a great pounding was in his ears. Then he turned.

"Danny—Danny!" the whisper sounded loud and rasping in the little room. "Danny—it can't be you, Danny, boy—it can't be you! It's been a long time—you've changed, Danny. But your voice—it's just the same—just the same!"

When the nurse and doctor hurried into the room a few moments later a strange sight met their eyes. Mr. Gilder, the great Mr. Gilder, whose wealth and eccentricities furnished so much copy for the Sunday supplements, was on his knees by the side of the tenement typhoid patient, and the face he turned toward them was tear stained and very old.

"Doctor—my son—he is very ill. My son—do you hear? The son of Baldwin Gilder. You must work hard—spare no expense—see how he clings to me—my poor Danny, come back to me like this! You think he will live—oh, I'm so glad—so glad!"

Some time later Burson, with his plumber in tow, appeared at the doorway, properly shocked at sight of his aristocratic patron in the midst of such surroundings, but his surprise gave place to wonder at Mr. Gilder's first words—the voice was so strangely gentle.

"Ah, Burson, I cannot go with you now. I have more important matters here. I have found my son—yes, my son—lost these ten years. I shall not leave him—he needs me. You will have to look after the plumbing yourself. And Burson—we will put new pipes throughout the house—whatever is necessary for comfort and health. Never mind the expense. You see, Burson—my son is a tenant—that is, he was a tenant—in the Bowes street house."

Discordant Thoughts.

In wandering through your mental pleasure grounds, whenever you come upon an ugly intruder of a thought which might bloom into some poisonous emotion, such as fear, envy, hate, worry, remorse, anger and the like, there is only one right way to treat it, writes Robert H. Schauffler in the Atlantic. Pull it up like a weed, drop it upon the rubbish heap as promptly as if it were a stinging nettle and let some harmonious thought grow in its place. There is no more reckless consumer of all kinds of exuberance than the discordant thought, and weeding it out saves such an astonishing amount of eau de vie wherewith to water the garden of joy that with it in hand every man may be his own Burbank.

His Alibi.

"If you are innocent," said a lawyer to his client, an old darky, who was charged with stealing a ham, "we ought to be able to prove an alibi."

"I don' specs we kin," the darky replied doubtfully.

"At what time was the ham stolen?"

"'Bout 'lebben erclock, day say."

"Well, where were you between 11 o'clock and midnight—in bed?"

"No, sah. I was hidin' de ham."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Well Done.

Mistress—Now, Sarah, I want you to be careful about breaking this vase. It cost a great deal of money, and I would hate to have it carelessly broken the first thing.

Sarah (three days later)—There's your vase, ma'am, and I couldn't have broke it more carefully if I'd tried for a month.

The Difference.

"Who led the army in that recent expedition?" "I did," replied General Tamale. "I thought the attack was led by General Concarne." "It was I who prevented great loss of life. He led them going forward, but I led them coming back."—Washington Star.

Judging by Appearances.

"Say, waiter," remarked the blond lady, "this lobster you've brought me is only half baked!"

"Well, madam," said the man, looking at her male companion, "I thought perhaps you preferred your lobsters that way."—Yonkers Statesman.

BUTTONS ON THE BACK.

Smart French Modistes Introducing This Novelty.

FRENCH MODEL IN TAFFETA.

Buttons on the back of gowns is an idiosyncrasy of certain French modistes who strive for startling effects. A gown of this sort recently worn in Paris is pictured here. It is of taffeta and has two rows of black buttons down the back of the bodice. This same gown illustrates another fancy of the hour—that of using ruchings of the material as trimming for a dress.

CLEANING COUNSEL.

When washing windows add a small quantity of bluing to the water. This makes the glass clearer.

Soak ink stains in sour milk, and should the stain remain rinse in a weak solution of chloride of lime.

Grease spots on marble may be removed by applying powdered magnesia.

Vinegar and wood ashes, mixed into a paste, are said to be excellent to polish the sheet of zinc under stoves. After polishing rub the zinc briskly with a woolen cloth.

To clean pans that have scorched food sticking to them sprinkle dry baking soda in them and let stand for awhile. They then can be quickly and readily cleaned.

When sponges are very dirty wash them in diluted tartaric acid, rinsing them afterward in water. It will make them very soft and white.

The Judge Could Use Him.

"That man is an idiot."

"Is he really?"

"Yes; he doesn't know a thing."

"Then he should qualify as a professional juror."

The New Figure.

Is the reign of the slender woman over? is the question forced upon Paris as the result of various fetes and race meets of the season.

On all sides in Paris are seen long tunic dresses with wide hip sashes and plain bodies, but toned down the front—a style that calls for a figure.

The demand has created the supply, nearly every one seeming to be a statuesque Juno.

How the transition was managed in many cases remains a secret known only to the feminine mind.

EXPERT LAUNDERING.

The expert laundress regards her irons with due respect. She has clean, hot irons, with paraffin at hand to keep them smooth, a steady fire and an ironing board covered with several thicknesses of cloth (the top cover is stretched smooth and creaseless), a small brush for sprinkling the clothes and a clean rack ready to hang the freshly ironed pieces upon.

Plain ironing is easily accomplished. It is the ironing of fancy and trimmed pieces wherein the experienced laundress shows her skill. Every bit of embroidery shows out in wonderful relief, every bit of needlework is made to show to best advantage, every bit of lace looks as fresh and dainty as when it first came from the shop.

She irons the embroidery wet and over several thicknesses of flannel, ironing it on the wrong side, so that the pattern stands out and the background is perfectly dry and smooth. Ironing them until they are perfectly dry is one of the secrets of successful work. Damask and linens are polished until they shine. They must be evenly sprinkled and damp before ironing.

Hems are ironed straight, and pieces are perfectly folded, so that initials and monograms appear.

Lace is not ironed at all, but manipulated between the fingers as daintily as if one were working with cobwebs, until it is dry.

The folding of every piece is an art that must be practiced to be perfected.

A Close Shave.

A little girl asked her mother if there were any men in heaven.

"Mamma," she said, "I never saw a picture of an angel with a beard or a mustache. Do men ever go to heaven?"

"Oh, yes," replied her mother; "men go to heaven, but it's always by a close shave."

Some Job.

Mrs. Crabshaw—Haven't I taught you to put things in their right places?

Willie—Yes, mamma, but you never taught me how I could find them afterward.—Judge.

Why They Want to Marry.

She—What in the world makes broken down widowers so anxious to marry again?

He—Possibly because they want to get repaired.

The Turn of the Tides

"There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to Fortune."

Many Canadian business men are eagerly looking forward to the "turn in the tide" in Canadian trade. Some of them are saying: "Just wait until this war is over—the country will prosper, business will boom, and we will then start advertising on a large scale to get our share of it."

There is a wiser type of man; the man who is acting instead of talking—laying his plans now, so as to have his "boat of business" headed upstream when the tide turns; advertising now, because he knows that to delay until the war is over is to add a hundred-fold to the opposition his plea for "a share of the big business" must encounter.

Public opinion is not to be won "over-night." When the Canadian public lets loose its cash, the manufacturers and merchants to whom the golden stream will most freely flow, are those who are busy now creating good will for themselves and their goods.

To take the tide of business at its flood requires, not days, not weeks, but months of preparation. Prepare now—advertise now—if you would later prosper.

GERMAN COUNT CURSES KAISER

That Germany is beginning to revolt against the Kaiser is indicated by a letter to the press, signed by Count Erik von Bergen and dated Iserlohn, Westphalia, August 27. He writes:—

"Will it not surprise you that I, a German born, and a lover of Central European civilization, am a dissenter from the mad enterprise commanded by Germany's present tyrant. This despotic man gives to himself the air of a militarist, but to him his soldiers are only so many tons of flesh, which he exposes to the enemies cannons to shield his own pathway to the victorious result he seeks. German soldiers do not know why they fight. They only know that they are fed on horse flesh.

"For a long time a mask covered the real character of this vampire from the view of his own people, and those in foreign countries.

"I remember this Kaiser in Naples, when, at the side of proud King Humbert, he glanced with his oblique eyes and greedy expression at the evolution of the Italian fleet. I well remember his manner on that occasion. This pseudo hero, while the King of Italy was keeping a sober, correct, and dignified composure, this killer of children and harmless citizens, this profanator of girls, was continually busy moving his sabre, fidgety in all directions, longing to possess that navy as his own.

Ruined His Country.

"However this war ends, the Kaiser has irreparably ruined his country. Our Germany will become the worst, poorest, most abject place in the world, thanks to the great Kaiser.

"The majority of well-thinking Germans, including myself, think that to save Germany and the other peoples from further ruin it is urgent to create a German Republic, with the annihilation of the hateful military party.

"The German people are good if well guided. Away with barbaric militarism, and Europe will be liberated from a horrible nest of reptiles. The exclusion and banishment of the Hohenzollerns by the Republic will purify the Germans' conscience, stained by the sorrows they were induced to inflict.

"I am leaving my country, horrified by the barbarism inflicted on humanity by this ruler. I will return to Germany when it is governed by a republic, but I will work for it."

NEUTRALITY IS NO GOOD

South Africa Has no Middle Course Says Botha

LONDON, Sept. 30. — A despatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Cape Town says that in the course of a speech addressed to five thousand people at the town of Bank, in the Transvaal, Gen. Louis Botha, Premier of South Africa, emphasized the necessity of loyalty to the British Empire.

Declaring that the policy of neutrality was absolute nonsense, he pointed out that if a German warship came to Durban and imposed a levy of five million pounds sterling on them it would help the people very little to say that they were neutral.

He justified the exportation of South Africans to support the Imperial Government. He said he had information regarding German ambitions concerning South Africa which would make the hair of his hearers stand on end. The fact of the matter was that the German Emperor wanted to go down to posterity as a second Napoleon. Incidentally he also wanted a place to send German's surplus population and South Africa appealed to him as a suitable place.

BELGIANS TERRIFY GERMAN SENTRIES

LONDON, Sept. 30. — A traveler from Antwerp says that a remarkable guerilla warfare is proceeding around Antwerp. Every night the Belgians make sorties and every morning brings its quota of casualties. The Belgians have terrorized the German outposts almost beyond endurance. There is scarcely a night when German sentries are not killed. German trains blown up, and havoc worked on their line of communications. As a result the Belgians have earned the name of "black rats" among their enemies.

FISHERIES PACT FAILS

Canada Now Free to Make Regulations

OTTAWA, Sept. 30. — Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, has notified the United States Government that the proposed treaty between Canada and the United States regarding the taking of food fish in boundary waters is now definitely dropped and Canada assumes freedom of action to make such regulations of her own as she deems necessary. The treaty was drawn up four years ago by Dr. David Starr Jordan for the United States and Prof. Prince for Canada. The Canadian Government agreed to it, but opposition was raised by certain interests in the United States and approval of the treaty by Congress was delayed from time to time. The present administration at Washington when it came to power seemed anxious to have the treaty adopted, but the opposition continued, and, the time limit set by Canada having been exceeded, the Dominion Government has decided to wait no longer.

NOW RAISING WELSH ARMY

CARDIFF, Wales, Sept. 30.—(Via London.) — At a big meeting here yesterday, over which the Earl of Plymouth presided, David Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, spoke of the Government's decision to raise a Welsh army of 50,000 men.

Mr. Lloyd George, who delivered a rousing speech, said that Glamorganshire already had recruited 24,000 and Monmouthshire 12,000 men. He frankly told his hearers that the recruits were not going out for a picnic, but for a stern enterprise, which would involve hardships, wounds and danger, but, he added, a vast majority would return and would have glorious memories to the end of their lives—memories that they would not barter for all the gold in the Bank of England.

He pointed out that under conscription Wales would be compelled to contribute 250,000 men, but that a volunteer army of 50,000 men would be just as good as a forced army five times that number.

SOME OFFICERS WITH CANADA'S OVER-SEA FORCE

It is significant that the Canadian contingent left the shores of Canada without an officer assuming the command of the entire army. Although small in numbers compared with the millions they are on their way to join, yet it is considerable of an army, and so we chose to designate it by that name. The fact that the contingent is divided among different transports will probably give the brigadiers the command in each case. However, the regulations cover a case like that as it is understood that the senior always takes command.

It is the purpose of this article to give the names of the brigade commanders, and the reason for their appointment. Lieut.-Col. R. E. W. Turner is a cavalry man and as such won distinction among his fellows in South Africa for his bravery and distinguished service. It was in the first C. M. R. that his service was rendered. His medal, which is adorned by no less than six clasps, shows the number of battles he fought in; his Victoria Cross and his Distinguished Service Order decorations all tell of his valiant service. He is, therefore, well qualified for his position. Born in 1871 he is still only forty-three years of age and in his prime.

Lieut.-Col. Birstall, who is to command the Artillery Brigade, received his first military knowledge in the Royal Military College at Kingston, was appointed a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Artillery in 1889, and has been promoted, step by step, until he has attained to the position of inspector of artillery and in command of the Citadel at Quebec. Before going to his present position at Quebec he commanded the Artillery Brigade of horse artillery composed of "A" and "B" batteries at Kingston. He saw service in South Africa in the infantry under General Otter, and has a medal with two clasps. Born in 1870, he, too, is in his prime.

Lieut.-Col. M. S. Mercer, who commands the first Brigade of Infantry, is well qualified for the position. Although it was not his good fortune to be selected for South Africa, and he has not seen active service, his long training in the Queen's Own, and the fact that he took the staff course and then was taken by the Minister to the autumn manoeuvres last year, shows what the powers that be think of him. His sterling good sense will carry him and his command out of any tight place they may be driven into. His is in prime, also.

Lieut.-Col. J. E. Cohoe, who is chosen to command one of the infantry brigades, is a lieut-colonel since 1904, when he was appointed to command the 44th regiment. On the completion of his term of command he became brigade major, and was promoted afterwards to the command of the brigade, which command he has held since 1913. He, like Col. Mercer, has had no active service experience, but his faithful service has, no doubt, caused his selection. He, too, is in the prime of life.

Lieut.-Col. A. W. Currie, who is chosen for one of the brigades, commands the 50th regiment of Victoria, B.C., has held the rank of lieut.-colonel since 1909, and took the staff course under the present Minister. He was the first commander of the 50th regiment, and was, no doubt, instrumental in its organization. He has had no active service, but must have had considerable experience before his present command. He is a comparatively young man.

INJURED AT UNION STATION

Toronto, Sept. 30.—While trying to jump on a moving train at the Union depot last night, Corporal Harry Porter, of Moosejaw, who was in charge of a number of rejected men from the west from Valcartier camp, fell to the ground and injured his back. He was taken to the General Hospital, where this morning he is reported to be doing well.

Porter had some trouble with two of the men who got off at the depot and had just managed to get them on the train when it started. He went to swing on and missed his footing, falling back on the platform.

Money won't buy happiness, but it makes the bill collector happier.

OBITUARY

LOUIS McDONNELL.

The death occurred this morning in Otonabee of Louis McDonnell, at the age of 65 years. He was a well-known resident, having lived in Otonabee all his life. Besides his sorrowing wife, he leaves to mourn his loss five daughters, Agnes, Annie, Mary, Theresa and Kathleen, at home, also four sons, Vincent, of Ottawa, and John, Michael and Daniel, at home.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, con. 5, lot 3, Otonabee, on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, to St. Joseph's church, Douro, thence to St. Joseph's cemetery for interment.

MRS. WILLIAM DUMMITT.

Mrs. William Dummitt, a well known resident of North Monaghan, passed away this morning after a short illness. The deceased, who was born in Bobcaygeon, had resided in this section of the country for a number of years and was highly esteemed by all. Her husband, four small children, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Graham, three brothers, George, William and Meldrum and sister, Mrs. Payne, of Bobcaygeon, also a sister, Mrs. Hunter, of this city, are left to mourn her death.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence to the Little Lake Cemetery.

PREMIER BORDEN AND SIR WILFRID LAURIER ENDORSE PATRIOTIC FUND

In Ottawa, on Monday evening, a meeting was held, under the auspices of the Ottawa branch of the Patriotic Fund association, and many of Canada's most prominent men favored it with their attendance. From the Citizen's report of the speeches we publish the following:

PREMIER BORDEN.

"Throughout Canada a splendid and generous response is being made to that appeal, and we must see to it that the capital of the Dominion is well to the fore in the honor list. No one can foresee the duration of the tremendous struggle in which our Empire is now engaged, but it is certain that all the aid which the generosity and patriotism of the Canadian people can supply, will in all probability be needed. No higher duty rests upon both the government and the people than that of providing for the families and dependents of the brave men who have gone, and who are yet to go, to the front, there to fight for the preservation of the Empire, for the defence of Canada, and for the maintenance of our institutions and liberties."

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

"Canadians were proud of the prompt, splendid way in which Canada's sons had come forward to defend the flag, and are filled with hope that they would acquit themselves nobly on the field of duty, as their ancestors had in days gone by. These men who have left for the front have volunteered themselves. They will never give up the fight until it is won. Some of them will make the supreme sacrifice, will give up their lives. It is our duty to see that those whom these men have left behind shall not be destitute, that they be kept in as great a degree of comfort as if their loved ones had not gone to this war."

That true Canadian brand of patriotism which broadens in the face of reverses and tribulations, that patriotism which entails sacrifices and the placing of the hand in the pocket to relieve distress, is entertained by the citizens of Peterborough as well as the two greatest men in the Dominion Parliament. This is evinced by the fact that the Peterborough Patriotic Fund in three weeks has reached the grand total of $3,177.30.

HERE AND THERE

There's plenty of water left to swim in—it's rather chilly, though.

* * *

We think of the cold and we dread it, But, does anyone sell coal on credit?

* * *

Germany, along with the rest of us, is feeling the pinch of hard times.

* * *

Canada is in the midst of the fall fair season. And some exceptionally good fairs are being held throughout the province of Ontario.

* * *

What is considered as the earliest snow in years, fell at Quebec yesterday. Guess Quebec has not heard of Lindsay's big snowfall.

* * *

Summer is over and fall is upon us with all its sadness. The leaves are beginning to fall and the air is chilly and already frost has visited us.

* * *

Some corn! Mr. P. Murphy, of Ops township, has an extra tall field of corn, some of which has reached the phenomenal height of fifteen feet.

* * *

A report says that the Kaiser was known to be within 14 miles of the firing line. That's nothing, the Crown Prince was withing 13 miles of the firing line the other day.

* * *

Such steps should be taken after the close of this war, that whatever the cause and whoever is to blame—a war like the present one will be effectually prevented for all time to come.

* * *

Port Hope is about to have another sensation. A resident of the town having learned that his wife is keeping company with another man, has entered action against the second lover for alienation of his wife's affections. It is understood that Mr. W. F. Kerr, Crown Attorney, is handling the case.

PRENEVEAU PATRIOTIC LEAGUE

Preneveau, Ont., Sept. 30. — The Preneveau Ladies' Patriotic League on Saturday, 19th inst., sent to the commander at Valcartier Camp two bales containing the following: 70 feather pillows, 70 pillow cases, 52 pairs socks, 50 cases foot ease, 12 dozen handkerchiefs, 8 pairs wristlets.

Another bale, now almost completed will follow shortly and will include 50 pairs wristlets, some pillows, 50 housewives, 50 handkerchiefs, and a number of sleeping helmets. (In each housewife a small box of camphor ice has been enclosed though not asked for.)

The Society has sent also an outfit consisting of sweater, socks, shirts, handkerchiefs and a sleeping helmet to Mr. W. A. Reynolds, of Norwood, now at Valcartier and brother of Mr. Reynolds, teacher at Preneveau.

At the last meeting of the league which convened at the home of Mrs. R. Sexsmith, a card from Mr. Reynolds was read, thanking the ladies for their gift. Speaking of the sleeping helmet, he said, "It is certainly a fine thing for the cold nights down here."

Further encouragement was given the workers, when, a few days later the employes of the Ontario Rock Co. sent $53 to the society with the following letter:

Preneveau, Ont.,
Sept. 17th, 1914.

Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith,
Preneveau, Ont.,

Dear Mrs. Sexsmith,—

The employes of the Ontario Rock Co. have much pleasure in handing the enclosed subscription to $53 to you and the ladies who have banded yourselves together in the great work of contributing to the comfort of the brave Canadians who are going to the front and the firing line.

We all feel that every dollar given in defense of our Empire in this just war, is so much given in defense of liberty, of democracy against autocracy, of right against wrong.

Yours truly,
ONTARIO ROCK CO., LTD.,
Per W. A. Stewart, Supt.

This highly appreciated donation was forwarded on 21st inst. to the headquarters of the Red Cross Society, Quebec, for the purchase of medical supplies for the field hospitals which are part of the equipment of the Canadian Contingent.

In a recent issue the Mail and Empire said, "For the purchase of medical supplies money is needed, and needed badly. The men in the field who face the Mausers and the shells are the ones who demand our first care. They are doing this work and facing wounds, sickness and death for us. Will you not help?"

"And how can man die better
Than facing fearful odds
For the ashes of his fathers
And the temple of his gods."

FRANK HILL NEWS

(Special Correspondence.)

Frank Hill, Sept. 28.—Mr. Thos. Bodley, merchant of Pefferlaw, motored over to Mr. John C. Lowe's for the week end. Along with him were Mrs. Jas. Graham, Mrs. Marshal Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Graham.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Irons are visiting their daughter, Mrs. John C. Lowes.

Chickens will be scarce around Frank Hill for awhile.

Mr. Walter Thompson is away visiting at Peffertan.

LINDSAY DEPUTATION WAITED ON C.P.R.

Lindsay, Sept. 30.—Mr. John Carew, M.P.P., His Worship Mayor R. M. Beal and Mr. J. D. Flavelle were in Toronto Monday in the interests of the citizens of Lindsay, particularly those citizens who have been for several months past been getting the Toronto morning daily newspapers early in the morning. The C.P.R. carried the newspapers to Lindsay on the mixed train which reached town about 7 a.m., but this train was changed on Monday of this week and now leaves Toronto too early for the morning papers.

In company with representatives from the Mail and Empire, the World and the Globe Messrs. Carew, Beal and Flavelle waited on Supt. Arundel and placed the matter fully before him.

The result is that Supt. Arundel has promised to look carefully into the matter and it is expected that some arrangements will be made whereby the papers will arrive in Lindsay early in the morning.

It was explained that one reason for changing the time was on account of shippers in Peterboro wishing to get their freight earlier.

CONGRATULATES LOYAL FAMILY

LONDON, Sept. 30 — Lord Stamfordham, secretary to the King, yesterday sent the following message to J. Benjamin of Forest Gate who has four sons with the colors:

"My dear sir,—I am commanded by the King to congratulate you on having four sons serving his Majesty, of which you should be very proud. His Majesty wishes them to know that he thoroughly appreciates their loyalty, which they share with so many thousands of others of Jewish persuasion in the United Kingdom."

Australian Troops Haven't Sailed.

OTTAWA, Sept. 30—Several newspapers have asserted that the Australian and New Zealand contingents have already arrived in Great Britain and India's troops have reached the front. The most recent and reliable advices from Great Britain indicates that these contingents have not yet embarked. The statements made to the contrary, it is said, are absolutely unfounded.

The Lesser Evil.

"It's Mr. Boreleigh. I think I'll send him word I'm out."

"Won't the still, small voice reproach you?"

"Oh, yes, but I'd rather listen to the still, small voice than to Mr. Boreleigh's."—Boston Transcript.

The most deadly foe to success in the future is the inertia which springs from self satisfaction in the success of the past.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Wheat prices flattened out today after a decided bulge, due to reports of the closing of the Dardanelles. The huge increase of the world's available supply total was chiefly responsible for the collapse of the market. Closing prices were weak at ⅝c to ⅝c under last night. Corn finished 1¼c to 2⅝c down, oats off 1⅝c to 1⅝c and provisions from 30c decline to an advance of 25c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 29.—Wheat opened strong in sympathy with firmer Liverpool cables and strong markets. There was a more bullish feeling apparent, which was supported by the report of the Dardanelles being closed. Cash grains closed:

Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.08⅝; No. 2 do., $1.05⅛; No. 3 do., $1.00⅛; No. 4 do., 91½c; No. 5 do., 87⅝c; No. 6 do., 82⅝c; feed, 79½c.

Oats—No. 2 C.W., 48⅝c; No. 3 C.W., 47½c; extra No. 1 feed, 47⅝c; No 1 feed, 46⅝c; No. 2 feed, 45⅝c.

Barley—No. 3, 66½c; No. 4, 61c; rejected, 59c; feed, 57c.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.21⅝; No. 2 C. W., $1.18⅝.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—The local situation in grain today has shown no change. The demand from abroad was again very light and little or no new business was reported closed. The local demand for oats did not improve with the lower prices quoted and dealers here seem quite satisfied to wait.

Hay was neglected. The increased prices in cheese have curtailed the demand from foreign buyers to a large degree, and little or no new business for export was done. A few small orders were reported by local houses, but no big movement is taking place. Butter was easier at Saturday's decline. The feeling prevails here that for at least a short while the present prices will continue easy. Provisions were easy and unchanged. Eggs were quiet but steady.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 29.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.10½; No. 1 northern, $1.07½ to $1.09½; No. 2 do., $1.09 to $1.07; Dec., $1.09.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 69c to 70c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 43½c to 43⅝c.

Flour—Fancy patents, $5.65.

Bran—Unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Sept. 29.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.09½; No. 1 northern, $1.08½; No. 2 do., $1.05½; Dec., $1.08½.

FUNERAL OF SIR JAMES WHITNEY

Scores of Friends Pay Their Last Respects.

MORRISBURG, Ont., Sept. 30.—In a little old-fashioned cemetery on a hillside fronting a stretch of the St. Lawrence river, the body of the late Ontario statesman was buried late yesterday afternoon and a whole countryside turned out to do him reverence. A fitful rainstorm which had threatened all day gathered as the burial proceeded, and at the moment when the mourners assembled about the grave, broke in a smart patter of drops. For ten minutes the congregation stood with bared heads as the last rites were read out. The body was then lowered into a vault in the Whitney family plot and the service was over.

There were not wanting instances during the day to show the regard which the province held for Sir James Whitney. At stations through which the special whirled on its way from Toronto to Morrisburg flags flew at half-mast, and at two or three of the larger towns small parties were permitted to view the remains. When the train reached Morrisburg the cortage proceeded at once to the little brownstone church erected within recent years by the Whitney family. Scores of people who had driven from the surrounding country formed long lines of approach and, marshalled by a detachment from the local militia, doffed hats and bowed heads as the procession approached. The service then proceeded in the interior of the church.

Then, with the assemblage kneeling, prayer was offered by Rural Dean Carson. Behind the bier as it was borne out through the portico and down the short road into the cemetery followed the immediate relatives of Sir James. Behind, walking two by two, came the Ontario Cabinet, and lengthening out in the rear, representatives of civil, legal and religious organizations, including a sprinkling of civil service officials who had come by train; Government representatives in the Legislature assembled almost to a man; members, coming from even the most northerly and westerly ridings to tender parting tokens of respect.

The Opposition in the House was represented by Mr. Rowell, Sam Clarke of Northumberland, D. Racine of Russell, and Hugh Munro of Glengarry.

The Federal Government sent the following Ministers: Hon. Messrs. W. T. White, Louis Coderre, Martin Burrell, Robt. Rogers, Frank Cochrane, Thomas Crothers, A. E. Kemp and Speaker Sproule.

Among the Ontario men in the Federal House were Messrs. Lancaster, Murphy, Barker, Northrup, Thorburn, Ball, Broder and Cockshutt.

All the provincial commissions sent representatives.

Fully Explained.

The colored sexton of a wealthy church had a very stylish mulatto wife. Finding his domestic income not quite equal to his expenses, he decided to apply for an increase in salary. So he wrote a letter to the committee in charge with this explanation at the close: "It's mighty hard to keep a sealskin wife on a muskrat salary."—New York Sun.

FEDERAL MENACE REDUCES CALIBRE OF MAJOR LEAGUE

Although McGraw did not lose a player to the Federals this season, the three-time champion of the National league is blaming the outlaws for his failure to grab a fourth flag. Frank Chance, out, if not down, as a big league manager, is likewise a sufferer, as are Joe Birmingham, Wilbur Robinson, of the Dodgers, and others.

Their assertion is that, with the Federal menace hanging over their heads, they were not managing their clubs — the clubs managed them. Their players, those who did remain, secure in the possession of ironclad contracts without 10-day clauses, loafed on their jobs. They could not be driven.

"With the Federals in the field it has been impossible to have discipline," said McGraw recently. "You have to handle the men with kid gloves. If you go after one of them you are in danger of losing a player, and the elder ones are the worst of the lot. They will tell you they have done a lot for you, and you have no right to come back at them."

Frank Chance hit the nail on the head when he said:

"With the Feds in the offing discipline is gone. You tell a player to do something. He does something—else."

It has been asserted that Wilbur Robinson has been managing a team in a real state of mutiny much of the time this year. Starting out ranks found Birmingham in the same with great prospects, his players refused absolutely to take orders from him. Dissension in the Cleveland ranks found Birmingham in the same boat. He sat by helplessly until his team was so far behind it did not make any difference what happened.

In baseball, as in any other jobs of life, men do their best work when they fear some one will replace them if they don't. The Feds removed this spur, and organised baseball suffered.

FIRST GAMES IN PHILADELPHIA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—The first games between Philadelphia Americans and Boston Nationals in the world series will be played in Philadelphia on October 9th and 10th. Third and fourth games will be played in Boston, October 12th and 13th. Fifth in Philadelphia, October 14th, and sixth in Boston Oct. 15th, if more than four games are necessary. This was decided here today at a meeting of the National Baseball Commission.

COMMENT
As You Like It

Both Springfield and Decatur topped the champion Davenport team in batting, according to Three-I league averages.

Outfielder Joe Connolly still continues as the only regular among the Boston Braves to hit for .300 or better.

The Brooklyn Superbas have made a season's record by capturing a whole series of five games, the Cincinnati Reds being the victims.

For three consecutive seasons Manager Joe Kilihan has piloted the Oshkosh team to the championship of the Wisconsin-Illinois league.

The management of the Chicago Cubs has refused to give Captain Tommy Leach a three-year contract. Tom now threatens to jump to the Federals.

Harry Lejune, who has been burning up the Western league in stick work this season, and recently sold to the Pirates, had a trial with the Superbas a few years ago.

In pitching and winning a double-header against Detroit the other day Ray Collins, the Red Sox flinger, cut in with a stunt seldom seen in major league circles nowadays.

By defeating the New London Eastern association champions in four games out of six, the champion Lawrence team of the New England league won the minor league championship of New England.

Of the seventeen National players batting .300 or better, six are members of the Brooklyn club. The Superbas in the honor list are Steele, Myers, Dalton, Daubert, Wheat and Stengel.

Cleveland fans enjoy themselves jeering the Naps whenever an error is made. All a player on a tail-end team has to do is to look happy while living a dog's life on the diamond.

City series at Chicago and St. Louis between American and National league clubs are arranged. The first games will take place on Oct. 7 In Chicago the White Sox secured the first home game by the toss of a coin.

Fred Beck, of the Chicago Feds, received a personal invitation to attend the National association meeting at Omaha in November. Perhaps the minor leagues overlooked the fact that Fred is a Federal leaguer.

Arthur Irwin says it wasn't because of any real trouble with the club owners that Frank Chance resigned his managerial berth with the Yankees. It was merely because he wanted to quit baseball. Published interviews with Chance tell a different story.

Manager George Stallings, of the Boston Braves has interrupted plans for a day in his honor by declining to be honored by the fans for bringing his team out of the rut to a big lead in the race. It was originally proposed to give him a present at the game on Monday, when the Chicago Cubs were the guests of honor, and a committee of fans had already begun to collect money for the gift. A few days ago the "miracle man" called the baseball writers together and requested them to ask the fans to cancel the day. If the Braves won the pennant, and the world's championship, it might be all right to do something for him, but he wants no presentation now, lest it bring bad luck to the team.

Having only twirled in about 50 games during the Northwestern League season, Joe McGinnity, the Tacoma magnate has signed on with the Venice Club of the Coast League for the remainder of the season. The old "Iron Man" likes the grind, and while other pitchers roar when they are asked to work in more than one game a week, the veteran keeps right on plugging. The reason is this — Joe scrambled hard to get money to pay off his men at Tacoma and is now working trying to get something for himself. Here is a man who has put back into baseball everything he made out of the game yet when things broke badly for him in the closing weeks of this season he got no sympathy from ball players. He told one of his men that he might be a day late in paying them, and that man said he wanted pay for the day he was waiting for his money. No wonder Joe went back to the grind—disgusted.

The charge has been made in Detroit that Jennings' team laid down to the Boston Red Sox, in the hope that by losing steadily to Boston, the latter will be in a position to make a bold bid for the pennant. The reason given is because the Red Sox are members of the Players' Fraternity, while the Athletics have steadfastly refused to join it. The first charge was made by a Detroit paper, the story calling attention to the fact that Detroit had won ten out of its last eleven games, beating Philadelphia two out of three recently, and citing various phases of th inexplicable slump against Boston. Pitcher George Dauss has been especially criticized for his work in the recent 11-innings tie game. At that time it was getting dark and a pitcher with speed would have batters at his mercy under such conditions. Yet four base-hits in succession were made, which, with a wide pitch, allowed Boston to tie the score. Tuesday, the Tigers made the charge look good by dropping two to the Red Sox.

GERMANS ATTACK ANTWERP

Assault On First Line of City's Defences Has Begun.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 30. — (Via London.)—The Germans have commenced their attack on the first line of the defence of Antwerp, according to despatches received by the Amsterdam papers. Moll, which is an important railway junction near the Dutch border, was occupied by the Germans, Sunday and Monday the Germans, who again occupy Malines, began a bombardment of forts Waelhel and St. Catharine. It is believed that heavy Austrian artillery is being used.

Lierre, according to a message to the Handelsblad, has been under shell fire since early morning. The people at first hid in the cellars, but subsequently fled to Antwerp, being joined by fugitives from the surrounding villages. It is reported that many houses have been destroyed and some of the inhabitants killed and wounded. One shell fell on a hospital, killing nine persons.

LAKEFIELD NEWS ITEMS

(Special Correspondence.)

Lakefield, Sept. 30.—The second annual fall Sale and Tea of the Girls' Auxiliary of St. John's Church was held in the Sunday School room on Wednesday afternoon from three to six o'clock and was in every way a splendid success. The school was very artistically decorated with Virginia vines and red berries. Among the many attractions was the fish pond under the supervision of Mrs. Osborne. It was well patronized by the little folk. The booths, namely, fancy work, fruit, cut flowers, and candy, looked very attractive with their various decorations. Refreshments were served and every one had a very enjoyable time.

The annual harvest supper was held at Buckhorn on Monday evening, Sept. 29th. Everything was a splendid success. The following was the program:

Solo—O Canada—Mr. B. Ollel.
Solo—Jenny—Mrs. Fitzgerald.
Reading—Miss Traill.
Solo—Miss Pemberthy.
Solo—From the Geyser—Mrs. M. Osborne.

THE FINEST COLLECTION.

In Which the Bore Encounters a Rival After His Own Heart.

MY DINNER partner was a self made man and not ashamed of it.

"Do you take an interest in china, ma'am?" he asked.

But he didn't wait to hear what I said.

"I think I may say," he continued, "that I have the finest collection of old Dresden china in London."

"If you find it a nuisance," said I, "I've a parlor maid I could recommend to you."

At this point I think he had some idea of having the finest collection of parlor maids in Middlesex, but he made it small dogs instead. Was I interested in these?

"I don't think I should be far wrong," he began, but I hustled him through his sentence.

"Finest collection in?"— I asked.

"England," he said.

He went over their points, and in an expansive moment I marveled. This was imprudent, as it caused him to search his mind for some further spectacular triumph wherewith to amaze and delight.

"That," he said, looking up the table, "is my wife."

"Marvelous," said I.

He took this in the best part. "You refer to her diamonds?" he said.

"Did I?" said I.

"The finest collection in Great Britain," he declared, and spread himself over the subject.

Later, in a mood of concession, he inquired as to my specialities. I had none, at least none that I could think of. Was I not married? That was so, I agreed, but then so many women are.

"You have sons, ma'am?" he persisted.

I thought of baby. "Ah, yes, of course," I said. "The finest collection in Europe."—Punch.

Preparing to Shift.

"Blinks is riding on the water wagon."

"Reformed?"

"No; saving his money to buy a gasoline cart."

Ambitious.

"What is he doing in politics?"

"He is starting a new party."

"Aren't there parties enough now?"

"Sure, but he doesn't own them."

Postgraduate.

And if you think the taxicab
Has never learned arithmetic
Just watch the little monster grab
Off puzzling problems double quick.

His Company.

"Can't you lose that grouch?"

"Don't you want me to have anything to live for?"

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

COUGHLIN—McCLORY.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at St. Mary's Church this morning at 8 o'clock, the contracting parties being Miss Margaret McClory and Mr. Dennis Coughlin, both of town, the nuptial knot being tied by Rev. Monsignor Casey. The bride was assisted by Miss M. Campbell, while Mr. John O'Halloran supported the groom. The nuptial mass being celebrated, after which the happy young couple drove to the residence of ex-Ald. F. McClory, brother of the bride, to enjoy a magnificent wedding breakfast with a few immediate friends. The gifts to the bride were numerous.

They left on the flyer for Toronto and points west. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Coughlin will reside in Lindsay.—Warder.

BUTCHER—BAXTER.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this afternoon at one-thirty o'clock when Rev. Mr. Sawyers united Mr. Gordon Butcher and Miss Susie Baxter in the holy bonds of matrimony. The attendants were Mr. Ira Huggins and Miss Lucy Baxter, a sister of the bride. The happy couple left for a short trip after which they will reside in the city.

POLICE COURT

Several Cases Heard This Morning

Bruce Kennedy and Paul Godfrey were both disposed of in today's police court on drunken charges with two dollars or ten days.

Victor L. Vincent preferred a charge against Walter Cowan of this city for wrongful dismissal, claiming fifteen dollars damages in lieu of a week's notice of dismissal. Cowan claimed that he told Vincent if the quality of his work did not improve he would have to dismiss him at the end of the week. Magistrate Dumble explained that his court could not give any settlement and said that Vincent would have to prefer a case of damages against Cowan at a higher court.

A woman of this city preferred a charge of assault against her husband who scratched her badly while drunk. Although he pleaded not guilty he admitted shoving her about and perhaps scratched her. His wife said that he was quite peaceful when not under the influence of liquor. She wanted peace and quietness. Magistrate Dumble warned the man not to get drunk and thereby keep peace with his wife. The case stands over indefinitely.

John McGarvin was charged with stealing $[illegible] from Harry Hamilton, a Chinaman, who has a laundry in East City. The story goes that McGarvin along with another man entered the laundry and had some altercation with Hamilton, who removed his coat and laid it down on the counter. Immediately McGarvin rifled the pockets of the coat and found a roll of bills amounting to eighty-four dollars, and walked out of the laundry. The proprietor of the laundry immediately notified the police and shortly afterwards, McGarvin was arrested at his home. The case was adjourned for one week, bail being granted to McGarvin at two hundred dollars.

When taken in custody, McGarvin had all of the stolen money on him, and it is altogether likely that he thought Hamilton would not notify the police immediately, consequently he did not make any efforts to get away with the money.

John Godfrey was charged with procuring Mrs. Alice Butcher for the purpose of having carnal connection with one, John Ruttan. Mrs. Butcher said that her husband left her about two months ago, and she then went to keep house for Godfrey. While there one Saturday afternoon Godfrey brought Ruttan to the house and introduced Ruttan to her, telling her that if she wanted to make money by immoral purposes Ruttan was the man. She acknowledged accepting one dollar from Ruttan for these purposes, and Ruttan also said he gave her the dollar. The case was adjourned from one o'clock until two.

LOCAL LABOR CONDITIONS

The Labor Gazette contains the following note on labor and conditions in this city.

Conditions in the labour market during the month of August were rather dull, and since the war started have been getting worse. Some industries could not get raw material and were reducing their staffs and working short time.

In the building trade conditions have been good, but prospects were not so favourable as last fall, although the building permits show an increase of $2,350 over the same month last year. Commercial and business interests are quiet, only a normal amount of business being done.

The city council was doing all it possibly could to relieve the distress of those out of employment and has been giving the men a week's work and a week off so as to help as many as possible. A movement is on foot to bring the farmers and the unemployed together, and the farmers have made an offer to take a number of men. They will pay $15.00 per month and board, but this will only last for two or three months. Altogether the outlook was anything but bright.

Farmers have been active during the month. The grain has all been cut and a fairly good crop has been harvested. The root crop also promises to be good.

Lumbering operations have been fair, the mills were late getting started this spring waiting for logs, but were all running full capacity.

Most of the factories were on short time with greatly reduced staffs. In the iron industries business has been very quiet.

The railways were getting busy again and freight traffic was quite brisk. The Grand Trunk Railway have found it necessary to reinstate five crews who were laid off some time ago owing to stagnation of the train service. The Canadian Pacific Railway did not release any men.

THE NEW TRADE FOR CANADA

London, Sept. 30.—Right Honorable John Burns has arranged for a commission, consisting of representatives of the Board of Trade, the Timber Trade Federation and the Mining Association of Great Britain to proceed to Canada and Newfoundland to inquire into the possibility of opening up new sources of supplies of mining timber for use in the coal mines of Great Britain.

Loyal Order of Moose.

An important meeting of the Loyal Order of Moose is called for tomorrow evening in the Knights of Pythias hall. All members will kindly attend.

Harvest Thanksgiving.

The harvest thanksgiving service will be held in All Saints' church Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Special music will be rendered, and Rev. W. J. Southam, M.A., of All Saints' church, Toronto, will preach.

Tag Day Campaign.

A meeting of the members of the Children's Aid Society will be held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers on Thursday, the 1st day of October, at four o'clock in the afternoon, to make arrangements for the annual Tag Day Campaign.

A large attendance of all those interested is urgently requested.

E. L. GOODWILL,
Secretary.

Partnership Dissolved.

The legal partnership carried on of late by Daniel O'Connell and John R. Corkery, under the firm name of O'Connell & Corkery, has been dissolved, and in the future both gentlemen will continue their respective practices separately. Mr. O'Connell will have his offices in those occupied by the late firm on Hunter street, while Mr. Corkery will carry on his practice in the Bank of Commerce building, where he has opened offices.

Big Athletic Meet.

All those intending to enter the athletic meet on Thanksgiving Day should leave their entries at the Y.M.C.A. before Saturday, Oct. 10th. All men entering this meet if members of the Y.M.C.A., can register under the A.L.N.A., others will need to have their A.A.U. card. If you are not a registered athlete, see about it at once so there won't be any question about your competing.

There is a fine list of prizes for the road race, and we are looking for a large number of entries.

Get further information at Y. M. C. A.

Children's Aid Society.

A meeting is to be held on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Bank of Montreal chambers, for all those interested in the work of the Children's Shelter, and it is hoped that the attendance will be large. The officers of the Children's Aid Shelter have felt a great reluctance to make any appeal to the public this year, if at all possible to avoid doing so. But as there are already about 15 children in the Shelter, and the funds collected last year being almost exhausted, it has become imperative that some steps should be taken to provide for the coming winter, which will inevitably tax the resources of the Society, to the utmost. With this end in view, it has been decided to hold the annual tag day shortly. We feel sure that although the people of Peterborough have already responded most generously to the numerous appeals already made to them, no one will grudge a donation, though it may be, of necessity, a small one, to this cause, or turn a deaf ear to the "call of the children."

FRENCH ARMY TAKES REVENGE FOR DEFEAT AT SEDAN

Motor Man Is Killed

Small Boys Released Flat Car--- Collided With Trolley

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 1.—Some boys playing on a flat car released the brakes, and the car ran away, colliding at a crossing with a street car. Mr. and Mrs. James Green, passengers on the trolley, are in a critical condition, and the motorman, Charles [illegible] was killed.

CASUALTY LIST REACHES 8000

Thirty Eight German List is a Big One

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Berlin, Oct. 1.—The thirty-eighth German casualty list, made public to-day, contains about 8,000 names. It includes three major generals, one killed and two wounded. Major General Scherb[illegible] was killed, while Major General Emil Henigst was slightly and Major General Oskar Reuter was dangerously wounded.

"WOODIE" BEARSS PASSES AWAY

Former Local Hockey Player Died Yesterday

With deep regret the friends of Woodie Bearss, the former Peterboro Intermediate O.H.A. hockey player, will learn that he passed away at the sanitarium in Gravenhurst yesterday. Deceased came to this city in the fall of 1911 and played for the local Intermediates in 1911-12. A year and a half ago he married Miss V. [illegible] of this city and went west. He returned to his former home at Ingersoll last fall and lived there till a few months ago when Mr. Bearss' health failed him and he was sent to the above mentioned institution. His wife and infant child survive. The funeral will take place tomorrow at Ingersoll.

APPEAL IS DISMISSED

On [illegible] 8th last Mr. Justice Middleton delivered judgment in favor of the plaintiff, in the case of Jeane Hamilton vs William Hamilton to recover the sum of $5,004.10. At Osgoode Hall, Toronto, yesterday an appeal of the defendant against the judgment was dismissed with costs. Mr. S. [illegible] of this city appeared for the defendant and W. J. McLarty of Toronto for the plaintiff.

SUSTAINED BROKEN COLLAR BONE

Mr. [illegible] Howden, 301 Romaine St., met with a serious accident late yesterday afternoon. Mr. Howden was on his way back to Apsley for some cattle. He was driving along the road, just east of Burleigh, when his horse shied at a partridge that flew up from the side of the road. Mr. Howden was thrown out on his left side and sustained a broken collar bone, while his left arm and hand were badly bruised. He was brought into the city at 3 o'clock this morning in an automobile. When seen this afternoon by The Review he was resting as comfortably as could be expected.

STORY OF BLOODY BATTLE IN TO-DAY'S DESPATCHES

Another Despatch Tells of Heroism in Great Battle of the Marne---Lord Roberts Says the Hardest Task is Yet to Come.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 1.—During a strategical retreat of the allies, French troops exacted from the Germans bloody revenge for the French defeat at Sedan, 44 years before, on this very same battlefield. According to the Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail, the Germans suffered one of the worst defeats of the present invasion. Here is the story of the second battle of Sedan, as told by the correspondent: "The French general ordered his troops to fall back across the river and take up positions on the opposite heights. Bridges were mined, but were left standing, in order to deceive the Germans into thinking that the French were retreating hastily. The Germans advanced across the bridges in close formation. When several German regiments had crossed, the French blew up the bridges, and French artillery started firing at the German columns, which retreated hastily to the river, only to find the bridges gone. The French regiments then advanced with quick firers and merciless slaying continued until dusk. Many Germans threw down their arms and attempted to swim the river, and large numbers were drowned. When nightfall came, the French brought up searchlights and continued the work of carnage. The artillery threw shells at the rate of a dozen rounds a minute into the German ranks, and varied its tactics by throwing incendiary shells into the forest, where part of the German force had taken refuge. The burning woods lit up the whole front of 15 miles. In the morning an armistice of two hours was granted to allow the Germans to bury their dead. The French suffered a loss of only a handful."

A STORY OR HEROISM IN THE BATTLE OF THE MARNE.

London, Oct. 1.—Jean Bergen, an Alsatian 18 years old, a volunteer private in the Second Regiment, French Infantry, lies in the hospital at Angers, France, recovering from severe wounds. He is silent, but his comrades tell the story of his matchless endurance, bravery and self-sacrifice. Escaping himself unscathed after the awful day's fighting during the battle of the Marne, Berger found his colonel wounded on the field, and was carrying him to the rear, when a wounded British Grenadier officer lying near his path called for a drink. Berger placed the colonel in safety, procured food and wine, and, with bullets whistling around him, returned to the battlefield. While raising a flask at the British officer's mouth, three of his fingers were shot away. Suffering intensely, he yet retained hold of the flask but another bullet entered his loins. He fell to the ground, groaning, and lay helpless beside the Grenadier. Presently the attention of both was attracted by a German soldier calling feebly for a drink. The two managed to drag themselves to the prostrate German and pour wine and water down his throat. They then fainted from pain and exhaustion, and when they recovered they found the German dead. A body of Uhlans rode by, and Berger hailed the commanding officer and asked for water. The German dismounted, first covering Berger with his pistol, but seeing the dead German with a French empty flask beside him, telling its own noble tale, he knelt beside the two wounded men, gave them a drink, saluted and returned to his command, "with that in his eyes to which the tongue could not give expression." After lying on the field another day, until the firing ceased, Berger dragged the English officer, who had become almost delirious, to the allies' lines, where the Red Cross took care of them. The Briton asked to have his stretcher carried to Berger's side, and, grasping his hand, said: "If I live I will do the best in my power to get you the Victoria Cross. If ever man deserved it, you do."

LORD ROBERTS' MESSAGE.

London, Oct. 1.—Lord Roberts, in an article published to-day, urges his countrymen not to underestimate the power of Germany, with its sixty-six million people. "I cannot help thinking," he says, "the great task of subduing that nation will begin when we, with our allies, have driven them into the heart of their own country." He also asks the people to desist from "the unsportsmanlike practice of abusing our enemies"—what Rudyard Kipling at the time of the Boer war called "Killing Kruger with your mouth"—and says we should remember, when reading charges against German troops, that gross charges absolutely untrue were brought against our soldiers in South Africa. "But, whether such charges are true or false, let us keep our hands clean and let us fight against the Germans in such a way as to earn their liking as well as respect."

ANTWERP HAS SUFFERED LITTLE.

London, Oct. 1.—The official communication issued at Antwerp, according to a despatch to Reuter, says: "German artillery during Wednesday continued the bombardment of the first line of forts on the south. Our works suffered little and we are still in condition to make effective resistance."

Paris, Oct. 1.—Italy is ready to make a protest to Turkey against the abolition of capitulation at Constantinople, according to a Rome despatch to the Havas Agency.

NO ELECTION THIS FALL

The items which appear from time to time in the Toronto Globe and its local echo in Peterborough, to the effect that a snap election will be held this autumn, are entirely unwarranted and ar[illegible] to the imagination of those who want to score against the Government. Those who know, say that there is not the slightest intention of having an election this fall.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS RESIGNS FROM THE CABINET

Dr. Reaume Will Retire From Politics Altogether and Will Probably Resume Practice in Essex County.

TORONTO, Oct. 1. — Hon. Dr. Reaume handed in to the Ontario Government yesterday his resignation as Minister of Public Works for the province. His official duties cease at once and the portfolio is left to be filled in the Cabinet reorganization. Dr. Reaume leaves the political arena altogether and probably will resume his practice in Essex.

The reception of his signed resignation by Acting Premier Pyne and the Cabinet was not altogether unexpected. It was believed that he would vacate his position towards the end of the month. According to his statement last evening, he considered it an opportune moment to drop out, when the Cabinet was facing a shift in membership.

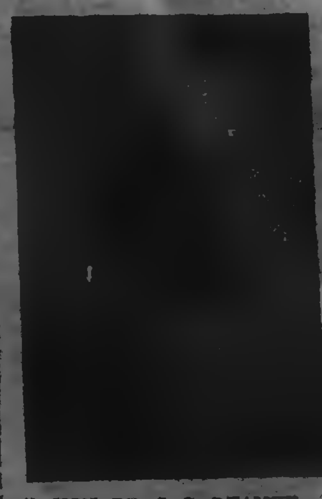
Dr. Reaume was first elected to the Legislature in the 1902 general election. He was again returned in 1905, and in the same year was appointed Minister of Public Works by the Whitney Administration. On Feb. 21, in 1905, he carried a bye-election by acclamation, and was elected in 1908 and 1911, but was defeated last June. It is understood that he was pressed by the Premier to retain office until the situation cleared somewhat, and so remained for the last three months.

In well-informed Conservative circles it was stated last night that Hon. W. H. Hearst is to be the new Premier. Mr. Hearst declined to discuss any aspect of the situation, and Dr. Pyne was more than usually reticent. Dr. Reaume's retirement from political life was made known after he had left the Council chamber for home.

Dr. Roche To Retire?

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—While there is a belief in some quarters that Hon. Dr. Roche will shortly retire, there are also those in Governmental circles who are convinced that the Minister of the Interior will retain his portfolio until the end of the present Parliament. It is rumored that the Premier is averse to changes in the Cabinet until after the next election.

Hon. Louis Coderre may go to the King's Court Bench of Montreal, where there will shortly be a vacancy.



HON. DR. J. O. REAMUE.

ALLIES STILL MAKE PROGRESS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 1.—The following official communication was given out here this afternoon: "There has been no modification in the general situation. We have, nevertheless, made progress on our left to the north of the Somme and on our right in the southern Woevre district."

CENSORSHIP VERY SEVERE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

A brief announcement from Paris affords the only light from official sources thrown on the great struggle in Northern France to-day. London and Berlin were still silent in late afternoon, and what unofficial reports reached this country by way of the capitals of the belligerents contained little to indicate the course of events on the different battlefields. Not before since the war began has the censorship been so severe.

DEARTH OF FOOD IN GERMANY

Terrible stories are being published in Rome of the dearth of food in Germany. To all intents and purposes famine prevails in Hamburg, and a gentleman recently in that city says the situation there is merely an example of the conditions prevailing all over Germany. He says that the immense store-houses in Hamburg have been taken over by the General Staff, and their contents have been sent to the front. Traffic in Hamburg has ceased and all factories are closed. There are 1,500 ships lying idle in the harbour, and the crews are suffering from hunger. Prices have risen to such an extent that even in the middle of August eggs cost ten marks a dozen. Fresh meat was unprocurable, all the cattle having been requisitioned. There was a very small quantity of milk and butter, but it had all been reserved for the hospitals. There was neither milk nor prepared food for babies, and long, sad processions of mothers could be seen outside the town hall imploring the city fathers for assistance. The government's action in forbidding any one to leave the town augmented the ranks of the hungry unemployed. The municipality vainly protested against this order, pointing out that it affected Hamburg's position as a Hanseatic city. — Reuter.

GERMAN RIGHT AND LEFT WINGS ARE BEING TURNED

Official Reports of Allies' Movements Are Exceedingly Scanty, But Backward Move of Entire German Line is Imminent—French Have Taken Seicheprey in the Woevre District—Juniville in Peril.

FROM THE BATTLEFRONT, Oct. 1.—This was the nineteenth day of continued hard fighting along the 150-mile front from the Somme to the Moselle, and yet there is no definite indication that the historic battle is nearing a finish. There are, however, evidences that the Germans are receding before a forcible and sustained pushing from the allied armies, especially on their western and eastern wings, while in the centre, where the Germans are more strongly entrenched than at any other point with heavy artillery, remains almost stationary.

It is generally concluded by French military men that some important move must soon be made by the Germans, who have found it impossible to stem the advance of the allies, though they opposed the sternest and most desperate resistance, sacrificing thousands of men daily.

The German wings appear as though folding back on the centre, leaving the sole loophole for a backward movement by way of Rethel.

The Germans' main supply base at Juniville, which is protected by heavy masses of troops, as it is absolutely essential that this place shall be held for the revictualling of the German armies in northeastern France, appears to be placed in a somewhat precarious situation, with its single line of railroad.

The line of battle has changed considerably since the beginning of the actual conflict between the two great armies, whose numbers and real positions it is not permitted to make public. The front now [illegible] sinuous windings, looping inward and outward at various points in country which everywhere is [illegible] adapted to defence.

The allied commanders are husbanding their men's lives to the greatest possible extent by keeping them from frontal attacks on positions where the Germans are in advantageous situations, but whenever the plan of campaign necessitates direct attacks, the French and British soldiers go forward cheerfully with the utmost confidence in their leaders.

Official Bulletins.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—The following official communication was issued last night:

"The general situation is satisfactory. There has been no change of any account on the front except to the south of the Woevre, where we have occupied Seicheprey and advanced as far as the slopes to Rupt de Mad."

The text of yesterday afternoon's Paris official statement is as follows:

"First, on our left wing, north of the Somme, the action continues to develop more and more toward the north. Between the Oise and the Aisne the enemy has delivered a vigorous attack on Tracy-le-Mont, northeast of the forest of Aigle. They were repulsed with heavy losses.

"Second, on the centre there is relative calm along the entire front, which extends from Rheims to the Meuse. Between the Argonne and the Meuse we have made slight progress.

"In the Woevre district there have been severe battles. Our troops have advanced at several points, notably to the east of St. Mihiel, a town east of Triaucourt and southeast of Verdun. (East of St. Mihiel would be just across the French border from Metz.)

"Third, on our right wing, in Lorraine and the Vosges, there has been no change."

Must Assume Another Defensive.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The nineteenth day of the battle of the Aisne finds the allied armies pushing with all the strength they can bring to bear in their great effort to outflank the German right wing and force it back from its line of communications through Belgium.

There is evidence that this movement is beginning to tell, and that, unless something unforeseen happens, this portion of the German army must fall back to another defensive line.

Huge Increase in British Expenditure

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 1.—For the first half of the financial year ending yesterday, the British national revenue amounted approximately to $380,000,000, a decrease of $13,500,000 as compared with last year; while expenditures aggregated $670,000,000, showing an increase of nearly $230,000,000, due to the war.

Germans Cannonade Jap Positions

Tokio, Oct. 1.—A severe engagement has been opened by German warships, which cannonaded the Japanese positions near Tsing Tau, the seat of government of Kiao Chow, the German leased territory in China. Two officers were killed. German aeroplanes assisted the warships. A German torpedo boat destroyer was sunk in the harbor on Wednesday.

Tokio, Oct. 1.—A Japanese mine sweeper off Kiao Chow has been blown up and sunk. Three men were killed and thirteen others wounded. Another Japanese mine sweeper was damaged, one man was killed and six injured.

BASEBALL IN ARMOURIES

Two exciting games of indoor baseball took place last evening at the Armouries. In the first game which was a walk away for No. 4 Company over No. 3 winning by the score of 30 to 5.

In the second game after a lot of crabbing on both sides No. 5 beat No. 6, score being 12-10.

"Why do you feed every tramp who comes along? They never do any work for you."

"No," said his wife, "but is is quite a satisfaction to see a man eat a meal without finding fault with the cooking."

ITALY PROTESTS; AUSTRIA SUBMITS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Rome, Oct. 1.—The Austrian government has replied to the Italian protest against floating mines in the Adriatic. Austria deplores the sinking of Italian vessels and promises to take measures to remove the menace to shipping and to fully indemnify the families of the victims. It is reported that Italy demands an indemnity of $1,000,000.

British Warships To Aid Russians

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. — Captain R. Goetsche, in command of the Danish steamer United States, in yesterday from Christiansand, said that he had picked up a wireless in the North Sea containing the information that 30 British warships were on their way through the Kattegat to help the Russian fleet in the Baltic Sea.

INCREASING LIVE STOCK PRODUCTION.

THE OUTBREAK of the war in Europe and the consequent demand which is naturally to be expected for increased exports of meats, finds Canada in a very much denuded condition as regards live stock.

As a result of the removal of the American tariff on cattle, a heavy export trade developed to the south. In some districts in Eastern Canada nearly everything has been shipped out of the country, except dairy cows. This export trade, together with many farmers selling their calves for veal, can have but one result in Canada, viz., a greater scarcity of meat than at present exists, even in a normal market.

The meat industry in Canada should not be allowed to dwindle,—rather, the production of hogs, sheep and cattle on Canadian farms should be greatly increased. To obtain this increase does not mean that farmers should devote their whole attention to live stock. The majority of farmers will admit that with very little extra effort and expense they could increase by several head the live stock on their farms without in any way interfering with their present system of farming.

From reports to the Commission of Conservation, present conditions indicate a world-wide scarcity of live stock, with little likelihood of an overcrowded market for many years to come. The opportunity for Canadian farmers is, therefore, apparent. To take advantage of this, farmers should save their heifer calves to produce more cattle, while the others may be turned off, not as veal, but as beef.

Expert stockmen advise that there are good times ahead for those raising sheep. The high price of mutton and of wool, and the comparative ease with which a flock of sheep may be sustained upon land which is otherwise unsuitable for agriculture, should suggest a great increase in the number of sheep raised by Canadian farmers.

Increased production in hogs can be brought about more quickly than in any other class of live stock, and consequently should receive immediate attention.

Animal production on the farm is desirable because it increases the fertility and crop-raising ability of the soil. Good prices are sure to be obtained for any surplus which farmers will have to sell, on account of the inevitable shortage of supply resulting from war conditions in Europe. These two conditions should be an incentive to Canadian farmers to increase their live stock production. A [illegible] foresight now, with modern methods of feeding, will make increased production [illegible] possible.

HOW THE COLONIES AIDED BRITAIN.

THE PUBLICATION of two White Papers containing the correspondence relating to the naval and military assistance offered to the British Government by the overseas dominions, and the gifts of foodstuffs and other supplies similarly offered, has had the effect of demonstrating to the world that the British Empire stands in truth solidly united. The European war has served only to weld more tightly the bonds which link together the various self-governing states. The published lists are not short ones.

Canada, besides placing the SS. Niobe and Rainbow with officers and men at the disposal of His Majesty for general service in the Royal Navy, has contributed one complete division of 31,200 to the expeditionary force now operating on the continent, and has organized in addition one cavalry regiment, two horse artillery batteries, one infantry battalion of ex-regulars, and three other units each of one thousand men.

The Commonwealth of Australia is providing divisions and one brigade of light horse, besides transferring to the King's naval forces all vessels of the Commonwealth Navy and all officers and seamen. She is arranging also for the despatch, early in November, of another infantry brigade, and an additional brigade of light horse.

New Zealand is contributing one Mounted Rifles brigade, one field artillery brigade, and one infantry brigade, with proportional supply columns, while a contingent of Maoris, two hundred strong, is being sent to Egypt.

Newfoundland, after raising the naval reserve forces of the Dominion to 1,000, is sending to the front an expeditionary force of 500 men.

South Africa has taken over the defence of the Union, thus releasing the British troops in garrison in Africa. She has, moreover, undertaken all necessary operations against the existing German colonies in her neighborhood.

The various gifts of food-stuffs and other supplies may be summarized as follows:

Canada: 98 million lbs. of flour from the Dominion, 500,000 bushels of oats from Alberta, 1,000,000 tons of coal from Nova Scotia, 4,000,000 lbs. of cheese from the province of Quebec, 100,000 bushels of oats from Prince Edward Island, 250,000 bags of flour from the province of Ontario, 1,500 horses from the province of Saskatchewan, 100,000 bushels of potatoes from the province of New Brunswick, 4,900,000 lbs. of flour from the province of Manitoba, and 25,000 cases of canned salmon from British Columbia.

Australia: 1,000 gallons of port from Messrs. Cullen & Wallace, Victoria, for the sick and wounded soldiers in hospital; butter, bacon, beef, condensed milk and arrowroot, suitable for army purposes, together with 50 cases of condensed milk for the children of the Empire, collected by the Brisbane Newspaper Co.. Barbadoes, $100,000; British Guiana, 1,000 tons of sugar; Falkland Islands, $15,000 to the National Relief Fund; Jamaica, a gift of sugar; Leeward Islands, $25,000; Mauritius, 1,000,000 lbs. of sugar for the Army, and 1,000 lbs. of sugar for the Navy; Southern Rhodesia, a gift of maize.

This is the list up to date. More gifts are coming in every week, and this fact illustrates one of the great resources of the Empire in time of war.

BUSINESS AS USUAL.

"BUSINESS AS USUAL" is the rallying cry in Great Britain, and apparently is going on as usual in all centres. Nevertheless many complain of slow payment, and while orders are being sent in the payment for same is not always so certain. London's shipping districts appear busy and apparently those people who have the cash are endeavouring to make the slogan a reality. At least this has helped to keep many firms open. Patriotism has asserted itself in every walk of business life and firms are not only keeping open the jobs of those who go on active service either as soldiers or nurses, but hundreds of military establishments have announced that their employees will be kept at work making clothes for the soldiers. Thousands of householders are keeping their domestic help, not because they can afford it, but in order to give the girls a home during the war. In cases where it is absolutely impossible to pay the domestics, they are kept and notes are given them for their salaries.

The big jewelry stores are suffering badly, but so far none of them have closed, and the West End shops appear to have a full complement of clerks despite fewer customers.

It is impossible to find a restaurant in London which has advanced prices, from Lockhart which supplies the workingmen with a one-cent cup of tea to the most expensive hostelry in the West End, and many of the chains of eating houses, like Lyons, announce by means of huge notices in their windows that they have not advanced prices. When it is recollected that many of these firms have had their services partially crippled owing to the Government having commandeered their waggons, horses and automobiles, the announcement is noteworthy.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SIR EDWARD H. CARSON, leader of the Irish Unionists, outlined the Ulster program of the future, in addressing the Unionist Council. "I propose," he said, "when the war is over, to summon a provisional government, and I propose that their first act should be to repeal the Home Rule Bill so far as Ulster is concerned."

A REPORT received at Geneva from Munich estimates that 2,000,000 men and women are idle in Germany, and that the number of unemployed is increasing daily. A lack of raw materials, it is said, is the cause.

IT IS usual in time of peace to speak of the aristocracy in Britain as England's rickety nobility, but the heroism displayed on the field of battle in the present war shows that the nobility is maintaining its military traditions.

Figured on the Building, Forgot the Bricks.

(Edmonton Daily Capital.)

When Bernhardi wrote his book on "The Next War" he estimated Great Britain as a non-military country, eliminating her from the calculations in this capacity and making his prognostications upon a basis of Germany's armies as contrasted with France. But when the war came, Britain had one hundred thousand men on the continent within a few days. Now she has 140,000. The program for the future provides that Britain will increase the regular army to 1,200,000, the territorials to 300,000, the reserves to 214,000, India sends 70,000, Canada 40,000, Australia 20,000 and New Zealand 10,000. This host constitutes a factor in the war game upon which Bernhardi failed to figure. Meanwhile, France, to the west, has something like 3,500,000 men under arms. On the west, Russia is reported to have 2,000,000 men on the front in Galicia, Poland and Prussia, another army to commence the battle in Galicia, behind these a second army of 900,000 men so close to the front that the Russians await their arrival; reinforcements of 3,000,000, and behind these a third army of 2,000,000 more. Germany, so the best available information seems to indicate, has something like 5,500,000 men in the field. To get these she has called out the last available man. Beardless boys and silver-haired patriarchs are with her armies. Austria, as a military factor, is almost totally destroyed before the war has really begun. Britain can nearly double the army now preparing for the war. Russia could treble hers. France is in no worse position, so far as the extent of her drafting is concerned. Bernhardi's calculations, which seem to have seized the German imagination so thoroughly as to have been a great factor in precipitating the war, are much like those of the contractor who figured on the building but forgot to include the bricks.

TIME'S GARDEN.

(By Isabel Ecclestone Mackay.)

Years are the seedlings which we careless sow
In Time's bare garden. Dead they seem to be—
Dead years! We sigh and cover them with mould,
But though the vagrant wind blow hot, blow cold,
No hint of life beneath the dust we see:
Then comes the magic hour when we are old,
And lo! they stir and blossom wondrously.

Strange spectral blooms in spectral spots aglow!
Here a great rose and here a ragged tare;
And here pale, scentless blossoms without name,
Robbed to enrich this poppy formed of flame.
Here springs some heart's-ease, scattered unaware;
Here hawthorn-bloom, to show the way Love came;
Here asphodel to image Love's despair!

When I am old and master of the Spell
To raise these garden ghosts of memory,
My feet will turn aside from common ways,
Where common flowers mark the common days,
To one green plot; and there I know will be
Fairest of all (O perfect beyond praise!)
The year you gave, Beloved, your rosemary!

THE CARVERS

By Walt Mason

We used to call it gripes, when we had stomach trouble, and all our inward pipes would ache and bend us double. It was a common ill that caused no awe or wonder, and granny's simple skill full soon would knock it under. The poor men in their cots, the rich man in his castle, were often tied in knots, and with the gripes would wrastle. A dose of home-made dope would quell the dire upheaval, restoring faith and hope, displacing pain and evil. But now the doctor comes—his science sure a blight is!—he looks and haws and hums, and cries, "Appendicitis!" He promptly spoils your peave, and makes your courage mizzle, as from his old valise he takes a saw and chisel, a cleaver and some dirks, and how the patient hollers, when he removes one's works, and charges ninety dollars! The docs are done with pills, in this and other nations; no matter what your ills, they call for "operations." Lumbago in our backs, the jaundice and hay fever, demand the saw and axe, the hatchet and the cleaver. The druggist's trade is poor, and soon he will be starving; the doctor's only cure, these modern days, is carving.

FLOGGING IN THE GERMAN NAVY

In the month of August the German cruiser Madgeburg ran ashore in the Baltic and fell into the hands of the Russians. When her new owners searched her a singular discovery was made. It is thus described in a dispatch from Petrograd, dated Sept. 3, appearing in the London Morning Post:—

"Considerable sensation has been created here by discoveries made on board the German cruiser "Madgeburg," that was blown up after going ashore at the entrance of the Finnish Gulf. Among the articles lying about the decks on the after part, where boats were lowered for the majority of the crew to escape on the accompanying destroyers were several scepimens of the old "cat of nine tails." When the Russian authorities went through the ship they found one of these instruments in every officer's cabin, and all bore signs of long, and, in some cases, of hard usage.

"These curious attributes of naval rank are all alike in having a handle eight inches long, with a loop for the wrist. From the other end depend nine leather thongs of formidable appearance, nearly as thick as the little finger, and twelve inches long. In each case the officer's name was inscribed on the handle. These "cats" were handed round for Press inspection last night at the Naval General Staff headquarters. Those left lying on deck had apparently played their habitual part in speeding-up the German 'Jackies' during the nervous operation of lowering the boats to escape from the cruiser lying comfortably aground. It is considered here that the little instruments tell a most interesting and significant story of the procedure on board the ships of the Royal German Navy, and provide yet another illustration of the systematic savagery of that Germanism dating from 1870, which has replaced the good old culture of an earlier and better Germany.

"The public are also to have an opportunity of inspecting these latest-discovered instruments of Prussian culture."

SOME QUEER COINS IN USE

West Coast of Africa Coins the Queerest.

Among the strangest coins in the world are those used in certain out-of-the-way towns and villages in Southwest Nigeria, on the west coast of Africa, and called "manillas.' In shape they resemble a horseshoe with the two extremities flattened out like a camel's foot. Being made of solid copper, three-eighths of an inch thick, they weigh over eight ounces each. In "face value," seven of these queer coins are equivalent to one quarter, so that a dollar's worth would be an uncomforatbly heavy load. Not only are these "manillas" used among the natives, but white traders accept them as legal tender for goods sold at the various stores. At one time this strangely shaped money had quite a large circulation in certain parts of the coast, but its use is now restricted to a few bush towns and one or two of the smaller seaboard places, including Bonny, Brass and Akassa. "Manillas" are now very difficult to obtain, and curio-collectors value them not solely by reason of their scarcity, but because of the novel serviette rings they make when silver-plated.

PRAYERS FOR PEACE

Likely Government Will Set Aside Special Day for Purpose.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 1.—It is understood the Government will accede to the request of the Methodist general conference and other bodies for the setting aside of a special day fo prayers of peace.

It has been intimated that an observance of this kind should be general throughout the empire, and if this is done the Canadian day of prayer would be simultaneous with that in the other dominions.

In any event it is intimated that a date will be selected specially for such invocations in Canada.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Official advices from Mexico City yesterday announced the issuance of a decree annulling all mine titles granted during the Huerta administration.

The St. Thomas City Council has borrowed $18,000 from the surplus funds of the local Hydro-Electric department for the purpose of continuing local improvements.

John Lally, 69, for the past twenty years lockmaster on the Cornwall Canal, died of appendicitis at the Hotel Dieu in Cornwall yesterday morning. He was not ill a week.

The Order of the Iron Cross, first and second-class, has been conferred on Prince William of Hohenzollern. His daughter is the wife of Manuel, the former King of Portugal.

The Canadian postal department has placed a ban on The Fatherland, a New York paper, which purported to present an unprejudiced account of the war, but was grossly pro-German.

Despondent because of his inability to secure enough money to get married, Owen Nett, an Englishman, aged 22, of Toronto, committed suicide Tuesday night by inhaling illuminated gas.

Chester Spearman, 62 years old, of Richmond, 20 miles from Ottawa, was gored to death Tuesday by a bull on his own farm. Neighbors found the mangled body in a field near his home early yesterday morning.

Powder exploding yesterday in the plant of the Pain Fireworks Co., at Chicago, wrecked the building and killed three persons. The structure was situated just outside the principal business district of the city.

BOMBS HIT WARSHIP.

Japanese Aviators Say They Struck Vessel During Attack on Kiaochau.

TOKIO, Oct. 1.—It is asserted by Japanese aviators that they struck a German warship with bombs dropped from a height of 2,100 feet during the last engagement at the port of Kiaochau. A monoplane and two biplanes were engaged in the assault. The wings of the three machines were riddled with rifle bullets, but they succeeded in returning to the Japanese lines without incident.

A considerable force has been landed from the Japanese fleet and is now co-operating with the land forces. Laoche, described as a town of some importance, has fallen. Four field guns were taken in the assault.

The outer defences of the beleaguered stronghold of the Germans are said in high official circles to have been captured by the British and Japanese assaulting columns.

SECRET PACT DENIED.

Report Was Set In Circulation to Arouse Antagonism.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1. — Official and diplomatic quarters united yesterday in discrediting a published report of a secret Anglo-Japanese agreement under which Japan was to have a free hand in China, was to be permitted to send Japanese immigrants to all parts of the British Empire, which would include Canada and Australia, and was to have a British loan of $200,000,000, while Japanese troops were to assist in putting down disaffection in British India.

At the British Embassy it was stated that official warning had been sent from London some time ago to be on the watch for such a report. British officials having advised the Home Government that the report would be set in circulation for the purpose of arousing antagonism.

Preparing For Winter Campaign.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 1.—(Via London.)—Germans are pushing forward with utmost vigor their preparations for a winter campaign. Until recently apparently, they had not conceived such an eventuality, but in the last few weeks they have learned much.

All the high class shops that formerly did nothing but make the best fur garments for ladies, are busily engaged in the manufacture of sheepskin clothing for soldiers, and no fewer than 150,000 fur coats have been delivered, presumably for the use of officers. Two million sheep and lamb skins have been bought by the Government for winter garments for the men.

A KIDNAPING

It Was Not for Ransom, but for a Benefit to the Kidnaped

BY MARTHA V. MONROE.

Rudolf Kenyon at sixteen graduated from the high school of the town in which he lived. He was a bright boy and would have been glad to go to college, but his mother had done all she could for him, and it was time he began to do for her. Consequently he must go to work.

The graduating exercises were over, the pupils had been handed their diplomas, and Rudolf started for his home to tell his mother all about it. Leaving the main thoroughfare, he entered the quiet street in which he lived, having still half a dozen blocks to go to reach his home, when an automobile that was being driven in the direction he was walking stopped at the curb a few yards ahead of him, a man alighted, took him by the arm and forced him into the car. Rudolf was physically no match for the man and offered little resistance. Once in the car he was powerless to call assistance, for it was a closed vehicle, and his captor at once drew down the curtains.

That he was kidnaped to be held for ransom did not occur to the boy for several reasons. In the first place, the man who had taken him was a mild mannered person, with no resemblance to the class of common kidnapers. In the second place, kidnaping was associated in Rudolf's mind with little children, too young to serve as effective witnesses against their captors. Thirdly, the man told him in a reassuring voice that he would be at no discomfort whatever. As they drove along he asked Rudolf a few questions.

"Do you remember your father?"

"No; he died when I was a little child."

"Has your mother ever spoken to you of him?"

"I don't remember that she has."

"And you have never had the curiosity to ask about him?"

"Indeed, I have, but have not done so because to mention him always gives my mother pain."

The man paused in his questions and seemed to be thinking. Then he asked another:

"Have you ever gathered from your mother or any one else that your father while living acted in a reprehensible manner?"

"No one has ever talked to me about him. The impression that I have received from my mother is that she mourned him as any widow would mourn her husband."

This seemed to produce a decided effect on the man sitting beside Rudolf. Again there was a pause, at the end of which came another question.

"Then you have never heard your mother say that your father was a bad man?"

"Certainly not."

The man seemed to be profoundly moved. He attempted to take the boy's hand in his, but Rudolf drew away, and his captor did not renew the attempt. They were some time in the car, at the end of which they turned into the grounds of a handsome house, and the car drew up under a porte-cochere at the end of the porch. The man got out and beckoned Rudolf to follow him.

"Come into the house with me," he said to the boy. "I have something to tell you. If after you have had plenty of time to consider what I shall say to you you wish to go home you will be sent there."

This not only caused Rudolf to feel easy, but by this time his curiosity was excited to learn something about this man who had asked him questions about his father and had kidnaped him on the very day he had been graduated from the high school. On entering the house a maid appeared, and the man told her to show the boy to a room and he was to come down to luncheon in half an hour. The maid did as required, speaking kindly to her charge and showing him every attention. The time did not seem long before she informed him that luncheon was ready. On going down stairs he found his captor in the library. Rudolf, so far as he had noticed the man's appearance, had done so regarding him as an enemy. Now that this feeling had worn off he was surprised to see a gentleman who gave evidence of refinement. He led the boy into the dining room, luxuriously furnished, and a butler stood ready to serve the luncheon.

"I shall not eat anything," said Rudolf, "till I have had an opportunity to send my mother a message."

"That you may do. Has your mother a telephone?"

"No, but our next door neighbor has one, and we are permitted to use it."

"Show him the telephone booth," said the host to the butler.

Rudolf went to the booth, called for his mother and found her much worried at his failure to return to her after the school exercises. He gave her a brief account of what had happened, finding her an excellent listener, but when he asked her for his views as to who his captor might be and what were his intentions he found her uncommunicative. As soon as he told her he had been promised that after he had listened to what the stranger had to say and had time to consider it he might go home she seemed much relieved and told him not to try to escape, but await further developments.

On leaving the telephone Rudolf found his captor-host waiting for him in the dining room, and the two sat down to such a luncheon as the boy had never tasted before. While they were eating the gentleman talked, but not about what Rudolf wished to hear—an explanation of this strange captivity. He asked Rudolf what he proposed to do now that he had left school, and when Rudolf told him that he was going to hunt for a position in business the other shook his head.

"You will never succeed in business," he said.

"Why do you say that?"

"By the shape of your head and the expression of your face I judge that you were born for an intellectual career. How would you like to go to college?"

"Oh, I should like that above all things. But I can't. Mother has done everything for me up to this time, and now that I am nearly a man I must begin the work of taking care of her."

The host seemed to wince at this and remained quiet for a time. Then he continued:

"If certain arrangements can be made which I shall propose to you, will you go to college?"

This quite took Rudolf's breath away. For one year during which his mother was ill she had been obliged to put him in a store as errand boy. This had given the natural distaste there was in him for business an opportunity to crop out. The bare idea of going to college filled him with delight.

"Where will the money come from?" he asked.

"I will furnish that."

Rudolf, though intent upon knowing more, thrust back the next question that was on his tongue and applied himself to a delicacy which the butler served him.

When the luncheon was finished his host led him to the library, pointed to an easy chair, then, seating himself in another, said:

"Rudolf, your father is not dead; he is very much alive."

The boy started, then sat looking at the speaker, waiting hungrily for more.

"He came to America from England about twenty years ago. He was the son of a nobleman, and in that country they have what they call a law of entail, which settles the family estate on the oldest son. Your father was the second son. He came to America, met your mother, who was then a beautiful girl, fell in love with her and married her. After you were born his father in England sent for him to come back—without his wife—and a proposition would be made to him. He accepted the invitation. His father told him that his older brother had received an injury while hunting from which he would never recover. If your father would remain in England, divorce his American wife and marry among his peers in England he should be put in possession of the title and estates. Your father after much persuasion wrote your mother of this proposition. She consented to it and obtained a divorce on the ground of desertion. Your father married again, and his wife died childless a year ago.

"These are the bare facts. I shall neither try to excuse your father nor to condemn him. That I leave for your mother to do. I will say, however, that he condemns himself bitterly."

"Where is my father now?" asked Rudolf, wondering.

"Here; I am your father."

There was a pause, after which the boy asked why he had been kidnaped.

"I came to America to make amends for what I have done. Your mother can best be made to forgive me through the one she loves best—her son. I desired to tell you the story in my own way and send my supplications for forgiveness to her through you. You are free to go back to her this afternoon and ask her if she will receive a visit from me."

Rudolf sprang to his feet. "I will go now; I am sure she will do as I wish, and I wish that she shall forgive you."

The car was ordered, and the two went hand in hand to the porte-cochere. There Rudolf threw his arms about his father's neck, kissed him and was carried away.

When Rudolf reached home his mother asked him to give her a couple of hours of quiet thought in her room and then she would give him her decision. For awhile she found it hard to conquer rebellious feelings against the husband who had deserted her, but memories of her early happy married life softened her heart.

Rudolf went back with a favorable reply. He remained at the house his father had temporarily taken during his stay in America while his father went for an interview which the boy hoped and prayed might bring a family reunion. During the time that he was left alone he was treated with every attention by the servants, but so great was his impatience to learn what might be the result of the interview between his parents that he found no enjoyment in the luxury by which he was surrounded. On the third day after his father's departure the car pulled up under the porte-cochere. Rudolf ran out eagerly. His father alighted, then—heaven be praised—handed out his mother. Rudolf ran to her, and she caught him in her arms.

What further explanation the boy received was given by his mother. The pair had just been married a second time and were to live together. The husband and father was now Earl of Edgerton, and the son was heir to the title and estates.

Its Only Guise.

New diseases or new cures are always of interest to the reading public. Therefore an enthusiastic reporter believed a story lay in waiting because of a rumor that germs of a new disease had been discovered. He located the doctor responsible for the find and questioned him.

"In what guise," he asked, "do these germs appear?"

The doctor smiled. "You needn't be afraid," he said. "This is to be a fashionable disease and will appear only in the guys with money."—New York Tribune.

ANY DYSPEPTIC CAN GET WELL

By Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Says Capt. Swan

Life is very miserable to those who suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach and Biliousness. This letter from Captain Swan (one of the best known skippers on the Great Lakes) tells how to get quick relief from Stomach Trouble.

PORT BURWELL, ONT., May 8th, 1913.

"A man has a poor chance of living and enjoying life when he cannot eat. That was what was wrong with me. Loss of appetite and indigestion was brought on by Constipation. I have had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered constantly. For the last couple of years, I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. I am sure that "Fruit-a-tives" have helped me greatly. By following the diet rules and taking "Fruit-a-tives" according to directions, any person with Dyspepsia will get benefit".

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box 6 for $2.50, or trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson I.—Fourth Quarter, For Oct. 4, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xiv, 1-11. Memory Verses, 8, 9—Golden Text, Mark xiv, 8—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This lesson consists of two parts, the anointing at Bethany and the agreement of Judas Iscariot with the chief priests to betray Him. The anointing is recorded by Matthew, Mark and John; the mention of the passover and of the sin of Judas by Matthew, Mark and Luke. According to Matt. xxvi, 1, 2, it was after Jesus had finished the sayings of chapters xxiv and xxv and two days before the passover that He spoke of His approaching betrayal and crucifixion, and we would conclude from Matthew and Mark that the supper and anointing took place at that time.

From the account in John xii it would seem that it was six days before the passover and preceding the so called triumphal entry that they had the supper and anointing. It seems impossible to arrange clearly sometimes the sequence of all the events in our Lord's life, but the gospels were written that we might know Himself rather than the order of events in His life.

It is to some confusing that, while Luke does not record this anointing, he does mention an anointing in chapter vii, 36-50, which was also in the house of a man called Simon. But that was an altogether different event, much earlier in His ministry and by a woman whose name is not given, whose sins He forgave. The event of our lesson was in the home of Martha and Mary in Bethany, whose brother, Lazarus, had been raised from the dead (John xii, 1, 2). Matthew and Mark say that it was in the house of Simon the leper, but what relation he was to Martha and Mary we are not told and therefore do not need to know. If we think of it, and it seems wise to do so, we can ask them when we see them. John says that Lazarus sat at the table with Him. What a suggestive saying! The man who had been four days in the spirit world back on earth alive and well—a man whom the chief priests consulted to put to death because that by reason of him many of the Jews went away and believed in Jesus (John xii, 9-11).

At this supper Martha served, but there is no record of her being cumbered as in Luke x, 40, so we may hope that she had grown spiritually since that incident.

In view of such words as Phil. iv, 6, 7; I Pet. v, 7, we should never be cumbered or anxious. The words "They made Him a supper" make us think of His post ascension words in Rev. iii, 20, and of the blessed assurance that if any one will open the door He will come in and sup with them.

As He sat at meat Mary came with an alabaster box containing a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and she broke the box and poured it on His head and anointed His feet and wiped His feet with her hair (verse 3; Matt. xvi, 7; John xii, 3). Not only was the house filled with the odor of the ointment, but also the whole world, for He said in verse 9 that wherever in all the world the gospel should be preached, this that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her.

This was real worship on the part of Mary, heart adoration, and it was very costly on her part and very precious to His heart. We are reminded of a saying of David in II Sam. xiv, 24, "Neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which doth cost me nothing." Some one has said that in Martha, Mary and Lazarus we have a sample of a well rounded Christian life—in Martha restful service, in Mary real worship and in Lazarus the power of a risen life.

There will always be some indignant ones when more than ordinary (which is ordinarily very little) is given to Him. It will be called a waste and by other names, while all spent upon ourselves will seem all right. Judas Iscariot is called a thief in John xii, 6, but what about the thieves of Mal. iii, 8? If His love to us does not constrain us to spend more for Him than on ourselves then it is evident that we love ourselves most.

How comforting His word "Let her alone, * * * she hath wrought a good work on me" (verse 6). Would that some other faultfinding meddlers might hear His "Let alone!" If we are sure that we are doing all "Unto Him" we may be confident of His approval whatever others may say. His other word, "She hath done what she could" (verse 8), we may not be as sure of, for of how few can it be said that we have done all that we could. He is the judge and will surely give all possible credit that He can.

He said that she anointed His body beforehand for burying, and I believe that was her purpose, that she so intended it, for it was her custom, when she could to sit at His feet and hear His word. She was not found with the other women who bought spices to anoint His dead body and never used them for that purpose. She seemed to understand about His cruel death at the hand of His enemies and that she could not minister to Him then, so, having made her preparation, she watched for her opportunity, and He arranged it for her, for he read her heart. How awful the contrast between the heart of Judas Iscariot and this devoted heart that loved Him so!

Too Late For Him.

"We have the most beautiful sunrises in the world."

"So I have heard."

"Never seen one?"

"No; I often thought I would sit up long enough to witness one of these grand sights, but I always get sleepy and go to bed before the time."

ONLY SIXTEEN, GIRL VERY SICK

Tells How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

New Orleans, La.—"I take pleasure in writing these lines to express my gratitude to you. I am only 16 years old and work in a tobacco factory. I have been a very sick girl but I have improved wonderfully since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now looking fine and feeling a thousand times better."—Miss AMELIA JAQUILLARD, 3961 Tchoupitoulas St., New Orleans, La.

St. Clair, Pa.—"My mother was alarmed because I was troubled with suppression and had pains in my back and side, and severe headaches. I had pimples on my face, my complexion was sallow, my sleep was disturbed, I had nervous spells, was very tired and had no ambition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has worked like a charm in my case and has regulated me. I worked in a mill among hundreds of girls and have recommended your medicine to many of them."—Miss ESTELLA MAGUIRE, 110 Thwing St., St. Clair, Pa.

There is nothing that teaches more than experience. Therefore, such letters from girls who have suffered and were restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be a lesson to others. The same remedy is within reach of all.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Adaptability.

"That man is very adaptable."

"Yes. When he has a picture taken he can even look as if he were used to sitting in the elegantly carved furniture they use in photograph galleries."—Washington Star.

Huh!

Bacon—Some one is suggesting that the figures of our soldiers be put on our postage stamps.

Egbert—Well, they'd be hard to "lick," you know.—Yonkers Statesman.

Finishing Him.

"Marry me," he said.

"Marry you?" exclaimed the maid. "I wouldn't marry you if you drove the only six cylinder car in existence."—Detroit Free Press.

A Dangerous Practice.

"My son is going where he can get some ozone in his system."

"He'd better be careful how he takes to them drugs."—Baltimore American.

A Symptom.

"Here's a critic says the drama is in its second childhood."

"I notice it has taken to playing in the mud."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Deserters

ARTEMUS WARD, the famous American humorist, whose humor sometimes was a lance-thrust, once said that he was willing to sacrifice all his first wife's relations on the altar of his country. Many a man has been willing to let others do his fighting for him—willing, also, to share the rewards of peace and victory. Men of this type belong to the deserter class.

In Canada are hundreds of business firms striving with all their might to make better times for themselves and their communities. To them all honor.

But there are other firms—manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers—who are "standing pat," "playing safe," doing absolutely nothing to build up business. They are mere lookers on, not participants in the valorous struggle of their brethren to maintain and establish good times.

Look about you and you will find in the advertising columns of this and other newspapers many messages from firms with a sturdy confidence in the future.

Lifter or Leaner—which are you?

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

(Special Correspondence.)

Norwood, Oct. 1.—A special meeting of the Public Library Board was held on Monday evening of this week when it was decided to postpone action in regard to securing a Carnegie grant until some time early in next year.

Messrs. R. G. Lawlor, J. E. Roxburgh and P. M. Grover were appointed book committee to look after the purchase of our usual supply of new books. It is expected that quite a number of the best books will be placed at the disposal of the library patrons during the month of October.

Drivers of automobiles who are accustomed to tear through our village at from 30 to 40 miles an hour should take warning as offenders will in the future be called to account. The practise of furious driving is becoming a nuisance as well as being dangerous to the pedestrians who also have certain rights and privileges in the use of the highways. Besides a little revenue derived in this way will go to improve our streets so that when they do drive in excess of the lawful speed limit they may at least enjoy a smooth road bed.

The Norwood Patriotic Committee were much gratified by the results of Monday's campaign when some 16 or 17 collectors who covered the village of Norwood and surrounding country rolled up the magnificent amount of over twelve hundred dollars. The committee aimed at raising $1000 but when the subscriptions passed that mark and reached nearly one quarter more it is stating it mild to say they were delighted.

The people of this vicinity are to be complimented on their practical patriotism. It is seen now that our patriotism is certainly something more than three cheers and flag waving. The old saying that money talks is no less true when it comes to patriotism than in many other things. We have given some of our men and some of our money too.

Mr. J. R. McKelvie has a squad of men drilling at the armouries three nights a week so that if more men are needed we may yet have a few to offer who are not wholly foreign to the use of arms, and the evolutions of the military squad. Our rifle club is also putting in faithful practise so that should the Germans appear on the scene we will not be wholly unprepared for them.

The Daughters of the Empire have made arrangements with the directors of the Norwood Fair to have the fair grounds and buildings opened on the first night of the fair. A small admission will be charged and the funds obtained will be used if necessary for patriotic purposes.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

The Ontario Rock Company sent the league $53 to aid them in their great work.

Wednesday was Flag Day for the children and they certainly did their part in the work. But as yet do not know the proceeds.

Moving on Suwalki

Southern Army is Now on Plains of Hungary.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 1.—The army under Gen. Rennenkampf has advanced along the railway from Grodno to Augustow and is now moving on Suwalki, where the Kaiser has his headquarters. In the fighting between Grodno and Druskeniki the Germans, under Gen. Von Hindenberg, were driven from strongly intrenched positions.

Three great Rusisan armies are now operating against the Germans and Austrians, in addition with the two minor forces which mark the extreme north and south of the Russian battle lines.

Gen. Rennenkampf is repelling the Germans' attempted invasion north of Poland into the Province of Grodno and Vilna.

Heading southwest from Warsaw a new army of fresh troops is pushing in the direction of Breslau, with its left wing in a position to co-operate with the third big army which is pursuing the Austrians westward toward Cracow.

The Russian forces on the extreme left wing have penetrated the Carpathians at three points, and are now on the plains of Hungary, within 120 miles of Budapest. The three defiles in the mountain ranges, through which they are pouring are Dukla Pass, Sanok Pass and Usock Pass. Through two of them run railways, which the Russians now control, to points in the southern foothills.

The fighting along the East Prussian frontier, in which the Russians have been successful in extending their front 80 miles, has resulted in the repulse of all the German attempts to force a passage of the River Niemen. This statement is contained in a despatch from the Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co.

Cape Jackets.

Some of the short jackets of tailored suits have two or three short capes falling just below the shoulders in the back and in the front a sort of revers as a necessary complement of the capes. These jackets are very good looking. Especially when they are developed in bright blue serge or gaberdine, perhaps with red buttons and a white collar, they have a quite military look.

THE DEADLY SUBMARINE

So much has been written concerning what the submarine, by a flight of imagination, may achieve, writes the naval correspondent of the London Morning Post, that most people are somewhat uncertain as to what the submarine actually is and does. To begin with, she is shaped like a cigar, and she carries a tower on her back. Inside the tubular steel hull, valves and tubes and pipes line the walls; aft, in a space so low that the engineers can hardly stand upright, and the internal combustion engines and the electric motors which drive the vessel when she is under water. Below the floor, on deck, of the inside of the hull are petrol and stores. Forward are the torpedo tubes. Amidships there projects downwards from the ceiling a thick brass column ending in a brass cross-piece. This is the base of the periscope. When the boat is submerged and the officer desires to see what is going on above, he sets a hand on each arm of the cross-piece, which is level with his face, and rotates the column, while he looks into the mirror. In the mirror he beholds an image, little and bright of the sea and horizon, and by swinging it around he can scan the whole circle, reflected in the periscope above, which is the eye of the steel fish. Alongside the periscope is the upright steel ladder leading through two hatches to the deck of the coning tower, which is raised five or six feet above the top of the hull. It is about four feet in diameter, and is protected by a breast-high rail lined with canvas. Here is the wheel, and here, when the vessel is running awash, stand the captain and the quartermaster. In fine weather those of the crew who are not required below are grouped on the little half-deck below the conning tower, just above the steel hull itself. Officers and men are dressed in sea-boots, sweaters and rough clothing.

What She Does.

The submarine running awash forges sullenly onwards with a heavy grinding noise, the water lifting and dripping from the gills which project on either side of her snout. Below, the hull is filled with the crashing of the rarious engines cramped into the narrow tube of steel. The engineers squat placidly among the racing rods and pistons, in the thick atmosphere tainted with fumes. Should the sea-water enter the hull and mix with petrol gas, the fatal chlorine gas is formed, and the crew are suffocated.

The method of the submarine is to cruise at economical speed, ten knots or less, on the surface, until she sights a hostile vessel. As she is so small she can see another vessel before the other vessel can see her. Then she sinks. The captain and the crew go below; the hatches are closed; and the captain, swinging his weight upon the cross-piece from the periscope, his eye upon the mirror, gives his orders. The crew are lying along the sides, ready to turn valves on or off. The internal combustion engines are stopped and the propeller shaft is connected up to the electric motors. There is a sudden silence.

The Captain's Business.

The process of submerging is a process in the brain of the captain. He has a mental picture of what each tank contains, and how much weight is driven out forward or aft at each order, and what will be the effect upon the vessel. He communicates this process to the vessel itself. He must first dip her bows slightly, then her stern, then bows again, and so on. If he makes a mistake the submarine may dive down, and then all is done. The process is reflected in the brain of his lieutenant, who stands near by the captain. In ordinary vessels, if an officer faints or makes a mistake, there are a dozen people at hand who can put it right, because they know what ought to be done. Not so in the submarine. The only person besides the captain who knows what is going on is his lieutenant; but the consequences of a mistake would follow so quickly that the lieutenant could not rectify it. Nor would he know in all probability that a mistake had been made until the consequences began. The men lying beside the valves know nothing except how to do what they are told. Nor is there any sensation of motion as the boat sinks. It seems to be as still as a drawing-room on shore.

The Attack.

The periscope, which is about the size of a saucer, remains about eighteen inches above the surface, and, viewed from the deck of a ship, all that is seen is a flitting pennant of white spray, as it cuts the waves, like a sea-bird's wing. In any lop it would be almost imperceptible at two or three hundred yards.

Upon approaching to attack the submarine sinks lower and submerges her periscope, so that her captain, looking in the mirror, sees his little and bright picture washed out in green—the green of the water. And from above nothing is visible at all.

The submarine is now blind. She cannot see through water. But she can steer a course. Her captain has made his calculations before he submerged his periscope. And the range of a German torpedo is about 3,000 yards at 25 to 30 knots. The submarine can fire her torpedoes, go about, presently rising until her periscope is above water, then herself continue beneath the surface until it is safe to rise, and like a whale, to breathe again.

Tommies Like Music

"Tommy Atkins" has never taken kindly to the abolition of the regimental band on active service. He likes to go into battle to music, and, in fact, it has been found necessary to retain a few pipers with the Scottish regiments, and a limited number of fifers with the Irish, but the British "Tommies" have been deprived of their music, and have supplied it themselves. The soldiers now go into battle whistling, and whistling has become a voluntary part of their drill. No one who has not heard a regiment marching, every man whistling in time, can imagine how inspiring it it. One of the most interesting features of this improvised music is the rehabilitation of the Marseillaise. Of course everyone knows that it is the national air of France, but in England it has been appropriated by the Socialists. Now, however, it is the favorite marching tune of the British soldiers who are fighting alongside the French and every British regiment is whistling it on the march.

LEADERSHIP AND LORDSHIP

"Under the heading "Leadership Versus Lordship," the well-known New York weekly journal, the Independent, publishes a striking article, which may be quoted in part. It illustrates vividly the way in which Americans find themselves compelled to sympathise with the cause of the allies.

Descriptions of Berlin behavior on the day William II drove in from Potsdam, made his balcony speech and declared war, are strange reading for Americans. It is difficult for us to get into the mental attitude of a populace intelligent but powerless, waiting to be told by an owner whether "his people" were to be driven forth to slaughter or permitted to go on with peaceful pursuits.

Self-conscious abjectness is for us unthinkable, while the scene in the House of Commons, where the freely chosen representatives of a democracy, tense with an overwhelming sense of responsibility, were calmly asking what national honor and moral obligation demanded of them, holds us breathless with its reality.

Never before in the world's history has the distinction between leadership and lordship been so sharply drawn. Political thinking, and, let us hope, thinking on all the problems of social democracy, has been clarified, for all time to come.

The apologists for privilege, for divine right, for ecclesiastical authority, strive unwearyingly to bemuddle the popular mind upon the relations of the few and the many, the minority and the majority, to efficiency and to truth. What do the many know, they say, about managing a business, operating a railroad, planning a military campaign? To such questions, put in this question-begging way, the answer of course is "Nothing."

If democracy required that the masses of mankind should be scientific, industrial and military experts, it would remain forever Utopian, a dream. But it does not. Democracy is based upon a truth more comprehensive, more profound. Democracy is possible because leadership, initiative, genius for guidance, are one thing, while ultimate responsibility, ultimate decision, sovereignty, are a wholly different thing. In democracy the few lead, inspire and guide; the many are sovereign, they make the final, the fateful decision, to them alone belongs ultimate responsibility.

In the absolutist empire, the few not only direct, they also decide. They are sovereign. For all practical purposes they own the many, whatever the empty phrases of formal law may say to the contrary. They are not merely leaders, they are lords.

The resistless, overwhelming massing of intelligent sympathy throughout the western world upon the side of England, Belgium and France, in this appalling struggle, has come about, as our German friends will one day understand, because the western world instantly grasped the essential fact that democracy and leadership have been assailed by lordship. The attempt to raise a false issue by alleging that Russia is more to be dreaded than Germany, has deceived nobody in his senses. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. Whatever may happen in the future, Russia is today hurling her strength against the only enemy which as yet has aggressively attempted to substitute in the western world the law of lese majeste for constitutional liberty, and militarism for the moral obligation of solemnly accepted treaties. The crimes of Russian imperialism have been many, and the day of retribution will come, but Russia does not yet stand before the world forsworn. The German empire does.

So the issue is drawn, and Mr. Winston Churchill, with appalling clearness, has portrayed its practical aspects. Leadership and lordship have closed in a life and death struggle. For the moment there is only one question. Which is stronger? Which can annihilate the other? For there will be no quarter this time, asked or given. It is the Darwinian fight for the survival of the fittest, at last.

"TRY IT YOURSELF"

Col. Kock Sent Message to Kaiser, Then Committed Suicide.

Paris, Sept. 30.—Interesting and dramatic particulars have reached here as to the suicide of Col. Kock, the German commander at Muelhausen. Col. Kock received repeated telegrams from the German general staff, ordering him to cross the Vosges at all costs and carry the war into France. After several unsuccessful attempts he telegraphed to Emperor William as follows: "It is impossible to cross the Vosges. Come and try it yourself."

Then the unhappy commander retired to a private room, placed his service pistol at his head and blew out his brains.

Thanks to the German artillery, future tourists in Europe will have a magnificent array of ruins to visit.—Southern Lumberman.

Newer Fall Millinery That Meets Every Requirement For Good Taste in Dress

IN OUR Millinery Parlors we are at present showing many new and exquisite models—clever ideas that are master thoughts of renowned designers, put into practical use by our own expert milliners—the only difference from the originals being in the prices, and this is considerable.

The most critical person can be suited with comparative ease; just a look around for a few minutes and you will find a model—several, in fact—that is really becoming to your own style of beauty.

A visit to this department at the present time will, we are sure, prove of unbounded interest. This week we are making a special display of medium priced models. Come in and see them—it will be a case of "love at first sight."

CITY MAY OPERATE MANUFACTURING CONCERN

Mayor Buller Brings Forth Another Idea to Provide Work for the Unemployed — Other Business Executed by the Board of Works

It may be possible that the City of Peterborough will operate a manufacturing concern this winter. At last night's Board of Works meeting His Worship Mayor Buller launched an idea that set several members thinking. It was, that the city could secure the Canadian Cordage Co. buildings and start manufacturing the cement pipes to be used next spring on the outfall sewer. According to Street Commissioner Evans' figures the city might save between two and three thousand dollars by taking such a step. On account of the scarcity of work and the possibility of a move in this direction being of great assistance to those in distress, Mayor Buller was of the opinion that the Bank of Ottawa might permit the city to use the building gratis.

The matter was left over till the council meeting on Monday evening, and in the meantime, City Engineer Parsons will investigate the probable cost and the City Clerk will communicate with the Bank of Ottawa.

Radial Co.'s Request.

A letter was read from W. H. Munro of the Peterboro Radial Railway Co., in which permission was asked to construct feeder lines on London Street from the bridge to Park, on Park Street from London to McDonnel, on Aylmer Street from London to Romaine, on Romaine Street from George to the Boundary Read and on Perry Street from Aylmer to Park. These lines would be placed on short poles excepting at railway crossings. On motion of Ald. Johnston and Green the matter will be brought before the Council on Monday and in the meantime the City Engineer and City Solicitor will consider the advisability of granting such permission.

Didn't Consult the Engineer.

Mayor Buller drew the attention of the Board to the fact that the G. N. W. Telegraph Co. nad run a cable on Simcoe Street on the Bell Telephone Co.'s poles without consulting the City Engineer or any other city official. The proper place for the cable was on King and Water Streets. The City Engineer and Solicitor will investigate and report to the Council.

COST OF WAR WILL GREATLY CURTAIL IT

John. H. Hegeman, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., who has just returned from abroad, says:

"I believe this will be a short war. The very weight and the bigness of it will stop it. Who will raise the money to carry it on? Ordinarily nations borrow from each other, now they have to use their own money. Five million men have to be paid daily wages; 15,000,000 meals have to be served every day, and 5,000,000 pairs of shoes have to be supplied every month. Where will the money come from?"

Mr. Hegeman said that the end of the war would see the greatest boom ever experienced in America. He does not look for any great revival in business until the close of the war.

FORMER RESIDENT WRITES FROM FRANCE

Mayor Buller is in receipt of a letter from Louis Houedry, formerly of this city. The letter, dated September 11th, from Rheims, states that he is in the 10th Battalion, and anxiously awaiting orders to go to the front. The closing of the letter is very significant. He states: "If I do not come back, I will be dead for your flag and mine."

MAYOR AT THE PREMIER'S FUNERAL

Mayor Buller returned last evening from Toronto, where he has been attending the funeral of the late Sir James P. Whitney. He visited the Parliament Buildings, where the body was lying in state. Mayor Buller attended the service in St. James Cathedral, and states that it was very impressive indeed. He was with the cortege as it wended its way to the Union Station.

Speaking of the funeral, he says that its immensity went to show just in what high respect the late Premier was held, and how many dear friends he really bad.

MEETING OF THE RELIEF COMMITTEE

A meeting of the Relief Committee of the Patriotic Fund was held at 5 o'clock yesterday, Messrs. Rush, Lynch and Gillespie being present.

Mr. Miller, Relief officer, reported that since the last meeting he had spent $97.50 for the relief of soldiers' wives and families.

Mr. Miller is also receiving some rather vague requests for assistance which do not lie in his power to fulfil.

CLEARING HOUSE

The manager of the clearing house handed out the following statistics this morning:

Total clearings for month of September, $1,804,079.

Last month, $1,701,808.

Increase, $102,271.

Clearings for week ending Oct. 1, $392,807.

Last week, $440,821.

Decrease, $48,014.

Corresponding week last month, $462,143.

AN ADV. WRITER OF MUCH ABILITY

Jno. A McNabb Wins Medals For Adv. Writing and for Window Dressing

An interesting contest that has just been decided and resulted in a Peterborough young man winning fresh laurels in his business line, was that of an advertisement competition in which Mr. John A. McNabb, of the Richard Hall & Son Co., was the winner of a gold medal. The competition was conducted by the Canadian Ass'n. of Display Men, Mr. Eugene L. Beaupre, head of the advertising department of the T. Eaton Co., Toronto, being the judge, who writes in the Dry Goods Review for September, as follows:

"Judging the samples submitted from the point of (1) Selling Quality; (2) Appearance; (3) Typography; (4) Originality of Ideas, the one numbered three comes first. This was Mr. McNabb's production. The names of the writers of the ads. were unknown to the judge, as each advertisement was entered under a number."

The advertisement was reproduced in miniature in the Dry Goods Review, which states that it won the the highest number of marks of any among the scores submitted, and Mr. McNabb alone of all succeeded in getting all four points on the basis of which the entries were judged.

Of course Mr. McNabb's efforts in producing so well written and so well designed an advertisement would have been futile had his ideas not been intelligently and artistically carried out by the printer. This advertisement was the product of The Peterborough Review, and was done by Mr. George Hamon, who has a reputation as a first-class compositor.

Mr. McNabb was also the winner of another medal in a window dressing contest. We congratulate him on the recognition of his ability along both lines.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

All Saints' Church will hold their Harvest Festival Service tonight at 8 o'clock to which all are heartily invited. The service will be as follows:—

Hymn 346 — Come Ye Thankful People Come. Psalms 182—Magnifical—175, Nume Dimettes (Simper).

Hymn 348—We Plough the Fields and Scatter.

Hymn 351 — The Sower Went Forth Sowing.

Sermon—The special preacher will be the Rev. W. J. Southam, M.A., of All Saints' Church, Toronto.

Offertory (Anthem)—Thy Basket and Store—Caleb Simper.

Hymn 344—Praise O Praise our God and King.

Amen 138, Vesper 40.

POLICE COURT

John Burke pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness in today's police court—two dollars.

A rather old time case of a mother-in-law being accused by her daughter-in-law of assault was heard. The daughter-in-law claims that when she went to the home of her mother-in-law and asked to see her husband, whom she thought was in the house, she was struck over the head several times with a broom by her mother-in-law and chased from the house. The mother-in-law's story was different. She claimed that she was knocked down by her daughter-in-law and kicked about unmercifully and absolutely denied hitting the other woman with the broom. Considering the conflicting stories the Magistrate advised them to keep the peace and withheld judgment.

RECRUIT 5000 A DAY

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—After a busy time spent in the office of Hon. George H. Perley, acting Canadian high commissioner in London, Eng., Mr. Bert Cole, secretary to that active official, has arrived here.

"Nobody in England doubts the successful outcome of the war," he says. "The rush to enlist in London has been wonderful. They have been recruiting five thousand a day and more for weeks. The rush has been so great that for a time the recruiting stations could not handle the stream of men. More stations had to be opened. Men stood in long lines, eager to enlist."

The published accounts of German atrocities, Mr. Cole says, fall far short of those received in London.

That the fight off Heligoland came as the result of a trap set by the British, is believed in London. A large liner was sent in by the British as a decoy. The German ships came out to capture what looked like a rich prize, and found British men-of-war waiting.

Considering the plight of the Southern planter, the thought arises that there should be a heavy demand in Europe for gun-cotton.

IRON POLES FOR SPUR

Mayor Rescinds Engineer's Order and Satisfies Many Citizens

Some time ago the Radial Railway Co. informed the city that it was their intention to place a trolley wire for the spur at the C.P.R. depot and if the council desired to have street poles erected the city would have to pay for them. If they didn't the company would go ahead and insert wooden poles. City Engineer Parsons and Ald. Duncan interviewed the manager of the Radial Railway Co. and tried to purchase two iron poles, which the company had in stock, but the deal didn't materialize because the price asked was $25 per pole. The engineer claimed the price to be far too high and informed the company that they could put up the wooden poles.

The company proceeded accordingly but several citizens in the locality of the depot complained to Mayor Buller and His Worship ordered the iron poles to be installed. At last night's meeting of the Board of Works the order of the Mayor was endorsed. It was the general feeling of the aldermen that the street car company was trying to cross the City Dads at every possible opportunity and it would not be surprising to see them "come back."

The water in Lake Scugog is very low at present, and it is feared the Carew Lumber Co. of Lindsay will have to close down their mills. The water is being conserved in the reservoirs to the north of the lake and the Trent Waterway via Peterboro has been amply supplied by the stop logs being taken out of Bobcaygeon.

One more song to add to the classics, "It's a Long Long Way to Tipperary." Many will remember the popular song of the Yankees during the Spanish-American war, "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

LOW WATER MAY CLOSE SAWMILLS

Lindsay, Oct. 1.—The water in the Scugog is very low at present and unless conditions are remedied, it is feared that the Carew Lumber Co. will have to close down their mills. It is understood that the water is being conserved in the northern reservoirs and that the Trent Waterway via Peterboro has been amply supplied by the stop logs being taken out at Bobcaygeon.

The matter was introduced in the council last night and the Town Clerk was instructed to write to Engineer Kellaley, of the Trent Valley Canal, in reference to the matter, protesting emphatically on behalf of the council against the conditions prevailing.

CANADIAN WRITES FROM THE FRONT

"Imperishable Name" of Sir John French

The following are extracts from a highly interesting letter written from Le Tourteliiere, France, by a Canadian officer who is serving with the Expeditionary Force:

"As luck was in my way, I was attached temporarily to the 2nd Dragoon Guards, and was put on scouting duty, and studied maps with the greatest possible care.

"Of course we have our meals on active service just when we can get them. There is no lounging about in a mess-tent for officers, and scouts find a bivouac often safer in a dangerous country than a more cumbersome shelter. We practically live in the saddle.

"You will have read, no doubt, all about the biggest tussle we have had so far. It was near Mons, on Sunday, August 23, when the enemy suddenly appeared in astonishing numbers. For a while it seemed doubtful if we should get clear without our flank being turned, but the British generals are made to face overwhelming obstructions, and the extraordinary dexterity the commander-in-chief has shown in getting us out of a hole will no doubt win for him an imperishable name in the annals of the Empire. General Chetwode simply worships Sir John French, and so does every man serving under his command, from drummer-boy to generals of divisions.

Savagery.

"It is when the story of the campaign is written that you will see the Germans in their true colors of savagery, boastfulness and lying, blasphemously calling upon Almighty God to witness the purity of their motives in trying to crush the world under the heel of Prussian barbarism.

"In war we all know excesses occur and mistakes are made. In this campaign the Red Cross wagons are deliberately fired upon, ambulances shelled, doctors and medical aid marked out for destruction by the deliberate orders of the German generals in command.

"Their men are taught to be treacherous, and at the battle of Mons unhorsed troopers threw up their hands, pretending to surrender to us. The moment the British cavalry rode up to make them prisoners, they picked up their arms and fired.

"But you can take my solemn assurance that the Germans will never forget the lessons they learned at Mons. The commander-in-chief knows what he is doing, and rearguard actions are fought with the same vigor and determination and coolness as if the men were taking the offensive. Sir John French is wearing out the enemy. After Mons we were fighting continuously until the following Wednesday.

"It has not been my privilege to share in a cavalry charge, because I was at least three miles to the north of the battle of Mons, but I did have the honor of assisting in digging trenches for the dead, and every man we laid in his grave bore the marks of bravery, and all their wounds showed how determined had been the onslaught of the cavalry.

Tears for the Dead.

"Many gallant men were gripping their swords as the stars and moon lit up the littered fields of death, and men shed tears as they counted up the terrible toll of that splendid achievement, which will add lustre to the glories of British arms for all time.

"As you will understand, scouting takes one away from the main body and often leads to tight nooks. The cautious scout is as dangerous as the very reckless one, who plunges into unnecessary jeopardy, and so we are counselled by text books to be the 'happy medium,' which is my aim.

"Such terrible stories have come from Belgian villages and towns of massacre, outrage, mutilation of women and children, and the murder of women, that the French peasants are wisely giving the enemy as wide a berth as possible.

"I must say that I find the English officers and men exceedingly considerate and helpful to each other, and to me they have proved that Canadians are treated as absolutely and really brothers fighting under the same flag and striving for the same cause.

The commissariat is excellent, if you can get back to camp for your meals. Here we are at a small village eight miles from the brigade, 'feeling' for the enemy. Just a party of 12, and I am in charge, with three very competent non-commissioned officers, one of whom speaks French quite nicely. We know that Uhlans are close by, but not in the radius we are patrolling.

Hospitality.

"The squire here farms his own estate and is a delightful host. I knocked him up at daybreak, and instead of cursing us, he sent down his valet to say he was dressing and had ordered coffee and rolls for the party. I found out that he was a retired admiral in the French navy—Count de la Perrisse.

"He was very friendly and glad to see us, begging us to spend the day, and seemed grieved when I told him that we had started two hours before dawn and had to cover more country before mid-day. However, we pleased the gallant old gentleman by promising to hide there for a few hours. So six of our party have gone out, and they will return for dejeuner at noon. The remainder have been covered up in a hayloft, so that they can have a good sound sleep.

"To my amazement, the admiral has a huge cellar where he keeps cider, and it is approached by a sloping gangway. His men littered it with bracken, and our six horses are resting and hiding there.

"At dejeuner the countess and two grandchildren joined us, so we sat down sixteen. Our men quite enjoyed the novelty, and the rich Burgundy and savoury omelettes were as much appreciated as the tomato potage and poulets en casserole which followed.

"During the meal one of the gardeners climbed up to a tree top which commanded a good view of the country for three miles round, and we have not been taken by surprise."

HORSES FOR ENGLAND

Sir Adam Beck states that up to date about 1,110 horses have been purchased in Canada for the British Government. The 430 chargers selected for the Strathcona Horse are all fine animals, personally selected. Sir Adam expressed the view that this would be the finest and best equipped body of horsemen ever turned out in the Dominion of Canada. Sir Adam Beck has the supervision of all remounts for the War Office.

SIR ADAM ENJOYS JOKE AT HORSE SALE

London, Ont., Sept. 30. — Out of about 80 horses offered Sir Adam Beck at Petrolea last Friday for the British army, in the neighborhood of 35 were purchased. Prices ranged from $175 down, with a majority of the prices down. The horses were shown on the race track at the Fair grounds. Chief Ferguson kept the crowd back, and as soon as one horse was passed or rejected another was called for and came before the critical eye of Sir Adam and Dr. Tamlin.

One of the sellers was an Irishman, with whom Sir Adam had a little fun. When the horse he had to offer was led up, Sir Adam said: "That horse is worth $140," to which the man from the Emerald Isle replied:

"Well, I was offered $175 for him a few weeks ago, sor."

Sir Adam—"You should have taken it."

Son of Erin—"I saved him for you."

Sir Adam (laughing)—"What is that lump on his leg?"

Son of Erin (thinking he would get a long price by combining politics with business)—"Oh, that was caused by kicking against reciprocity, like the rest of us, Sor."

Sir Adam laughed heartily and added another $10.

This is the latest—the Port Hope Guide says: When in a hurry to use a phone last evening, some person, by mistake rang the fire alarm, and the clanging of the town bell brought out a large crowd.

BOY SCOUT MURDERED

Germans Slaughter Lad Who Refused Information

LONDON, Oct. 1. — German tales of tragic episodes of the war were issued by the Official Press Bureau last night. The stories were taken from a book called "Krieg's Chronik," which was seized from aliens entering British ports. The book consists, according to the bureau, "partly of a highly untrustworthy chronicle of the war, and partly of soldiers' letters from the front."

"As showing the methods of thought of the enemy these last have considerable value," continues the bureau. "It is not the truth or falsity of the tales that matters, but the applause and self-congratulations of the writers on deeds of gross treachery and cruelty claimed to have been done by themselves or comrades."

The story of the shooting of a boy scout is given as follows:

"A traitor has just been shot. He was a little French lad belonging to one of the gymnastic societies which wear the tri-colored ribbons, a poor young fellow who, in his infatuation, wanted to be a hero.

"As the German column was passing along a wooded defile he was caught and asked whether the French were about. He refused to give any information. Fifty yards farther there was firing from cover of the wood. The prisoner was asked in French if he had known that the enemy was in the forest, and he did not deny it.

"He went with a firm step to a telegraph pole and stood against it with a green vineyard at his back and received the volley of a firing party with a proud smile on his face. Infatuated wretch! It was a pity to see such wasted courage."

BRUSSELS IS ROUSED

Citizens Likely to Revolt Under German Treatment

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Chafing under the intentional provocations of Germans, the residents of Brussels are growing hourly more surly, according to a courier who reached London yesterday from the Belgian capital, which place he left Tuesday morning. He reports that there have been several riots, and although the Germans threatened to shoot the ringleaders, they refrained from doing so after deliberation. However, the Belgians give ample evidence that sooner or later they will rise up in arms against the overbearing enemy in their midst, and it is the hope of the Germans, according to the courier, that they will riot on a large scale, for that would give the enemy a longed-for reason for setting a torch to the city.

Despite the spirit of braggadocio, so the courier says, the Germans show uneasiness over the big battle on the Aisne. It is believed in Brussels that the Germans really intend making no great move against Antwerp, although the siege guns are now battering away at some of the surrounding forts. The courier asserted that the movements in the direction of Antwerp were looked on more in the nature of engaging the main Belgian forces to keep them from joining the allies at this juncture. Fully two thousand Austrians, with heavy artillery, passed through Brussels a few days ago, it was said by the courier. They were on their way to join the German right wing. British papers are selling in Brussels for 25 francs, and the Germans are doing everything to prevent their importation.

To Give Apples To Poor.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 1. — Mayor Graham has arranged to have apples offered by farmers of the district, distributed among the deserving poor of the city on Saturday next. Collegiate and public school students have offered to pick them, motorists transporting them to the orchards, while business men and merchants have offered motor trucks for the hauling of the fruit to London, and the charities organization will look after the distribution.

ITALY'S FORCE GROWS.

Calling Out of More Reserves Brings Army Up to 1,390,000 Men.

LONDON, Oct. 1. —The calling to the colors of the 1885, 1886 and 1888 classes of Italian reserves early in October have been confirmed by several Italian newspapers, according to the correspondent of The London Daily Mail at Venice. Eleven first category classes will then be under the flag, and will total 1,390,000 men. Without counting the 80,000 men now in Tripoli, Italy will have an army of 1,310,000 men in her own territory, divided into 30 army corps.

Continuing the correspondent says that Austrian troops are still throwing up defence works along the frontier, the Ponta Faltarvis line being defended by the Landwehr.

Changes Paper's Name.

TOULOUSE, France, Oct. 1.—Former Premier Georges Clemenceau has succeeded in evading the suspension order against his newspaper, L'Homme Libre, by changing the name to L'Homme Enchaine (The Man in Chains). The paper was published as usual yesterday.

The article which resulted Tuesday in an order for suspension for eight days is a mild appeal for the preferential treatment of German Alsatian prisoners.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—The local grain situation was unchanged today. A few inquiries for grain were received, but in all cases the prices bid were out of line and no business was reported done. The feeling here is that it is just a matter of time until English buyers must come into the market for Canadian grain and just as soon as this occurs prices will respond easily. Farmers evidently are not nervous and are clinging to their stocks. Large supplies are piling up at all stores and as there has been a temporary lull in the demand, it is felt here the natural course of the market will be easy until the demand increases but that this should be short lived.

Oats were also easy.

Little business was done in cheese, but the market held steady.

Eggs, selected stock only, were a cent easier.

Butter continued in little demand.

The provision market was active and firm.

Form Whole Brigade.

MONTREAL, Oct. 1.—The proposal to form a French-Canadian regiment for active service will probably widen into a much larger scheme. The promoters met yesterday morning and discussed the details of a plan to form a brigade of French-Canadians, commanded and completely officered by men of that race and consisting solely of French-Canadians. This will mean that instead of enrolling 2,000 men for service, the recruiting officers will try to raise over 4,000 men.

Carranza Will Obey Ruling.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Gen. Carranza, first chief of the Mexican revolution, and his followers in Mexico City, will retire if the conference today advises it. In a lengthy statement last night by the Mexican Embassy here, it is set forth that peace overtures are under way between Carranza and Villa, and that railroad and telegraphic communication between the capital and Vera Cruz has been restored.

SAN GUILIANO IS DYING

Death of Foreign Minister May Decide Italy's Action

ROME, Oct. 1.—Almost coincident with the demand made on Austria by the Italian Government that she stop strewing the Adriatic with mines, comes the information that an Italian torpedo boat has struck a mine and sunk near Commachio. The Minister of Marine has announced that no official confirmation of the report is available, but asserts that it will be immediately investigated.

The Italian Minister at Vienna was yesterday instructed to file an emphatic protest with the Austrian Government against the laying of mines in neutral waters. He will point out that Italian shipping is seriously menaced by the presence of these mines. Twenty miles off Ancona a fishing craft met destruction and nine of her crew were killed.

It is stated that several hundred mines have already been picked up by Italian craft, and that a good many more have floated ashore.

Inasmuch as the protection of mines is the only thing which enables the Austrian fleet to remain in comparative safety at the naval base of Pola, the Austrian refusal is regarded as certain.

Marquis Di San Guiliano, Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, who is dangerously ill and not expected to recover, has said to a friend: "I wish that I could live ten weeks more!" indicating that he expects the gravest events to transpire within that time.

May Change Italy's Policy.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Marquis di San Guiliano, the Foreign Minister who is one of the chief friends of the triple alliance in Italy, is seriously ill, and Premier Salandra has taken charge of the Foreign Office. It is suggested in London this might bring about some change in the policy of Italy, as the Premier is said to be in favor of Italy joining with the allies, to which move Marquis di San Guiliano has been strongly opposed.

TURKEY SEEMS TO BE DETERMINED

Suspension of Rights of Foreigners Likely To Go Into Effect To-day.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—So far as officials here know, Turkey will carry into effect its announced intention to abrogate all capitulations granting extra territorial rights to foreigners in Turkey to-day. Secretary of State Bryan said the Porte had received in friendly spirit, the notification that the United States would reserve the right of future discussion of Turkey's action, but had not indicated a postponement of the operation of the decree.

A close watch will be kept over the manner in which Turkey exercises the new full sovereignty over her dominions. The cruiser Tennessee, now at Falmouth, Eng., will take a station off the Turkish coast for the present, probably making her base at Alexandria, Egypt.

Great Gale In Germany.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A Central News despatch from Copenhagen says that all cable communication in Sweden and Germany have been interrupted since Tuesday as a consequence, it is stated, of the great gale prevailing. It is reported that Germany has been without any foreign mail since last week.

The Danish Government is issuing a domestic state loan of 50,000,000 kroners (approximately $15,000,000).

THE SPORTING WORLD

REULBACK PITCHED BEST WORLD SERIES GAME

An Interesting Review of Former Big Series — Brown Walsh and Plank Are Also on the Honor Roll

New records can be established for the world's series this fall without endangering major or minor league records. All that a pitcher has to do to shatter a previous red letter mark for a blue ribbon game is to dispose of his opponents without a safety. Edward Marvin Reulbach, of the Superbas, has the distinction of having pitched the best game in a world's series. In 1906, while wearing the uniform of the Cubs, Reulbach let the White Sox down with one safe smash, made by "Jiggs" Donohue, who died about a year ago, in the sixth inning. The hitless wonders scored a run in this controversy, but Donohue's safety had nothing to do with the tally.

Men who have twirled two-hit games in world's series are Mordecai Brown, Ed. Walsh and Eddie Plank. The three-fingered marvel accomplished his feat against the White Sox. Comiskey's one time man of steel selected the Cubs as his victims, and the veteran southpaw picked the Giants. Brown and Walsh whitewashed their opponents while they were limiting them to a brace of hits, while Plank missed a shut-out because of an error by Frank Baker and a piece of boneheaded base-running by Arthur Shafer, who, according to a sarcastic member of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, ought to be awarded a Chalmers car because he has done more for the Braves than any other player.

Some Three-Hit Games.

The three-hit games reeled off in the annual classic now number five. Bill Dinneen pitched the first of these in 1903 for the Red Sox against the Pirates; Jeff Overall the second in 1908 for the Cubs against the Tigers; "Chief" Bender the third in 1910 for the White Elephants against the Cubs; Jack Coombs the fourth in 1911 for the White Elephants against the Giants, and Hugh Bedient the fifth for the Red Sox in 1912 against the Giants. Of these stunts by far the best was that performed by Coombs, for the ironmonger travelled 11 innings against McGraw's cohorts.

The four-hit contests total 13. Christy Mathewson, "Chief" Bender and Mordecai Brown have each pitched two, and these men each one: "Deacon" Phillippe, Bill Dinneen, Eddie Plank, Nick Altrock, Jack Pfiester, Jeff Overall and "Rube" Marquard.

The record number of strikeouts for a world's series tussle is twelve. Walsh of the White Sox fanned a dozen Cubs the first time he faced them, in 1906, and Bill Donovan of the Tigers duplicated the performance against the Chance combination the next season, having a dozen innings, however, in which to do so. Dinneen of Boston whiffed 11 Pirates in 1903, and in 1911 and 1912 11 Giants took the strike-out count at the hands of Bender, of Philadelphia and Wood, of Boston. Pitchers credited with striking out 10 men in contests for the championship of the universe are Phillippe of Pittsburg, Overall of Chicago, and Mullin of Detroit.

No Wild Ones.

Considering the number of games played, it is remarkable that there is no wild exhibition of pitching on the records. The unsteadiest stunt was uncovered by Jack Coombs, of the Athletics in 1910, when he handed the Cubs nine passes and beat them, nevertheless, 9 to 3.

In order for a batsman to set a new record for home runs in one game, it will be necessary for him to hit for the circuit thrice. Patrick Henry Dougherty, when he was a Red Sox in 1903, slammed out a brace of four-baggers in the second game of the series, his first wallop being off Sam Leever, and his second off "Bucky" Vail.

The greatest number of hits torn off in one contest by a batter is four. Seven men, two of whom were Chalmers car winners, having turned this trick. The best performance was Frank Isbell's, in 1906, all of his smashes being doubles. These are the men who have made four hits in world's series games:

October 1, 1903—Leach, Pirates, two singles and two triples off Young, Red Sox.

October 8, 1903—Beaumont, Pirates, four singles off Dinneen, Red Sox.

October 13, 1906—Isbell, White Sox, four doubles off Reulbach, Pfiester and Overall, Cubs.

October 14, 1906—Hahn, White Sox, four singles off Brown and Overall, Cubs.

October 12, 1908—Cobb, Tigers, three singles and one double off Pfiester and Overall, Cubs.

October 25, 1911—Doyle, Giants, two singles and two doubles off Coombs and Plank, White Elephants.

October 26, 1911—D. Murphy, White Elephants, three singles and one double off Ames, Wiltse and Marquard, Giants.

FEDS GRAB OFF A FEW STARS?

Reported That Walter Johnson Will Flop

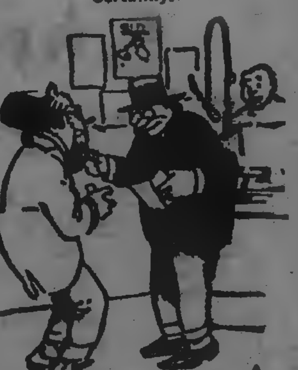
Chicago, Oct. 1.—An evening paper prints a story saying that the Federal League has made another raid on organised baseball, and according to an inside tip from President Gilmore's office, five players who now are stars in organized baseball will be in the Federal League next year.

"The tip," says the story, "is that Walter Johnson has signed a contract to pitch for the Brooklyn Federals, and that Ray Collins, of the Boston Red Sox; Manager Charley Dooin, Hans Lobert and Sherwood Magee, of the Phillies, also have jumped to the outlaws.

"Dooin, according to the tip, will manage the Brooklyn outfit. All the five big league stars will go to the C. F. Ward's team, which certainly will make the outfit a pennant winner.

"If it is true that these players have signed, either organized ball will have to take in the Federal League or suffer heavy financial losses for another season."

Certainly.



Softmarque—Oh, I say, Perkins, did you ever pay me back that quarter you borrowed of me sixteen years ago.

Perkins—Sure I did! I paid you back a nickel May 5, 1899; a dime Aug. 27, 1903, and a dime Dec. 24, 1908! What's the matter with you? Going looney? —Boston Globe.

The Limit.

"Tilewad is a mean old cuss, isn't he?" said Mack.

"What is he doing now?" asked Mack.

"He is feeding his gold fish on white pasteboard and making them imagine it is fish food," replied Mack.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

COL. SAM. HUGHES GOES TO ENGLAND

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes will go to England shortly and in his absence the Department of Militia and Defence will be administered by the Prime Minister. Col. Hughes, it is stated authoritatively, will not go as commandant of the Canadian troops, nor will be go to the front, but simply to England in an advisory capacity, while the Canadian division is in training. The date of Col. Hughes' departure has not been fixed.

PHOTOGRAPHER KILLED.

Jules Lavergne, of Montreal, Is Murdered and Son Is Badly Wounded.

MONTREAL, Oct. 1. — Jules Lavergne, photographer, Ontario and St. Denis streets, was shot dead at six o'clock last night. His son, Rene, is in the General Hospital in a critical state from a bullet wound, and J. N. Lapres, 460 St. Denis street, who is alleged to have done the shooting, is in Notre Dame Hospital, also in a serious condition from a revolver shot. Lapres is a photographer, and the elder Lavergne was formerly a partner of his in the photographing business, now being conducted by the son, Rene Lavergne. It is said Lapres wanted to buy the business and started the shooting because Rene Lavergne refused to sell. The elder Lavergne, hearing the shot which brought down his son, rushed at Lapres, it is said, and in a scuffle which ensued, both he and the alleged assailant were shot.

Judge Lanctot took Rene Lavergne's statement in the hospital last night, as it was thought he might not recover.

Belgians Declare That Germans Have Been Repulsed at Antwerp.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The Germans for two days have been shelling forts Waelham and Wavre-St. Catherine, which cover the road from Malines to Antwerp. Behind Waelham are the waterworks that supply Antwerp, but even the destruction of these would not be fatal to the fortress, as a good supply of water has been provided for from other sources.

Concerning the progress of this attack, the official reports give widely different accounts. The Belgians say that the German attempts to advance have been repulsed and that their shells have had no effect on the forts. On their part the Germans declare that the Belgian sorties have been driven back.

Two Corps Stay In Canada.

KINGSTON, Oct. 1.—No. 3 Company, Army Service Corps, in command of Major W. A. Mitchell of Kingston, will not go to the front with the Canadian overseas contingent. No. 3 Company and No. 5 Company of Montreal will be kept in Canada for home service.

Retribution.

"Served him right."

"What?"

"He couldn't keep a cook, so he married one."

"Looks like a good idea."

"But she refused to cook then, and now the servant girl problem is worse than ever."

The Modern Father.

"When I was your age, Tommy, I had no mother and father. Strangers took care of me, and they beat me and didn't always give me plenty to eat."

"But now you've got it nice with us," his son replied, "and mamma gives you something to eat three times a day."

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND ON SEA

One of the most interesting letters to hand is that written by a Canadian officer attached to the 2nd Dragoon Guards. He says:

For a while it seemed doubtful if we should get clear without our flank being turned at Mons, but the British generals are made to face overwhelming obstructions, and the extraordinary dexterity the Commander-in-Chief has shown in getting us out of a hole will no doubt win for him an imperishable name in the annals of the Empire. General Chetwode simply worships Sir John French, and so does every man serving under his command, from drummer-boy to general of division. In war we all know excesses occur and mistakes are made. In this campaign the Red Cross wagons are deliberately fired upon, ambulances shelled, doctors and medical aid marked our for destruction by the deliberate orders of the German generals in command. But you can take my solemn assurance that the Germans will never forget the lessons they learnt at Mons. It has not been my privilege to share in a cavalry charge, because I was at least three miles to the north of the battle, but I did have the honor of assisting in digging trenches for the dead, and every man we laid in his grave bore the marks of bravery. Many gallant men were gripping their swords as the moon lit up the littered field of death, and men shed tears as they counted up the terrible toll of that splendid achievement, which will add lustre to the glories of British arms for all time.

SIX STREETS OF WIDOWS.

Private J. Atkinson, Duke of Wellington's Regiment, who is now in hospital in Birmingham, says in a letter to his wife at Leeds:—

It is not war. It is murder. The Germans are murdering our wounded as fast as they come across them. I gave myself up for done, as we were in the thick of the fight at Mons. Our regiment started fighting with 1,009, and finished up with 106 and 3 officers so we just lost 900. It was cruel. At one place we were at, called Amiens, there were six streets of the town where all the women were left widows, and were all wearing widows' weeds. The French regiment that fought there was made up in the town, and they got wiped out. Our colonel got wounded, and then the Germans attacked him and cut his throat.

ESCAPED FROM THE GERMANS.

Trooper Beak, of the 4th Dragoon Guards, writing home to his wife at Crewe, gives an exciting story of his escape from the Germans. After describing his journey from England he says:

I went straight to the front in the firing line, and withn two hours of being there had three horses shot under me. The last one was a Uhlan's and that caused all the trouble. That went down when I was in the midst of them, and I got made prisoner along with Sergeant-Major H——of ours. We did not think we should ever see England again, as just before dusk on Wednesday afternoon they made us strip every mortal stitch off our bodies so that we could not escape. At the time they were being hardly pressed by our troops. But in the middle of the night we made a cut for it, and got away. I have one consolation, and that is I killed two Uhlans and wounded one before they captured me, and Sergeant-Major H—— claims he killed half-a-dozen. I broke my sword clean in half when I was recovering it from the second plugged with it, and I had to go into the third scramble with only about nine inches and the hilt left.

A SAILOR'S PLAIN STORY.

A survivor from H.M.S. Pathfinder, writes: My twenty-eighth birthday, and I reckon I have had a good birthday present by having my skin saved whole, and am glad to say I can still put the following words, "I am still alive and well."

I got off scot-free bar a few scratches on my legs. All the ship's company were in the fore part having their tea; in fact, your humble was just going down to get his. I saw a flash, and the ship seemed to lift right out of the water, down went the mast and forward funnel and fore part of the ship, and all the men there must have been blown to atoms.

I bobbed down for a few seconds for fear of being hit by debris (some of it weighed nearly 112 lbs.) which was blown sky-high. I scrambled to the quarterdeck, which was littered with mangled corpses, and looked about for something to cling to. The captain shouted, "To the boats!" but there were only two, and they were smashed. The other boats and practically all woodwork had been left on shore. We fired a gun for a distress signal. By this time the ship was practically covered with water.

"Every man for himself," and I at once pulled off my boots, coat, trousers, and over I went. I think I broke all swimming records trying to pull as much space between myself and the ship, being afraid of suction.

Turning round the last I saw of the ship about fifty yards away, the after end was sticking upright in the air about a hundred feet. Then she gradually heeled over towards me and sank. Then I swam again to get out of its way, thinking it might hit me as it came down, but it cleared me all right. It was all over in about five minutes from the start. When she sank something blew up and on came the water, and round and round I went like a cork. A reindeer buoy came speeding by me, and I grabbed it, and that was what kept me afloat.

ONE BULLET'S CAREER.

Sergeant E. W. Turner, (Royal West Kent Regiment), writing to his fiancee said: The bullet that wounded me went into one breast pocket and came out of the other and passed through your photo, making a hole in the breast. What a strange coincidence. It then passed through my watch and struck a large clasp knife, smashing it to pieces and driving it through my pocket.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

BOND—SHERRY.

A very pretty wedding took place in St. John's church this morning at 10.30, when Eleanor Gwendolyn, daughter of Mr. George Sherry, of this city, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to J. Percy Bond, also of this city. Rev. Canon Davidson officiated at the ceremony, which was preformed in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives.

Mr. R. J. Devey presided at the organ, while St. John's chimes were rung in honor of the event. The happy couple left for a short honeymoon trip to Montreal and New York and other cities, and on their return will reside at 106 McDonnell street.

DEGREES AT QUEEN'S.

As a result of supplemental examinations, Queen's University has granted these degrees: Bachelors of Art—Mary H.Brigginshaw, Toledo, Ohio; K. A. Denholm, Blenheim, Ont.; T. H. Fennell, Medicine Hat; W. C. Johnston, Lyndhurst; P. S. Kennedy, Porcupine; Ethel M. Lake, Sydenham; C. W. Lees, Peterborough; Maud T. McElwee, Chatham; G. S. McFarlane, Ottawa; J. I. Mackey, Cornwall; Mary Florence MacMillan, Avonmore; Gertrude Pomeroy, Toronto; J. A. MacEachren, Stayner; Christina R. MacLachlan, Burnstown.

E. J. Boswell, Montreal, is here on business.

John McGee, Toronto, is visiting in the city.

Mr. W. H. Fumble, Belleville, is in the city.

Mr. F. J. Travers, Ottawa, is a guest at the Snowden House.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jones, Toronto, are visiting friends in the city.

Messrs. J. B. Lawlor, Hamilton, and J. A. Jones, Toronto, are registered at the White House.

Miss Hazel Buller entertained the W. T. S. club at her home last evening. It took the form of a china shower for Miss L. Haskill.

Mrs. Davidson and Miss Margaret, Water Street, who have been spending the past three months in North Dakota and Vancouver have returned home.

She (at the ball game)—Why does he make those motion with his arm before he pitches ball?

He—Those are signals to the catcher. The two men work in concert.

She—Dear me! Is that the "concert pitch" I've heard about so often?—Sketch.

A TRUCE TO ENVY

Catholic Register:—It was ever thus. In military matters perhaps more so. Those who are not in the doing of things bitterly attack those that are. All cannot go to the front. Every officer who thinks he is the best warrior in Canada is not either. The Minister may or may not be perfection. But we are face to face with serious things. This is the nation's day of trial, and we must back up authority in everything and see our men go to fight for the Empire in the best of spirits and well provided for in arms. To mobolize an army of 30,000 men in the short time the First Canadian Contingent was mobilized, is no easy job. We are just back from the Valcartier Camp, and it was a revelation to us. Rough you may say it is still, but clean, well-housed, well-lighted, well-fed—with a whole beautiful water system of its own. Of course there are charges of incompetency made against the Minister. Against what other man would they not be made? Sam Hughes should be by temperament and training our best Minister of Militia. It would not be hard for him to be as good as any predecessor. He may show favoritism, but who will not? The thing is how to provide against recrudescence. He may give contracts to friends. Who will not? The thing is to see that there is no glaring graft; and the Prime Minister and the rest of the Cabinet must have an eye on that. It is unfair to attack Colonel Hughes, trying to do his best before the country, just now. Dear only knows, he is no pet of ours, but at the moment every dissension should be stilled in Canada, and our work done silently, contentedly, and well. Let the grumblers go to Valcartier, as we have done, and look at the wonders worked there in a few weeks; let them ask the boys — those without axes to grind—how things go there, and it will be found that we are fortunate in our war administration these days. There is no thought of Col. Hughes' going over in command. Many seem to fear this. Our men will go to good hands for preparation in Britain. They're sixty per cent. raw recruits, anyway. Ian Hamilton will make soldiers of them. They will then do their duty on the plains of France or anywhere else. God be with them! We at home must only cease our bickerings and help as best we can.

WEARING OF THE PUTTEE

When you see a man in khaki walking down the street with his legs from ankle to the knee wound round in puttees it may be interesting to be able to recognize at a glance whether he is in the infantry or in a mounted regiment, and the way to do it is to observe the manner in which the puttee has been put on.

If he has started just above the boot and wound the puttee upwards, tucking in the surplus at the knee, he is an infantry man; but if, on the contrary, the puttee has been wound downwards from the knee and the surplus tucked in round the ankle, then he is a cavalryman. The reason is this: That if the mounted man were to wind his puttee in the same way as the unmounted man, there would be a superabundance of cloth round about the knees, which would chafe against the sides of the horse, to the discomfort both of the animal and himself, while, by winding the puttees downwards, the extra cloth above the boots goes into the stirrups.

Of course, the puttee has other advantages than the freedom of action it gives the man, in being applicable for use as slings or bandages in an emergency.

The Lighthouse In Kiel Harbour.

This beacon would make a fine mark for the guners on the British North Sea Fleet were it not for the fact that the Germans have sown mines so thickly that Sir John Jellicoe's ships have to stay at a safe distance. The light illuminates Kiel Harbour, the chief rallying place of the German fleet.

THE FIRST SEA LORD WON HIS POSITION

Royal rank has played no part in the career of Prince Louis of Battenberg, the First Sea Lord of the Admiralty. He is a man who has won his positon solely by hard work, cleverness, and ability. Forty six years ago, at the age of fourteen, having become a naturalized British subject, he began his career by sailing round the world as a cadet on the old Arethusa, and at forty, having by that time been selected for captain's rank, he had won the distinction of being referred to by Lord Fisher (then Sir John Fisher) as "my best captain."

His organizing ability, unusual mechanical inventiveness—he has devised a long signalling apparatus, also an ingenious instrument for indicating a vessel's course and speed—and his good, all-round qualities have made Prince Louis of Battenberg one of the most popular officers in the British Navy, in spite of the fact that he is a German by birth and the husband of Princess Victoria, daughter of the Grand Duke Louis IV. of Hesse.

Might Have Been a King

It is not the least distinction of Prince Louis of Battenberg that he once refused the crown of Bulgaria.

PRINCE LOUIS OF BATTENBERG

His brother, Prince Alexander, once ruled that turbulent European country, but was obliged to abdicate on the spot by a mob, the leader of which held a revolver at his head. Prince Louis interposed with such effect that a few months later the throne was offered to him, but apparently the Prince preferred the perils of the sea to the perils of Bulgaria, and decided to sail the British main.

When about two years ago Prince Louis was chosen as First Sea Lord, on the retirement of Sir Francis Bridgeman, everyone agreed that the right man had been chosen. He fully deserved the post, for it was recognized that he was a scientific sailor to whom naval warfare is a fine art. How carefully the Prince has studied the international and military situation is illustrated by an important and prophetic speech he made at the Union Jack Club.

A Prophetic Speech

"I trust," he said, "that one great truth will always be remembered—that no one Service can dispense with the other. There are people who go about saying: 'If war comes the Fleet alone is quite enough to keep any body from coming anywhere near the shores of this island kingdom.'

"There can be no more foolish or mischievous statement. The Fleet alone could not do it, and the presence of a sufficient trained, professional army in this island at all times is quite as necessary as the other arm of the Service."

The lads on the quarter-deck have the greatest faith in the Prince. Throughout the Navy he is known by the nickname of "All Serene."

NO NEED TO WORRY OVER INVASION OF CANADA

"Suppose," said a writer, "that a foreign country were to send troops into Canada, would not the United States, acting under the Monroe Doctrine, have to fight on behalf of Canada?" Don't worry yourself, Mr. Trouble Finder. Foreign troops are not going to invade Canada, and would not attempt it even if they wished to do so. Canada is too far away, and the difficulties are too many for any nation to try to invade the Dominion. One of the things in the way of an invasion is the British navy. Another obstacle in the way of invaders would be about a million fighting men in Canada. The Monroe Doctrine, however, only is intended to prevent foreign countries from forming new colonies in this section of the world, but we would not interfere to prevent a war. As to any foreign country annexing Canada by conquest, it is quite safe to say the Canadians can take care of themselves."—New York Telegraph.

The Battle Continues With Terrific Fighting

THE ALLIES' OFFENSIVE PROGRESSES STEP BY STEP

Italy's Army and Navy is in Splendid Shape --- Russians Everywhere Successful --- German Corpses Lie in Heaps

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 2.—The official statement this afternoon says the battle continues, with terrific fighting on the allies' left wing, notably in the region of Roye, where the Germans have concentrated important reinforcements. The action extends more and more towards the north. The front of the battle line now extends into the region south of Arras. The Germans attempted, during the night, to throw a bridge across the Mease, but artillery fire destroyed it. The allies' offensive progresses step by step in the Woevre district. On the remainder of the battlefront there have been nothing but desultory operations.

Berlin, Oct. 2.—According to an announcement made in Berlin to-day, the great battle in France is still undecided. The Germans are described as hammering the French positions at numerous points with their heavy artillery, and attempts of the allies to break through the German lines have been repulsed. The heaviest losses have been in the Argonne region.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE EVERYWHERE SUCCESSFUL.

Petrograd, Oct. 2.—The general staff has given out that the Russian troops have continued to repulse the enemy from the boundaries of the governments of Suwalki and Loma. German troops that were attacking Ossowetz are retreating hastily to the north. An attack by Russian cavalry against the German vanguard in front of Andrew, and marching on Kielee, was crowned with great success. The German infantry was caught unawares and is retreating in disorder, pursued by Russian cavalry. The Russian advance is successful everywhere.

London, Oct. 2.—A despatch from Venice to the Daily Mail reports that the allied fleet has begun operations against Pola, the chief naval station of Austria-Hungary.

London, Oct. 2.—A despatch from Copenhagen to the Times declares that extensive preparations are being made in Cologne for the defence of that city against possible attack.

London, Oct. 2.—A despatch from Rheims to the Exchange Telegraph Co., dated Wednesday, says: "Rheims was the scene of a fierce artillery duel this morning. During the bombardment the American consul, William Bardel, had a narrow escape. A shell wrecked half of his residence, over which the Stars and Stripes were flying."

ITALIAN SYMPATHY FOR BRITAIN.

New York, Oct. 2.—A cable to the Tribune from Rome says: "Sympathy and friendship of the people of Italy for England are growily daily. There is great activity both in the army and the navy. Every day the country is getting more thoroughly prepared and equipped for any eventuality. The Italian fleet was never before in such fine condition as regards vessels, armament and personnel, while officers and men are burning to show their mettle."

GERMAN FORCES LACK FOOD.

London, Oct. 2.—The Central News correspondent at Calais, after a tour in the vicinity of the allies' left, wires that he has seen many things to remove any misgivings as to the outcome of the battle. The curtain is about to be lifted on the greatest drama e ver seen in war. A portion of the German right wing on Wednesday was in great danger. Their lines, which a few days ago faced westward, are now facing northwest. A patrol from Von Kluck's command, captured on Sunday owing to the exhaustion of their horses, says they had nothing to eat for some days. Von Kluck's position on his right has been made more precarious by the general staff crowding reinforcements upon him, for whom the commissariat is inadequate.

CORPSES LIE IN HEAPS.

London, Oct. 2.—The Germans have suffered heavily everywhere, under the well-directed machine gun fire of the Belgians, according to the statement cabled from Antwerp. At the Woevre and St. Catherine forts alone, outside of Antwerp, the German dead may be counted by thousands. At several points corpses lie in heaps and entire companies have been exterminated.

London, Oct. 2.—The correspondent of the Central News at Accrington, Lancashire, says: "The general opinion among cotton manufacturers is that, because of the war, the mills of Lancashire and Cheshire, and in fact of the whole country, will be forced to close before Christmas."

BRUSSELS SHORT OF FOOD.

London, Oct. 2.—Seven hundred thousand persons in Brussels are facing starvation, according to Hugh Gibbons, secretary of the American embassy there, who is now in this city. The supply of flour in the Belgian capital will be exhausted to-day, and other staples are virtually all consumed. The last apportionment of flour to the citizens will be given out this afternoon.

CHURCH UNION

The Methodists May Adopt It

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—The special committee of the Methodist General Conference has prepared a report favoring union with Presbyterian and Congregational Churches, and, it is understood, the report will be practically endorsed unanimously by the Conference.

COUNTY MAGISTRATE

A. O. Langley of Lakefield Notified of His Appointment

A. O. Langley, barrister, of Lakefield, has received notification to the effect that ne nas neen appointed Police Magistrate for the County of Peterboro to succeed Magistrate George A. Edmison, K.C., who resigned a short time ago. The new magistrate is forty-two years of age, is well adapted for his new duties. He studied law under Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the opposition, and after graduating with honors from Trinity University, he was called to the bar in 1896.

For the following four years he practised in the city of Toronto but he then moved to Lakefield. His efficiency was soon noted and he was appointed solicitor for the village of Lakefield, for the Royal Bank of Lakefield and Warsaw, and many other companies and corporations. He was President of the Lakefield Conservative Association, which office he has resigned since receiving his appointment.

A. O. LANGLEY

Whose appointment as County Magistrate for Peterboro has just been gazetted.

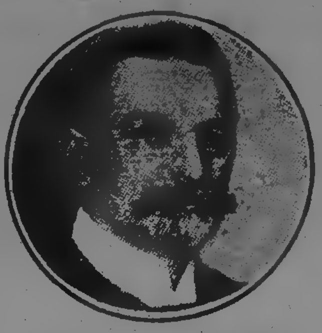
Magistrate Langley is a member and warden of St. John's Anglican Church at Lakefield and has been their representative to the Synod for many years. He is a Past Master of Clementi Lodge A.F. and A.M., No. 313, and is also president of the Lindsay District Public Library Institute. He is a brother of John Langley the well known Chartered Accountant of Toronto. In 1901 he married a daughter of the late Edgar Bray, D.L.S., of Oakville, Ont.

Magistrate Langley will have an office in Peterboro.

AUSTRIA FLOPS

ROME, Oct. 2.—(Via London.)—The Austrian Government has replied to the Italian protest against the floating mines in the Adriatic Sea. Austria deplores the sinking of Italian vessels and promises to take measures to remove the menace to shipping and to fully indemnify the families of the victims.

It is reported that Italy demands an indemnity from Austria of $1,000,000.



ADMIRAL VON CAPELLE,

Secretary of the German Admiralty. This is a new post, created since the outbreak of war.

London, Oct. 2.—A despatch to Lloyds declares that the British steamer Selby, coal laden, for Antwerp, from Shields, struck a mine in the North Sea and sank. Her crew of 21 were rescued. The crew were landed at Lourstoft to-day.

OATHS TAKEN

New Men in Ontario Legislature Sworn in Today

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Oct. 2. — Sir John Gibson performed his final offiial act as Lieutenant Governor this morning when he administered the oath office to the new premier, the Hon. W. H. Hearst, and to the new minister of Public Works the Hon Findlay MacDiarmid. Later, in cabinet council, Sir William Meredith administered the oath to the new Lieut. Governor the Hon. John S. Hendrie.

More Trouble From Komagata Maru

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 2.—A despatch from Calcutta to Reuter describes a mutiny of Sikhs at Bajbaj, ten miles from Calcutta. The Bengal government statement says: "Sikh passengers on the steamer Komagata Maru, who were refused permission to land at Vancouver, arrived at Bajbaj last Saturday. Some of them refused to board the train for Punjab and opened fire with revolvers. One European was killed and several others, including the commissioner of police, were wounded. One Punjab policeman was killed and several wounded. Troops were compelled to fire to check rushes of the Sikhs, and 16 of the rioters were killed. The remainder scattered to the surrounding villages and later were rounded up.

MORE MINES TO BE LAID.

London, Oct. 2.—The official information burea announced to-day that the government had decided to lay mines in certain areas as a counter stroke to German procedure.

RUSSIANS ENGAGE AUSTRO GERMAN FORCES AT CRACOW GREAT BATTLE IN PROGRESS

In Suwalki District the Russians Have Foiled Two Desperate Efforts of the Germans to Cross the Niemen River —Kaiser is Rushing Troops From France to Aid in Resisting Eastern Invasion.

LONDON, Oct. 2. — The expected engagement before Cracow opened yesterday. The forces of the enemy include the Germans and Austrians and Saxon corps, in addition to a considerable number of first line troops transferred from France. The Austrian forces comprise the entire remainder of the army with the exception of that part which is opposing the Servians. Gen. von Hindenberg, variously reported during the last few days as being seriously ill and as being hurt by a fall from his horse, is in command.

The Russians, under command of Gen. Rennenkampf, number approximately 1,000,000 men at this point, and as many more are available as will be necessary. Gens. Rousky and Dimitrioff are co-operating.

Another German army, driven from the Town of Augustowo, is engaged with a force of Russians estimated at 500,000 men in the forest of the same name, which is cut up by many small lakes. The ground is very favorable to defensive operations and the defenders of Cracow expect their army in that vicinity to protect their flank.

A Petrograd despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. says:

"In the Suwalki district from the flank of the Germans the Russians foiled two determined attempts to force a passage of the Niemen river between Olita on the north and Druskeniki on the south. Military critics point out that with the capture of Augustowo and Koptzyewo the Russians have broken the German centre.

"The German line extended from Ossowetz to Simno, and the Russians with great bravery have expelled the Germans from their entrenchments on the lakes, which are divided by only from two to five miles of dry land.

"According to the newspaper the German losses at Druskeniki amounted to 20,000. The rains have mired the roads so that many German guns have been embedded and lost."

The special correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co., who has just returned to Petrograd from a tour of the Galician battlefields, reports that from Lublin southward he found the country devastated and deserted, and the villages burned or razed to the ground.

At Tomaszow depots for Russian trophies of war has been improvised in barns. Among the prizes are rows of howitzers, quick-firers and mortars, many of which have not even been fired, and the majority of which were undamaged. The Russians proposed to establisha special battery of artillery with the guns.

The correspondents found Jaroslau surrounded with barbed wire, behind which were entrenchments and undamaged earthworks.

"The flight of the Austrians after a short bombardment," he says, "appears to have been a most pusilanimous action."

The town itself presented a most animated appearance, business going on as usual.

Kaiser Rushes Troops East.

ROME, Oct. 2. — (Via Paris.)—According to despatches reaching here, all the Bohemian and Moravian railroads are congested with German troops and war material, which are being transported to the Russian frontier. Germany is making a supreme effort to face the Russian advance and all civilian transport has been forbidden.

Despatches from Vienna say that the Austrian staff is entirely dependent upon that of Germany, which has assumed supreme command in the campaign against Russia.

HON. W. H. HEARST TAKES HIGH OFFICE OF PREMIER CABINET REORGANIZED

Dr. Reaume Succeeded by Finlay Macdiarmid, M.P.P., and Other Portfolios Remain Unchanged—Hon. Mr. Hearst Retains Ministry of Lands and Mines.

PREMIER HEARST.

Hon. I. B. Lucas Will Sit on the Hydro Electric Board —Beck Remains Chairman

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—The following official statement was given out at the Parliament Buildings at nine o'clock last night:

On Wednesday Lieutenant-Governor Sir John Gibson who remains in office until his successor is sworn in, sent for the Hon. Dr. Pyne for consultation. Attorney-General Foy, the senior member of the late Government not being sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to be seen in connection with public business. Dr. Pyne has been acting as chairman of the executive council for some time past and was obviously the Minister to be consulted, he making no claim to the succession himself, but clearly and distinctly intimating that he would refuse absolutely to assume the responsibility. It was also understood that the Hon. Mr. Hanna was not prepared to accept the Premiership under any circumstances, and on the advice of Hon. Dr. Pyne his honor sent for the Hon. W. H. Hearst, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, and requested him to assume the Premiership and the task of reorganization of the Government. Mr. Hearst intimated his willingness to undertake the responsibility, asking for time to consult with his colleagues of the late Government, who at once placed their several portfolios at his disposal. It is understood that the following selections have been made of Ministers of the reconstructed Cabinet:

First Minister and President of Executive Council, and Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, Hon. W. H. Hearst.

Attorney-General, Hon. J. J. Foy.

Minister of Education, Hon R. A. Pyne.

Provincial Secretary, Hon. W. J. Hanna.

Minister of Agriculture, Hon. J. S. Duff.

Provincial Treasurer, Hon. I. B. Lucas.

Minister of Public Works, Finlay G. Macdiarmid.

Minister without portfolio, Hon. R. F. Preston.

The Ministers will be sworn in before His Honor Sir John Gibson at the Parliament Buildings at 10 o'clock to-day.

The Hon. Sir Adam Beck will continue chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, but in accordance with the views entertained for some time by himself and the late Government that it would be advantageous to have the Provincial Treasurer as a member of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, Hon. I. B. Lucas will take the position on the commission that the act requires to be filled by a member of the executive council.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Herbert Landry Dealt With Leniently by Judge Haycke

Herbert Landry, who pleaded guilty to the charge of perjury, came before His Honor Judge Huycke this morning, and was allowed to go on suspended sentence. His Honor in giving sentence spoke of the enormity of the crime which Landry committed, remarking how it shatters the very foundation upon which the wheels of justice move. The accused had been before him before and sentenced to a term in prison but evidently it had had no effect. He was deserving of a heavier penalty but on the request of his counsel, Mr. Widdifield, he was dealt with leniently, not so much for himself but for the sake of his family. Judge Huycke warned him that should he keep sober and shun evil companions all would be well but if he returns again to the same resorts and habits the Chief of Police will have power to arrest him and if this happened he would certainly be given a very severe penalty. Landry will report to Chief Thompson every week.

W. F. HAMILTON LOSES APPEAL AGAINST JUDGMENT FOR WIFE

Toronto, Oct. 2.—William F. Hamilton of Peterboro, alleges that he was under the influence of his wife, Mrs. Jean Hamilton, from whom he is separated, when he gave her a note for $5,000. He further states that he was under the influence of intoxicating liquors and noxious drugs, that he was in a state of imbecility and incapable of understanding or comprehending the most ordinary business matters. He disputed the validity of the note. Mrs. Hamilton sued and at the trial was awarded judgment for the note with interest and charges. Mr. Hamilton's appeal has been dismissed by the Appellate Division.

Retreat of Austrians Cut Off

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 2.—Unless all signs fail, the German armies in France, or at any rate most of them, are nearing the completion of their round trip. This, it is held here, is the only conclusion—and it is hinted at even in Berlin newspapers—to be drawn from the reports, both official and unofficial, of those on or near the scene of action. It is evident that the progress of the allies' left is considerable. The Montenegrin army, according to the official communication issued by the Montenegrin consul-general here, stands across the road approaching the Bosnian capital, Sarayevo, whose supplies have thus been cut off. The Montenegrins have commenced their attack on Sarayevo, the fall of which, it is claimed in the report, "[illegible] imminent." The same announcement says that by the [illegible] Vlasenitza the Servians have cut off the retreat of the [illegible] army.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1914

"THE WAR WILL NOT LAST LONG."

"THIS WAR will not last long or demand very great human sacrifices — at any rate not from the allies." This is the opinion of Colonel F. N. Maude, one of the greatest authorities on strategy in Great Britain, writing in T. P.'s Weekly. Colonel Maude, who opens his article with an attack on the "blatent nonsense about German antiquated tactics," declares that he would be ready to join the pessimists if he relied upon information dealing with the initial stages of the war as published in the daily press. He puts no faith in the news that the Germans are still using the close formation which proved so disastrous to France in 1870, but in spite of this he is convinced that the war will not last long.

It is on the superiority of the French artillery that Colonel Maude bases his unfaltering belief in the early supremacy of the allies. Fifteen years ago, he says, he could not have written in this strain, for it seemed then that so carefully were adjusted the calculations of time and space on which strategy is always based, that, once started, the French would be for a certainty hemmed in and crushed around Paris, as in 1870—possibly even a little sooner.

Colonel Maude gives a brief review of German attacking methods which, coming from so notable an authority, is well worth attention. He says: "Troops advancing towards an enemy are always, in the German school, arranged in such order of magnitude that each one, in succession from the front, is always the advance guard of the others which are following. And the primary obligation of every advance guard is to gain time, by the resistance it can offer, for those troops behind it to deploy and move up to its assistance. If they fail in this task, if their resistance is beaten down and they are thrown back in confusion on their following suports, panic spreads like flame in stubble, and the whole scheme of concentration—towards which all marches in war time tend—may be upset and ruined by the failure of even a relatively insignificant action of the whole mass."

In view of the retreat of the invading Prussians when they seemed to be on the threshold of victory, Colonel Maude's arguments are of more than usual interest. Apparently the defeat of the advance columns caused the disorder predicted by the great strategian, who believes that the French army by itself would have been invincible because of its artillery arrangements. There will be almost universal disagreement with this view, for the support of the British forces seems to have been the cause of the German reverses, but Colonel Maude will never be entirely disproved. It will always be a question whether France could have defeated her ancient enemy without assistance.

The statement is made that the French have revolutionized modern warfare by their artillery improvements. They made it possible to bring about a decision in minutes where their German opponents were allowing hours. At first, says Colonel Maude, the Germans simply laughed to scorn this claim of the French, but Bulgarian and Greek experience has since completely borne the French theories out in practice. Developments of the great war now in progress point to the fact that the French claim to superiority in the matter of artillery has been borne out with even greater losses to the enemy than was expected. It must not be forgotten that where the allies lost a thousand men the Germans lost from five to ten thousand. The tactics of the British and French have been to do as much damage as possible in the shortest time and then retire before the battle became too hot. These tactics have been more than satisfactory; they have brought about a brilliant victory for the allied armies. The British troops have played a wonderful part, but there is no doubt but that the French artillery, firing gusts of eight rounds of shrapnel in thirty-two seconds and so smothering their adversary that aimed musketry fire against the advancing infantry became physically impossible, have done much to bring about the defeat of the invaders.

PRUSSIANS NOT RELATED TO BRITISH.

THE STATEMENT is frequently made, says the Montreal Journal of Commerce, that "the Germans will fight to the last ditch, that they are of the same race as we are, and consequently do not quit under fire." This is not true; the Germans west of the Elbe, or the Low-German people, are related to us, but the Prussians, who constitute the largest proportion of the German Empire, are not related to us. As a matter of fact, they are no nearer related to us than are the Turks, with whom, according to some late ethnologists, the Prussians have blood connections.

The British people are a blending of Teuton and Celt, with the Celtic strain predominating. The Prussians, on the other hand, are neither Teutons nor Celts, but are the offspring of the Slavs, an expatriated gang driven out because of their violence and stupidity. There, on the shores of the Baltic, they settled, mingling with a remnant of Huns who had been driven from Central Europe by the Romans and Goths. As a result, the Prussians are half Slav and half Mongol. The authority for these statements is Professor Schwill, a German, who writes as follows:

> "In the ninth century another branch of the Slavs, called the Letts, came into history. We first meet them on the shores of the Baltic, from the Vistula to some distance beyond the Nieman. They were divided into Lithuanians and Prussians. It is curious to note that the name of this non-German people (the Prussians) has in the process of time come to be applied to the leading German States."

Canon Taylor tells us that the Prussians are the Po-Rusi, the men near the Russians. In the names of Pomerania and Prussia we have the Sclavonic preposition "po" (by).

It is a notable fact that the Prussians, apart from having given the world Emmanuel Kant, have never produced a really great man. The great musicians, scientists, authors and inventors of Germany did not come from Prussian, but from the Low-German stock. The only mark the Prussians left upon the world is that of blood. During one-half of their history, they were savages, and for the other half slaves, and from all accounts are carrying out their innate tendencies at the present time. History shows that one of the earliest achievements of the Prussians was the martyrdom in 997 A.D. of Bishop Adalbert, of Prague, who tried to convert them. A quarter of a century later, Bolesas, Duke of Poland, forced Christianity upon them at the point of the sword, but for the next three hundred years the Prussians did nothing but engage in Pagan raids against their Christian neighbors. They remained Pagan savages until the middle of the 13th century, when the order of Teutonic Knights subdued them on condition that they be allowed to retain possession of whatever lands they conquered. The war lasted until 1283, when the Knights finally subdued and Christianized Pagan Prussia, founding, among other cities, the present strongholds, Koenigsberg and Thorn. In 1454, Prussia, aided by Poland, overthrew the power of the Knights, and twelve years later Prussia became a dependency of Poland, and remained so until 1701, when the father of Frederick the Great converted the Duchy into a Kingdom.

The treacherous nature of her rulers, and the brutality of her people has left Prussia minus friends among the powers of Europe. Her mean war with Denmark, followed by that with Austria in 1866, and then her action in provoking war with France in 1870, are but on a par with the early history of this barbaric race. The present German Emperor is King of Prussia, and his injunction to his soldiers to emulate Atilla and the Huns is what might be expected from a people with a history such as that possessed by Prussia. It is a base slander to say that the Prussians are kinsmen of the British. They are not in any way related to us, and do not have even the excellent fighting qualities possessed by the British. Prussians are the result of a union of the off-scouring of the Slavic races and of the Huns who originally were Mongols.

A Supposition.

(St. Thomas Times.)

Suppose for an instant that Germany, instead of going to war, should have been content to guard herself against assault and invasion, suggests a correspondent in the New York Evening Post. Suppose that Russia should have moved against her, and that France should have joined her forces with those of Russia. What then would have been the world's verdict as to Germany's position? The public sentiment that now condemns Germany would have been her strength and possibly her salvation. But by her unjustifiable aggressions, her eagerness to force war, she has alienated from her cause the sympathy of the rest of the world, and will have to abide by the results. Well will it be for Germany if these results be not her deep humiliation, almost to the extent of annihilation.

Sir James Whitney.

(La Patrie.)

It is an irreparable loss for the Province of Ontario, which Sir James has pressed vigorously along the way of progress since the confidence of his fellow citizens elevated him to the front rank in the administration of the province. Sir James Whitney was one of the best loved and most respected public men of the great sister province. He was the man of the people whom he constantly took into his confidence. His frankness, which resembled that of Sir George Etienne Cartier, at first estranged those who came near him, but it won him general confidence. He never concealed his thoughts. He was an honest man.

Enemies of the Country.

(Monetary Times.)

These are some of the enemies of our country: The man who hoards gold; the man who hoards food; the employer who discharges a man except from the direst necessity; the man who does anything to disturb the normal conditions of business; the man who thinks of his profits before his country; the man who needlessly cancels a contract; the man who needlessly takes advantage of a moratorium; the man who puts up prices except to cover increased costs; the man who by any exceptional action seeks to protect himself at the expense of his fellow-countrymen.

Dog Days for Newspapers.

(Montreal Gazette.)

The Voerwarts at Berlin has been suppressed for being too peace-loving, while at Toulouse, in France, L'Homme Libre has undergone a temporary suspension for being, it would appear, too virulently bellicose. These be hard days for newspapers. The censors try to keep the news from them, and the other militarists crush them when they have opinions of their own and send them forth.

Styles Change for Warships.

(Detroit Tribune.)

Another illustration of the size of the present war: Each of the three British cruisers sunk by German torpedoes near Harwich, though rated as old and inferior ships of war, was larger than any craft that fought in the war of the United States with Spain.

Greatest Army in the World.

(Buffalo Courier.)

Twenty-two millions strong! That is the latest estimate of America's magnificent army. The preliminary report of the Federal Bureau of Education shows that more than 22,000,000 boys and girls, young men and young women have this autumn enrolled in the schools and colleges of the United States.

Kaiser May Be Willing.

(New York Telegram.)

From present indications the Kaiser may be willing to make this his last war, anyway.

DISCOURAGEMENT

By Walt Mason

No matter what our task, some days will find us sighing, and wearily we ask, "What is the use of trying?" The heart is often sore, from struggle and endeavor; from doing one thing o'er, forever and forever. We feel that what we do is really not worth doing, and that the goal in view is not worth the pursuing. We feel there is no chance to better our condition, as sadly we advance to old age and demnition. We dwell with Fear and Doubt, and all ambitions perish; the bottom's fallen out of everything we cherish. Upon such doleful days, which come to clerk or writer, how quickly words of praise will make the whole world brighter! There ambles to my side a pilgrim bent and hoary, who murmurs, "By St. Bride! I liked your latest story!" This little cheerful word, though it may be deluding, makes worry seem absurd, and ends my grief and brooding. And I, refreshed and strong, go forth, no longer tearful, to pass that word along, and make some toiler cheerful.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

LET'S GATHER THE APPLES.

Editor Review,

Sir: A couple of weeks ago I drew attention through the press to the fact that, owing to apples being an extra fine crop this yea and the restricted facilities for shipping them on account of the war, many orchards would not be picked and some but partially so, and suggested that some means be adopted to gather some of the surplus for those who are in need, and others who are suffering from the war. So far I see that no action has been taken to that end, although we have a patriotic committee formed here to look after such matters. I see by yesterday's papers that other places are moving along the line suggested. One mode of procedure is for the boy scouts to pick the apples where they are available and for the automobile owners to bring them in. There also seems to be a surplus of tomatoes and other crops which might be had in the same way.

I also suggested that one or more of the committee should interview the farmers on the market on Saturdays and make known to them the conditions and ask for their co-operation. Once the farmers realized the situation and their responsibilities they would rise equal to the occasion and respond patriotically.

I think it would be well for the press to urge something of this nature before the season is too far advanced.

Yours, etc.,
ALACRITY.

Oct. 2nd, 1914.

P.S.—Since writing the above I see that an Ottawa paper of today says that "Every farmer should market all produce grown this year. It is well to remember that a wilful waste makes a woeful want and that it is our duty as patriotic tillers of the soil to feed the thousands who have been thrown out of work on account of the war."

MAKING SHRAPNEL SHELLS.

Canadian Firms Get Big Contract From British Government.

TORONTO, Oct. 2. — Further details of the arrangement announced on Tuesday, by which Canadian manufacturing firms will supply the British War Office with large numbers of shrapnel shells, were given out yesterday by officials of several Toronto concerns. In a nutshell, the contracts mean work for 250 or 300 Toronto men at tip-top wages for an indefinite length of time. The shops contracting will work, some of them, 24 hours a day. Galt, Sherbrooke, Dundas, Welland and firms in other places are also soon to take some of this contract.

The manufacture of these 15 and 18-pound shrapnel shells is a delicate and exacting piece of work, subject to unt'ing Government inspection. It also requires considerable special machinery and tools, which the Canadian firms are now collecting.

The War Office has placed an initial order in Canada of 100,000 shells. Before doing so a commission was put to work to report if Canadian manufacturers could make shell.

JOFFRE FOR MARSHAL?

Ancient French Office Will Probably Be Revived Soon.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The office of the marshal of France will probably be filled again soon. A decree issued Tuesday fixes a salary for that post, which has long been empty, and in the minds of the French people there is no doubt where the honor will be bestowed.

The marshal of France was the highest rank in the old royalist armies, and the post was retained when the French army was reorganized in 1875. It was provided then that the conditions under which the rank should be bestowed should be fixed later.

No one has ever been appointed to the dignity under the present French Republic, because, as The Matin says in an editorial yesterday: "No prominent figure has appeared in French military affairs who has merited it until the present commander-in-chief confronted the emergency of the present war."

The salary is fixed at 30,000 francs ($6,000).

To mend broken china or glass, melt some common alum in an old iron spoon over the fire and apply to the broken parts. When dry these articles can be washed in hot water and the cement will hold rigidly.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The British War Office has issued a call for 1,000 expert railroad men to assist in the operation of the French railways.

The crew of the steamer Selby, sunk by a mine in the North Sea while on a voyage from Shields to Antwerp, was landed at Lowestoft yesterday.

An official message issued at Budapest, according to a Rome despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., states that Hungarians have recaptured Uzsok Pass in the Carpathians.

The ratepayers of the Township of Kitley voted down by a large majority a bylaw to bonus the proposed Gananoque, Arnprior & Ottawa Railway to the amount of $25,000.

Prompt measures in procuring and forwarding warm clothing for the French soldiers for the winter is urged by the national committee appointed to take charge of that work.

Henry De Marse and Alton Heath, river guides, residing at Thousand Island Park, were drowned in the river near Grennell Island while making a crossing between these two points.

Starting in a shed at the rear of a building, fire did considerable damage yesterday afternoon to a block on Main street, Galt, owned by M. Brock Wilkins of Toronto. The loss is $10,000.

Lt.-Col. T. G. J. Beuchon is listed as "killed on the field of honor" in the latest French casuality list. He was one of the French leaders in the campaign of the great nations against China in the Boxer rebellion.

The coroner's jury at Montreal yesterday brought in a verdict of murder against J. N. Lapres for shooting Jules Lavergne in the latter's photographic studio Wednesday. Lapres lies dangerously wounded at Notre Dame Hospital.

London Drys Refuse Truce.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The temperance forces of London have rejected the offer of the hotelmen to hand the $3,000 in the latter's coffers over to the patriotic fund if the temperance men would call off their proposed license reduction campaign this year, and the campaign to have six licenses cut off in January next, will be proceeded with.

Crown Princess Goes To Front.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—In a Berlin via The Hague despatch, a correspondent of a news agency says that Cecilie, the German Crown Princess, accompanied by her two eldest sons, has left Berlin to join the Crown Prince at his headquarters in France. She purposes personally to bestow decorations upon officers of her dragoon regiment.

The "Gentleman Corporal"

By M. QUAD

They were going to make a ride to the foothills and back—Captain Cline and the colonel's daughter. That meant a gallop of thirty miles.

"Not an Indian has been seen this side of the range for four months," said the captain as he talked over the proposed ride with the colonel, "and the trip is perfectly safe. I will detail an escort from my own company, but it will be only for appearance sake."

"Yes, it will be safe, and May will enjoy the gallop," said the colonel, and no more was said about it.

At sunrise as were ready to set forth, As the girl stood on the veranda waiting for her horse six of the men of A troop came riding up under command of Corporal Haynes. They halted thirty feet away, and as she looked them over she gave a start of surprise, and a flush overspread her face. Next moment her cheeks went white, and she gasped as if choked for breath. The corporal's hand slowly lifted, and his head was uncovered for an instant, and Private Harkins whispered to Private O'Brien:

"And did you see that, Jim? By smoke, if our corporal and the colonel's daughter haven't met before then I don't know a jack rabbit from a long drink of whisky!"

"And the corporal isn't a bit easy in his mind," added the other.

It all took place in a minute, and then Captain Cline rode up, followed by the girl's horse.

The two riders went galloping away, followed at a distance of 100 yards by the escort. Now and then the pace was slackened down a bit to breathe the horses, but no halt was made until the Devil's basin was reached. The escort halted forty yards from the riders, and the men sat about on the rocks. Meanwhile Corporal Haynes climbed to the top of a great bowlder and surveyed the country about with his keen eyes. It was three-quarters of an hour before he came down and said:

"Men, see to your arms and lie close. I'm going up to report to the captain."

"Did I call you?" he harshly asked as the corporal came to a halt and saluted.

"No, sir," was the reply, "but I thought it best to tell you that I have made out Indians beyond the basin to the north."

"It's all nonsense."

"But there are Indians skulking about, sir," persisted the corporal.

"Go back to your men!" was the sulky reply.

When he had reached the troopers he quietly said:

"Men, I have been up to the captain to report that there is a band of at least fifty Indians skulking down this way from Red Bird pass. They have seen us, and they are after us. We've got good cover, and we can stand 'em off for the day."

"But when night comes?" asked one of the men, though without a tremor in his tones.

"Get quietly ready," was the reply.

Meanwhile there was an argument between the captain and the colonel's daughter. He sought to assure her that nothing had been seen and that there was not the slightest danger; but, to his annoyance, she persisted in believing that there must be good grounds for the corporal's report. This annoyance made him delay matters, and nearly half an hour had passed, and it was very much against the grain when he shouted for the soldiers to approach and sneeringly added:

"Well, corporal, isn't it about time your Indians showed up?"

"We shall hear from them in ten minutes," was the reply, "but if we mounted now and rode fast we would find the way open," said the corporal with downcast eyes.

"Back, you impudent vagabond!" thundered the captain with outstretched arms. "I'll break you for this the minute we get back!"

The corporal turned his gaze on the girl for a few fleeting seconds; then his head and shoulders dropped in a helpless way, and he saluted his officer and retired.

Bang, bang, bang, went the carbines of the troopers, and the corporal came running up the hill to seize and drag the officer under shelter and to say to the girl:

"You must crouch down here and remain quiet. They can't get at you till they have killed the last one of us!"

By and by she missed the reports of the carbines, and the sound of footsteps echoed in her ears.

"Come!" said the corporal as he lifted her up.

"Oh, Robert, and have you beaten them off?" she exclaimed.

"No. My men are all dead, and the Indians will rush us in a minute."

"And we—we—"

He put his arms around her waist and assisted her to the rock, on which were the remains of her breakfast. The steaming, heaving, mysterious lake was thirty feet beneath them.

"Better this than that!" he said as he pointed from the lake to a score of Indians advancing.

"Yes, better this!" she murmured as she took fast hold of him and put up her face to be kissed, and the savages stopped in their advance and shrieked and screamed their disappointment. By and by they advanced and looked down into the lake, but it had no story to tell.

Francis Bacon.

The death of Francis Bacon was caused by his devotion to the cause of research and scientific investigation. During one of his excursions to the country he conceived the idea that animal substances may be preserved by means of snow. He procured a fowl and conducted the experiment himself. A severe cold was the result, and in his already enfeebled condition he was not able to withstand it and died of what we now know as bronchitis April 9, 1626, aged sixty-five, at the home of Lord Arundel. He was buried in St. Michael's church, St. Albans.

The Intelligent Newcomer.

We are credibly informed that Englishmen are the greatest colonizers in the world, the greatest sportsmen in the world and the greatest outdoor people in the world. Sometimes, out in the newer parts of Canada, people are willing to argue that. A western bishop hired a new come Englishman to cook, as he was the only one in the party who could not cook, and cautioned him to be sure to wash the meat before cooking it. He did—with soap.

It was an Englishman not yet across the water who wrote to find out about the proper outfit for Canada and who inquired whether moccasins or snowshoes were regarded as the warmer for footwear.

It was an Englishman on the Athabasca river who bored a hole in a floating scow to let the water out. And yet another Englishman, when asked to set a watermark at night to determine whether or not the river was rising, carefully made a mark at the water line on the side of a floating boat.

On the whole, there seems to be a great difference between colonizers and colonists.—Saturday Evening Post.

An Eye to the Future.

The late Wilson Barrett possessed a valuable old dresser who had the good fortune to be built on the same classic lines as Barrett himself, and accordingly inherited his master's cast-off clothes. One day something had upset Barrett at rehearsal, and he lost his temper. Every one stampeded out of his way. He strode into his dressing room with flashing eyes, and so indignant did he feel that he incontinently dashed his hat with great violence into the corner of the apartment. The faithful dresser, who knew every mood of his master, was quite unperturbed. He merely exclaimed, in bland tones, but with a touch of reproach:

"Here, steady, gov'nor; I've got to wear that some day!"

Rheumatism

Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

Woman's World

Peace Medal For Famous American Woman Author.

MRS. KATRINA TRASK.

At this time, when the public mind is so occupied by the war question, it is interesting to consider the personality of an American woman who has been recently honored for her services against international war.

This honor is the award of the annual peace medal by the American School Peace league. The organization believes that in her latest book, "In the Vanguard," Mrs. Katrina Trask has done more than any other person in America during the year to advance international peace.

"In the Vanguard" deals with the story of a young man full of military enthusiasm. A supposititious war breaks out between this country and a foreign power, and he enlists, much to the admiration of his friends and sweetheart. The story takes him into his first battle. He enters the battle and fights during part of it, showing the greatest bravery. The sight of men being shot down convinces him that warfare is really murder. He turns away, not because of fear, but because of abhorrence. It is the ordeal which comes for him later, when he has to face the ridicule of his comrades and the indignation of his friends at home that is the main idea of the play. Even his sweetheart turns against him, but he refuses to alter his decision and declines to be a party to what he considers murder.

The author of "In the Vanguard" is the widow of Spencer Trask, the New York banker and philanthropist. She has written many books of high literary merit. Her best known works are "Night and Morning," "King Alfred's Jewels," "Mors et Victoria" and "Little Town of Bethlehem." The exquisite quality of her verse is best appreciated by fellow poets. Her latest work, discriminating critics assert, deserves to be ranked as a classic.

Mrs. Trask's literary work has been carried on at her beautiful home, Yaddo, on the outskirts of Saratoga Springs. The mansion stands on an elevation commanding a wide stretch of picturesque country. Surrounding it are grounds beautifully laid out. Recently Mrs. Trask announced that when she passed away these were to be given over to the townspeople of Saratoga as a park. Both her husband and herself have been identified with much wholesome philanthropic work.

THE HOUSEHOLD GUARDIAN.

How to Feed and Care For the Family Watchdog.

If you want handsome pets that are a credit to you they must be well cared for and treated considerately.

All dogs want a natural outdoor life, with plenty of exercise, and those who have not time to exercise their dogs should not keep them at all.

Feeding a dog should be the special duty of one person. If it is everybody's business the animal is sure to be overfed one day and shockingly neglected another.

Two meals a day and at regular times are sufficient.

For breakfast early in the morning biscuits, with a little meat or bones or gravy, will suffice, but the second meal about 6 o'clock should be more varied and may include boiled rice with broth, cooked meat scraps and vegetables, boiled entrails, scraps from the table, but not fat. A bone to gnaw cleanses the teeth and aids digestion.

Sweet cakes and other fancy foods are undesirable, leading to digestive troubles and spoiling the appearance of the coat.

A supply of fresh drinking water should always be within the dog's reach, and the vessel ought to be washed every day.

It is a small matter even for busy people to spend five minutes each day brushing the dog's coat, but this greatly assists in checking insects and keeping the skin and hair in a healthy condition.

Stiffening Curtains.

When doing up curtains at home if flour is used instead of starch the iron will not stick so much and the curtains will have more the appearance of new ones. One good tablespoonful of flour for each curtain is sufficient. Mix the flour to a thick paste with cold water; then put in the tub and pour on as much boiling water as required for rinsing the curtains.

Like a bit of dainty fabric, some people are too good to be serviceable.

Good Form

Serving Dinner a la Anglaise.

There are three recognized methods of serving a formal dinner, each of which has its advantages—the Russian, the English and the "compromise" service. Naturally this last is an adapting of the best of the most available from the other two. The English is selected where help is rather limited, because in its use all belonging to one course is placed upon the table at one time, the host and hostess serving meats and vegetables placed before them in platters.

For this service the number of plates to be served may be set in a pile before the person who is to carve, or, if preferred, on a side table, from where they are handed to him one at a time. As each plate is served by the carver a maid presents it for a helping of some vegetable and then sets it down before a guest or member of the family for whom it is intended. It is understood, of course, in serving in this way that ladies are always helped first, men next, with hostess and host last.

Each course as finished is removed by a man or maid waiter or waitress; platters with the next course are placed, plates are served as before, and so until dessert is reached. The last is the placing of finger bowls, each in its small plate, with doily beneath, directly in front of each guest. Where less formality is observed help is often dismissed when fruit and coffee are on the table, with the finger bowls already in place, and so the genial conversation of congenial people may go on until time to adjourn to piazza or lawn.

The Russian Service.

The Russian table service is different. There is nothing to be seen on the table when the guests seat themselves but relishes, nuts and olives, bonbons, etc. Food is served either from the pantry or from a side table, where the carving is done. Sometimes only a meat and one vegetable are on the plate served thus, the waitress handing other foods in their respective dishes.

Again, the guests may find empty plates set before them. Then everything is passed in rotation. Where a waitress has been properly trained she will always serve from the left hand, lifting the plate that has been used with the right, while she sets another in its place with her left, so the table is never without plates until it is to be cleared of crumbs and made ready for dessert.

A Butler's Assistant.

A rule in serving in English style that needs attention is to be careful not to overcrowd dishes. A "butler's assistant" may be used where the hostess has not enough help. It is a small piece of furniture that stands at the left of the hostess bearing many little articles that are likely to be needed, such as extra knives and forks, spoons, saucers, cream pitcher, etc.

The handsome pitcher and glasses to match for iced tea, with long handled spoons, may be placed upon this useful table as well as the after dinner coffee service, with bowl for hot water, cream jug and sugar dish, spoons and everything but the hot water and coffee pot.

Innuendo.

"Is dem you all's chickens?"

"Cohse dey's my all's chickens. Whose chickens did you s'pose dey was?"

"I wasn' s'posin' nuffin about 'em But I will say dat it's mighty lucky dat a chicken won't come a-runnin' an' a-waggin' its tail when its regular owner whistles, same as a dog."—Washington Star.

Settlement Work.

"Did you hear about Muggins taking up settlement work?"

"Yes. He usually works his creditors for 50 cents on the dollar."—Town Topics.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Bearish crop estimates and big receipts more than offset in the wheat market today the influence of encouraging cables and of war demand for flour. There was a weak close, 1⅛c to 1⅞c under last night. Other leading staples, too, all showed a net decline—corn 1c to 1¼c, oats ⅛c to 1c, and provisions 7½c to 62½c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 1.—The export of grain from this port is practically at a standstill. All enquiries received from abroad for some time past have been out of line, and every day go lower than on the day previous. The decline which has taken place in American and Canadian markets is more than taken care of in the prices offered by foreign buyers. The receipts of wheat were large here again today and the local demand practically nil. It is believed that eventually the demand for foreign account will be much greater and that prices will therefore be higher. In the meantime, however, prices will no doubt reflect the piling up of stores at all points.

The cheese situation was featureless except for a few transactions between local houses at firm prices.

Butter remained easy, as did the market for eggs.

The provision market was firm but inactive.

British Steamer Sunk.

CALLAO, Peru, Oct. 2.—The Kosmos steamer Marie arrived here yesterday with the crew of the British steamer Bankfields, which was sunk by the German cruiser Leipzig off Eten, Peru.

The crew of the Bankfields have appealed to the British consul here in the hope of obtaining their liberty. The men said that their ship carried a cargo of sugar valued at $500,000.

The Marie was followed into port by the German steamer Amasis, also of the Kosmos Line.

Would Tie Up Krupp Factory.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Application for a receiver for the assets of the Krupp Company in England was denied by the court yesterday. The application was by a railroad creditor who desired to tie up the assets of the company in this country, before the end of the war would make it possible to remove them from England to Germany.

How Absinth Is Made.

An old Moor to whom a trader tried to explain the tyrannous nature of the order forbidding the sale of absinth in Morocco took a wholly unexpected attitude.

"Absinth," he said, "is an invention of the evil one. On its roots he pours the blood of a peacock; then when the leaves begin to grow he sprinkles them with the blood of a monkey; then he dips the stalks in the blood of a bear; lastly he mingles with the juice of the plant the blood of a pig.

"So that when the faithful drinks absinth at the first glass his appetite awakes, and he arises proud as a peacock; at the second glass he becomes excited and gesticulates like a monkey; at the third he becomes quarrelsome and spiteful, like a bear; at the fourth he becomes besotted and falls to the earth and rolls like a hog in the mire.

"May Allah protect us, the order is right."—New York Times.

Italy's Deep Blue Skies.

The sky of Italy is noted for its clearness. The blue is deeper not because the dust there is finer than in the northern countries, but because in the countries of the north, due to the greater coolness of the air, the vapor more readily condenses upon the dust particles. The dust particles thus become larger and consequently not so effective in turning back the blue rays alone, but others are also reflected, and a grayish effect is produced. In a single location the blue of the sky may appear bluer at one time than another. The sky is oftentimes said to be very blue when some white cumulus clouds are outlined against it. The sky is then a deep blue by contrast with the brilliant white. After a shower, when the lower stratum of air is washed of its coarse dust particles, a deeper and purer blue is the result.

ARMISTICE IN MEXICO

El Paso, Texas, Oct. 2.—Luis Aguirre Benavides, secretary to General Villa, under date of September 30, telegraphed the Associated Press that an armistice had been declared through Mexico, with Aguas Calientes as a neutral zone. He stated also that elections would be held according to the first agreement from October 5 to 10.

May Be Naturalized.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—The Justice Department has given an opinion in regard to a question raised by Canadian naturalization courts in regard to whether or not pending applications made by Germans or Austrians for naturalization papers should be granted. The Minister of Justice holds that all such applications, if in the opinion of the judges they are bona-fide, should be granted.

BRIGHT THANKSGIVING SERVICE AT ALL SAINTS

Large Congregation Heard Helpful Discourse by Rev. W. J. Southam, Toronto

With a sermon that was eloquent in its simplicity and replete with helpful thoughts, Rev. W. J. Southam, of Toronto, held the undivided attention of a large congregation at All Saints' Church last evening, the occasion being the annual harvest thanksgiving service.

The text, taken from St. John: "I am the Bread of Life" was treated in a clear and comprehensive manner and to the congregation was given, much food for reflection and earnest consideration.

It was a typical harvest thanksgiving service and the congregation gave a hearty and sympathetic response.

The church decorations, carried out on a large scale were beautiful. The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, was assisted by Rev. F. J. Sawers of St. Luke's and Rev. Jas. Price, of St. George's.

The choir under the leadership of Mr. Chandler, gave excellent assistance and the offertory anthem, Thy Basket and Store, was admirably sung. Mr. Weller took the solo in splendid voice. Miss Flowers presided at the organ.

Rev. Mr. Southam gave a lucid interpretation of the text and emphasized the fact that Christ was the Bread of Life, physically, mentally and above all spiritually. It was as the Giver that Christ made His claim. His character was involved in this claim. Some picked out certain parts of the Bible, the preacher pointed out, "but if you refuse to accept this claim and take only the precepts, His character is gone."

To those who accepted this claim, was given life, satisfaction, nourishment, development, the power to assimilate Christ and reproduction.

War Hatched in Hell.

Speaking of the conflict now raging in Europe, the preacher said it was a war that had been hatched in hell. It was damnable, devilish and devastating. Let us thank God that the heart of the Empire was strong. Men and parties had laid aside their quarrels, magnificent response had been made in aid of the Mother Country. Let us thank God that the army and navy was ready; for the magnificent stand of the soldiers against great odds and for the spirit and heroism of the Belgians.

Let us thank God that there was a silver lining. Our cause was righteous; we are fighting the great battle of right and liberty.

In concluding his sermon, the preacher made a plea for all to appropriate Christ as the Bread of Life. The crowning result would be thanksgiving which we should show in a practical way by helping those who are feeling the results of the conflict now in progress.

FIRST ROUND OF THE TENNIS TOURNAMENT

The first round of the tennis tournament has been played off amidst much enthusiasm by all engaged. It is expected that the second round of the tournament will start tomorrow afternoon and will likely be well attended. The first round has been marked by some very good playing and the second round should be as good, if not better.

The winners of the first round will play off in the second round:

Mr. Williams vs. M. Weller—15.

Winners of A. W. MacPherson—30 and J. K. Lillico, ½ 15.

Winners of these two play F. Cressman—15.

F. Cole, ½ 15 plays V. Palmer, ½ 15.

H. Cressman—½ 15 plays H. D. Parsons, ½ 15.

R. Dobbin—½, 15, plays B. H. Mey -15.

The winners of D. C. MacRostie—½, 15 vs. Dr. Sutton—½, 15. They play the winners of C. Brown—30, vs. J. H. Thompson, scratch.

AUSTRALIA IN WAR TIME

Before war was declared financial men in Australia were discussing the outlook from their point of view. At a meeting of the Bank of Victoria, Mr. E. Miller said they in Australia had very little to fear. As stated in the Press, the amount of coin in reserve in Australia was very large indeed; in Victoria alone the banks had over £9,000,000, and for the Commonwealth, perhaps, over £45,000,000 to deal with, far more than could ever be required. In a time like this there were always a few timid people—who had no banking account at all. He emphasized the fact that there was absolutely nothing to fear as regards any undue panic in Australia.

Mr. J. Burston, after dealing with the prosperity of the Commonwealth during the past ten or twelve years, said that Australia was one of the last places in the world to want to get out of. The cash reserve of their institution was probably the largest they ever had, and such an idea as panic was out of the question. It was very gratifying to notice the way the ranks had closed up in the old land at the approach of danger. He thought the crisis would be a good thing for the Empire, as it would bring all ranks together, and thow the outside world that the Empire was united. In Australia something still remained of the old stock, and the trouble would be manfully met without panic.

THE BEST WAR CORRESPONDENT

The New York World in a recent editorial under the caption "The Best War Correspondent" pays a great tribute to General French's ability to present a full and equally interesting report of the operations on the continent. It closes with the statement "But the reports of Sir John French are so simply, clearly written that they strongly convey the impression of absolute reliability. They will form the backbone of the ponderous histories of the British participation in the war which will be presented by men with less real journalistic merit and literary talent."

WANT BETTER ACCOMMODATION FOR PASSENGERS

Board of Trade Will Confer With G.T.R. Authorities

Campbellford, Oct. 2.—At a meeting of the Board of Trade, the question of additional passenger train accommodation on this line of the G.T.R. was considered.

Recent correspondence between the Board of Railway Commissioners and the Board of Trade on the subject was read and considerable discussion took place. A resolution was passed appointing a committee composed of Messrs. I. A. Humphries, A. McKinney and A. E. Caddy, to confer with the railway authorities in regard to better train service. This matter will no doubt be taken up in the near future, and it is hoped that before long the much-needed accommodation will be given the people of this district.

Hamilton Assessment $68,000,000.

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 2. — Despite the adverse conditions that prevailed this year, Hamilton increased its assessment by over two and a half million dollars, the total assessment now being over $68,000,000. The population stands at 101,314, an increase of only 506.

HAND MANGLED IN MACHINERY

Mill Employe Suffers Loss of Right Hand

Fenelon Falls, Ont., Oct. 2. — A distressing accident took place yesterday morning about 11:15 o'clock, when Mr. Boyd Wilkinson had his right hand badly mangled.

Wilkinson, who is familiarly known as "Rusty," was employed with Fenelon Falls big lumber firm, Mickle & Diament, and was employed in the shingle department. While operating one of the large saws he in some unaccountable way came in contact with the fast revolving saw, and his right hand was drawn into the machinery and badly mangled.

The unfortunate young man, who is about 18 years of age, was rushed to a doctor and it was found necessary to amputate the hand between the wrist and the elbow. He lost considerable blood and for a time was in a serious weakened condition.

There is a certain primitive Baptist preacher who has shown some horse sense. His congregation insisted on p rayers for rain, and he met them with this: "Brethren, I think this is a very unfavorable time to pray for rain; the moon isn't right for it."—Palestine (Texas) Herald.

WOULD NOT AFFILIATE WITH CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

General Committee of Local Fund do not Fall in Line With Letter From Officers of Dominion-Wide Organization

At a largely attended meeting of the general committee last evening, feeling ran rather high. The cause of discussion was a letter from the assistant secretary and honorary treasurer asking the local patriotic committee to affiliate with the Dominion Fund. It was shown by affiliating with the Dominion Fund only soldiers' wives and families would receive benefit from the monies collected. This did not conform with the general idea under which the local fund was collected. It was generally understood it was also for general relief.

After a heated discussion F. D. Kerr moved, seconded by George Ball, that the correspondence and other questions of affiliation be referred to a committee consisting of Messrs. D. O'Connell, Judge Huycke, J. H. Burnham, M.P., and S. R. Armstrong. Mr. Burnham refused to act. Mr. Burnham said that with regard to Mr. Kerr's suggestion of a new committee to report on the matter involving the disposal of funds the speaker could not consent to any departure from the original instructions, given to the committee by the public meeting of citizens, by which it was appointed. The Mayor as chairman had issued the appeal for subscriptions accordingly and no proposal could be made to change what the public meeting and the Mayor's appeal called for. F. D. Kerr's name was substituted for Mr. J. H. Burnham's.

A letter was read from W. M. Fowlds, reeve of Hastings, regarding the family of a reservist in Asphodel. It was moved by G. A. Gillespie, that all applications, coming from outside sources be referred to their respective counties. This motion was seconded by J. W. Worth.

Dr. Young Resigns.

A communication was read from Dr. Young, tendering his resignation from the committee, and on motion of W. Stocker and George Ball it was accepted.

Letters from Rev. R. Rollins and R. E. Layfield, were read expressing their deep regret on not being able to attend.

G. W. Worth's idea of placing collection boxes in public places was referred to the executive.

EXCITING GAMES IN INDOOR BASEBALL

Indoor baseball at the Armouries is becoming more and more popular every night. Last evening the Band and No. 2 Company tried conclusions and after an exciting game the Band emerged victorious by the score of 15 to 9. Grange and Swanson were the batteries for the victors.

In the second game there was some very good ball played. No. 7 won from No. 8 by the score of 20 to 13.

The men are evidencing a great deal of interest in the games, and the competition is very keen amongst the various teams.

MUST CURTAIL TO KEEP INSIDE APPROPRIATION

Fund for Books at Library is Almost Exhausted

Mr. A. Mowat, chairman of the library committee, at the regular meeting of the library board last night, reported that very few books had been purchased during the month of September, and, owing to the fact that the appropriation for books was almost exhausted, the purchasing of books for the balance of the year will be curtailed, in order that the appropriation for the year may not be overdrawn.

Mr. Hall read the report of the finance committee, recommending the payment of the following accounts:

Bell TelephoneCo., $1.50; A. G. Dickson, $1.30; Otonabee Power Co., $11.49; J. H. Reid, $43.90; Grant & Thorpe, $7; Peterborough Examiner, $4; The MacMillan Co., 74c.

The report was adopted, on motion of Messrs. Hall and Morrow.

Mr. Sollitt, on behalf of the property committee, reported that to improve the lighting of the enlarged reference room, a new chandelier would be installed.

There were present Mr. Kenner (chairman), Messrs. E. H. D. Hall, F. Sollitt, W. G. Morrow and A. Mowat.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Copper Cargoes Seized.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Despatches received at the British Embassy today state that two cargoes of copper consigned to the Krupp works in Germany from the United States were seized and diverted to England. It was believed the copper was to be used in the construction of torpedoes. Payment of the full value of the cargoes was remitted to the American shippers.

A LITTLE DEAL IN EXCHANGE

An interesting report is going the rounds of a neat profit made by the Hollinger Gold Mines through a transaction in foreign exchange. The company, so the story goes, shipped its gold output to the credit of the Bank of England at Ottawa, being credited with the amount at the Bank of England in London at their special request. The credit was then re-transferred to Canada by the purchase of exchange on Montreal at the rate of $4.8608 to the pound. The next step was to realize on the credit, which was done by selling sterling exchange here at $4.94080 to the pound. The entire transaction netted a profit of 8.014 cents in the pound, giving the company about $2,700 in profit on the little deal.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE AND ITS WORLD MISSION

A Vision of the World War and Its "Ifs"

(Written Exclusively for the Review by J. P. Laycock, M.A.)

Existing Situation.

Rifts in the war clouds are now seen, and the direction of the sun. The plans of the German Attila have sadly miscarried. He has not frightened Britain by the sound of the toxin of war or by Bismarkian bribes, into not quarreling over a scrap of paper, and leaving Belgium to her fate. He has not beguiled the Italian people into offensive battle in Southern France. He has not "hacked" his way to Paris, dined in Paris, or made peace in Paris. He has not compelled a wounded foe to surrender its fleet for a combined blow at the root of Britain's oak. He has not left France wallowing in blood, her villages pillaged, her temples fired, her sons slain, and returned to the Russian frontier to meet the Muscovite.

The Teutonic peril is subsiding. Her fleets are penned in the Kiel canal, to be rooted out by land by Slav or Latin invader; her armies, expecting dinner in Paris, are returning to Berlin for supper. The Austrian hosts, with their German backbone, are scattered, flung out of Russian Poland, out of Slav Galicia and Buckowina, flung back towards the Carpathian peaks. True that the warlike German and Magyar dies hard, with his head towards the foe and his blood soaking the soil, a song on the lip and a flash in the eye; but the God of all the nations will not permit the god of the nation to triumph; the God of freedom and righteousness will not allow the god of war and of destruction to win. Democracy is not in its death throes, but is giving birth to other democracies. Depend upon it, however bloody and extended the fight, right will win even though autocracy now sweep the earth.

Probable Future Situation.

Danger to the British Empire lies not in the present but in the immediate future. It is therefore our duty to size up the probable results of the campaign, the probable future campaigns, and the probable policies to be pursued. The British people must not sink into any lethargy, to experience another rude shock and another rough awakening, but must prepare for future emergencies. The ramshackle Austrian-Hungarian empire is being torn limb from limb, as the Tsar said it would. The Saxon, the Frank and the Teuton are wasting their strength in indecisive conflict, while the Russian colossus shakes the north with his thundering steps and gathers in with the bayonet the spoils of war. Despatch riders are hastening from village to village and summoning the millions of moujiks to fight for Holy Russia, not the Russian empire, for brothers under the heel of the stranger, not for conquest of peoples they know not. When the victory is won by the zeal of the peasant, however, will the bureaucracy in power seek peace on his ideal or their ambition? When out of the discordant people of the Russian empire an harmonious, ever-confident, ever-victorious war machine is created, when the lands of the two Kaisers lie bleeding and crushed, when ten million triumphant Cossacks face five million triumphant French, Britons, Belgians and perhaps Italians, does it seem plausible that the war lords of the Slav states of Russia and the Balkan peninsula, fresh from the fields of military glory, regarding democracy as an illusion and a weakness, will not thirst for further victories and a world empire, will not observe in the great rapidity of their march through the German states a portent of a future procession through Latin Europe, will not be ready to seize any disagreement over the reconstruction of the continent after the war, as an excellent pretext for crushing the earth; will not see the overwhelming advantage of semi-primitive, self-supporting agricultural countries in waging a protracted war?

Probable Allies in a Slav-Latin War.

In the event of a renewal of war on a fiercer and more extended scale, what part should the British Empire play? She should do her duty in the name of civilization, as she has in the past, and fight the Muscovite as she fought the Teuton; and this she will do, even though she feels certain that darkness and disaster are in the wind. Such a conflict would certainly be between a Russian-Balkan alliance and an Anglo-French-Japanese combination, and probably between more. For Japanese soldiers would not come to the aid of the Franco-British arms in Europe unless material reward were promised, and would, therefore, limit their activities to the east in terms with the Anglo-Japanese understanding; and the United States would not move until absolutely certain that the fate of civilization was in the scales. The knowledge, however, that the future of Europe hung in the balance, might result in a defensive alliance between Great Britain, the Scandinavian people, the Latin nations, and the Low Countries; but even then the odds would be in favor of the experienced Slav, although fighting a more intelligent soldier; and the fulfilment of the plan of Peter the Great would loom up on the horizon.

Principles to be Observed in Making Peace With Germany.

If the Muscovite be beaten in a second world war, the horizon brightens and peace appears, but not necessarily permanent peace. Or, if at the conclusion of the strife with the Teuton, he be satisfied with the annexation of the Slav portions of Austria-Hungary to Russia and Servia, the legitimate right of the Slav peoples to form kingdoms of their own or to become part of a Slav empire must be acknowledged by the allies, for by the adoption of that principle alone is peace possible. Even then the Russian bureaucracy may be averting an immediate strife merely to consolidate acquired strength. If indeed it hungers for more conquest, and cannot secure parts of Prussia in addition to Slav territories, the policy of the Muscovite will probably be to divide Germany into a number of buffer states, and consequently disarm suspicion by the erection, with seeming generosity, of a new Poland, buffer states which would lack that unity of front to repel any future progress of Slav arms. The acceptance of any such settlement on the conclusion of this strife with Germany would be unwise on the part of the allies. A better plan would be to work on the one hand for reconstruction on the basis of nationality: the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France, of Trieste and Trent to Italy, of Schleswig-Holstein to Denmark, of Bosnia-Herzegovina to Servia, of the Roumanian districts of Austria-Hungary to Roumania, of Austrian and German Poland to Russian Poland, whether the last be an independent or an autonomous state within the Russian state; and on the other hand to link Austrian and Imperial Germany with France into a great Franco-German republic, thus creating a new state large enough and strong enough to hold the Romanoffs in check. Indeed, a monster Latin-Teutonic empire, with autonomous nations within it, constructed out of France, Italy, Greece, Spain, Portugal, the Low Countries, and Imperial and Austrian Germany, would seem the proper step, but it is folly to expect the nations to act with such wisdom. France and Germany, however, are front to front with undesirable possibilities, and, provided that some such title as indicated be used to satisfy the German desire to be treated as equals, and that France adopt the British policy of restoring legislative liberty to conquered races, there seems no reason why the common Cossack peril alone should not weld the two peoples into a strong empire, able to perpetuate the balance of power in continental Europe, and protect western civilization.

Probable Outcome of a Latin-Slav War.

Wisdom, however, can only be hammered into nations, and the real solution is likely only after an arduous war and the wholesale spilling of human blood. Russia will probably have to be taught the same lesson that Germany and Austria are being taught now, before she learns the divine law that right eventually triumphs, however stony and thorny the path. At the outset of such a war her surplus men, flushed with the new experience of victory, infused, therefore, with a spirit as military as that of the French revolutionaries, would probably sweep aside the French and British by sheer force of numbers, and secure the long-sought prize, the hegemony of Europe. Still, at the worst, the silver streak of sea would prevent the ruthless heel of the Muscovite sounding beneath the statues of Nelson and Wellington. Suppose that Russia in this respect won its maximum desires, was able to save her Black Sea, Baltic and Pacific fleets by keeping them under the guns of her fortresses, was then able by a successful land war to force the continental countries to use their navies against Britain, in the first place the fleets would have to unite, an event possible only after the capture of Constantinople, Suez and Gibraltar; and, in the second place, would have to face the combined squadron of Britain, America and Japan, for the United States would never stay out of the conflict, if such conditions loomed up.

The British empire, then, would have to be struck by land, the Himalayas and the Suez canal passed, before the existence of parts of the empire could be threatened, a campaign of the future not impossible, provided the proper hypothesis be granted, for a successful Muscovite war means the Romanoff conquest of the Ottoman empire. The existence of the treaty between Japan and Britain hence gives rise to the remote possibility of a race war between Muscovy and the Yellow nations, with the curious feature of the British Empire aiding the Mongolian. However, if such a conflict comes within five or ten years, the Anglo-Saxon need have no fear of the yellow triumphing permanently over the white and the actual birth of the much-vaunted Yellow peril. The lack of wealth and organization in China at this date would be too great to permit such an outcome, and the worst that would happen in a Mongolian triumph would be the recapture of the Mongolian parts of Asiatic Russia. Indeed, if the Cossack had the whole of Europe under his feet, the probability is that the Mongolian would be defeated, at first at least. The question as to where the Hindu comes in is thus of paramount importance.

India's Part in the Present War.

A surprise of the war is the stability of the British Empire in India. A wave of loyalty to the British Raj has swept the land from the Himilayas to Cape Comorin. Hindus and Mohammedans, Sikhs and Gurkhas alike, all have rallied to oppose the common foe. In spite of the slowness of responding to the Indian desire for self-government, in spite of the opposition in the British Dominions to Hindu immigration, the Indian princes have placed their native troops and their wealth at the disposal of the British government, and sepoys and Sikhs, brothers of those expelled from Canada on the Komagatu Maru, have begged to fight with their British comrades in the European shock of battle. Can there be any greater testimony than this to the general fairness of British rule in the land of the Moghuls? Or can there be greater wisdom than that shown by Lord Kitchener in forwarding the Sikhs and Gurkhas to French soil?

If, however, we are prepared to have the Hindu defend and extend this empire, we must also be ready to have him share in its benefits. We must realise that the time is approaching when we can solve the Hindu immigration problem by giving India as its dependencies the existing tropical possessions and any future conquests in equatorial Africa. We must see that in giving this territory the British Empire will be filling more fully its obligations to over three hundred millions of the world's population, obligations which not only include governing them properly, but feeding them properly, consist in giving them elbow room to expand in their natural share of the earth's hinterland. The congested millions of India have in reality more right for colonies for the surplus people than the less densely populated German empire. These tropical territories in Central Africa, hardly fit for white colonization, certainly are adapted to immigration of tropical people. Their governmental attachment of these lands to India, rather than to Britain, their administration from Delhi rather than from London, their colonization through the co-operation of the native Indian princes and other leaders of the Hindu people, would result in the term "India and her Dependencies" being heard almost as often as "Great Britain and her Dependencies," in the Hindus realizing that they are partners in the Empire, in Indian willingness patriotically to share the utmost in the military burdens of imperial defence, to the end of time, one might almost say, providing that the constitutional problem be solved smoothly, scientifically, progressively.

India's Permanent Place in the Empire.

As far as the existence of empires depends upon force, in that degree the duration of Greater Britain depends upon the solution of India's future constitutional position in the Empire, and upon white immigration into our white empire. The time must come when, if Hindustan is to remain in the imperial connection, it must be granted equal status with Greater Britain in a reconstruction of a new dual empire. The constitutional consummation of such an ideal is afar off; but the preliminary steps can easily be taken; the attachment of a definite hinterland to India, ruled from Delhi, the official re-christening of the Empire the British-Indian Empire, the change of King George's official title into Emperor of the British-Indian Empire, Grand Moghul of India, King of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the Kingdoms Over the Sea; the definite adoption of a decennial revision of the Indian constitution, and the official recognition of the policy of the gradatory gift of autonomy to India. There would be no need of taking India into equal partnership in the Empire until the standard of literacy, of primary and secondary education was approximately the peer of that in the rest of the empire. The steadfast loyalty of the Indian people merits such a marriage contract between the Empire and the imperium, for, apart from such little domestic quarrels as revealed in the Komagatu Maru incident, no wife could be more faithful to husband than India to Britain.

Part India Would Play in Asiatic War With Russia.

Take, for instance, the possible event of a victorious Russian master of Europe striking at the Suez canal, the gate to Africa, or at Herat, the gate to India itself. The time would then have arrived for a British-American-Hindu-Mongolian alliance to prevent a Muscovite world and to effect permanent peace by world-reconstruction on racial principles. The millions of Hindus who would rally to the battlefield side by side with the Anglo-Saxon hundreds of thousands, alone would give that numerical strength necessary for victory. But say now to India: we recognize your potential right to participation in this empire; and say to-morrow, if the cannon smoke obscures the Asiatic sky: we acknowledge the right of Moslem India to restore the old Mohammedan empire as an empire within the British-Indian empire, an empire whose centre should be Delhi and whose heart should be India and her dependencies; and the Islamite spirit in India and Egypt would awaken a war cry and a martial spirit which would lead to the restoration of the Moslem world to its proper owners and the creation of a hinterland of sufficient dimensions for surplus Moslem millions. Any stay of Russia at Constantinople would be brief, and the last great world battle might occur on the very plains, hills and valleys where Christ first taught the gospel of peace nineteen hundred years ago. The value of the Hindu arms under the guidance of a people seeking to use the first world war as an opportunity not to wound militarism, but to strike it to the heart, are almost unlimited, and the British race should consider more the great potential force that Providence has placed in their hands, take the Hindu to its bosom, construct a huge British-Indian army, and at the first oportunity to strike for permanent world-reconstruction.

World-Reconstruction.

To secure permanent world-reconstruction three principles must be observed: the settlement on a national basis, the settlement on a racial basis, and the settlement on a cosmopolitan basis. These requisites are not in reality contradictory, but supplemental: an international government at The Hague or elsewhere, exercising international law, subordinate racial empires organized on the principle of racial unity, and under each national provinces constructed on national lines. For purposes of illustration, the racial empires might be the Anglo-Saxon, the Islamite, the Mongolian, the Slav, and the Latin-Teutonic, each having a definite hinterland adjoining its territories for surplus population. This hinterland is an absolute essential in any final settlement; therefore, for example, if the colonies in Africa or the Latin countries should ever fall under the guardianship of Great Britain through the temporary control of the European continent by some military power, as Russia, it would be the duty of the Anglo-Saxon to restore such to the Latin nations, jointly or separately, on the overthrow of the invader.

How World Peace May Come.

The common idea is that the dawn of world peace will come through the education of all the nations to such a level that by common agreement they will meet together to bring about the milennium. However, there is another possible path. In the days of Rome, world peace came through universal conquests by the Latin; in the future day of the British Empire, world peace may come through the subjugation of the world by the Anglo-Saxon nations in the name of civilization and world peace. As, however, the British race would never assume the offensive to reduce other nations, this can only come about by their being compelled in self-defence to do this very thing. If then the ways of peace achieve not permanent peace, and if such a calamity does happen as a military race conquering Eurasia not now under British control, the Anglo-Saxon world should unite, and the British Empire, with its two powerful arms, the daughter states and the Indian empire, should strike in the name of world reconstruction, and along the bloody path of war realize her world mission.

MAJOR PANET MAY COMMAND

French-Canadian Officer to be Offered Colonelcy

MONTREAL, Oct. 2. — The command of the French-Canadian regiment that will be raised will be offered to Major Edward DeB. Panet of the fifth division. Major Panet is a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, and he has also passed through the staff college in England.

In anticipation of his early departure on war service, Major Panet was married Wednesday.

Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec, has given his strong support to the regiment, and has promised that any Government official who desires to join it will be paid his full salary while absent on war service.

The Quebec Government will be asked to make a grant of $100,000 towards the cost of equipping the force.

TAKEN TO COLOGNE

German Wounded of 60,000 Now in Hospitals

LONDON, Oct. 2. — The Evening News prints a despatch from Copenhagen saying that 60,000 Germans wounded have arrived in Cologne, most of the men being victims of the artillery duel along the Aisne river.

In a large number of cases the men had their legs blown off by exploding shells.

The great exposition buildings in Cologne have been converted into hospitals.

Paper Allowed To Publish.

BERLIN, Oct. 2.—(Via The Hague and London.)—The decree ordering the suspension of the Socialist newspaper Vorwaerts has been rescinded, conditional upon the avoidance by the paper of reference to class hatred and class struggle. These are described as wholly inapplicable to the present situation in view of the unanimity of the German people in the present war. The management of The Vorwaerts has given assurances of compliance.

WING STILL RETIRING

Von Kluk is Slowly Falling Back Towards Belgium

LONDON, Oct. 2. — The following official announcement was issued by the French War Office last night:

"This evening there is nothing of particular importance to describe, except in the region of Roye, on the French left wing, where a violent action has successfully turned in our favor, and in the Argonne, where we have made progress at several new points. The general situation remains satisfactory."

The British war information bureau made it known yesterday that Indian troops were landed in France last Friday.

All unofficial reports agree that the army of Gen. Von Kluk is slowly retreating in the region north of the Somme, and that the long-predicted backward movement of the German right wing is at last taking definite shape. The belief obtains that he will retreat through the southern corner of Belgium, and thence through the Duchy of Luxemburg. Strong reinforcements have come up to the aid of the allied left, and the much-talked-of turning operation on the flank of the Germans continues without intermission. It is authoritatively stated that several towns until recently held by the Germans between the Oise and the Somme have fallen before the allies' advance.

Paris is enthusiastic over what is generally accepted as the German defeat in the greatest battle the world ever saw. It was said by an official of the Government yesterday that the French War Office will enter no claims of victory until the result is certain. The utterance of Gen. Gallieni a few days since, when he declared that victory would incline to the side able to throw the largest number of fresh troops into action, is recalled in connection with the British Indian troops on the far north of the allies' line. These are believed to have entered the fighting at the crucial moment.

A Rotterdam despatch to The Daily Telegraph says:

"The Germans in Rotterdam are aghast at the tone of the German newspapers which arrived to-day (Thursday). Only one meaning can be attached to what they contain—they are preparing the German people for defeat and the ruin of their hopes.

"Official messages ask that judgment be suspended if news should arrive that the German troops have been compelled to abandon certain positions.

"The British troops are mentioned as pushing on by the sheer weight of their masses, and the French are admitted to have taught a severe lesson. A week ago such statements would have meant the suppression of the newspaper printing them."

A correspondent of The Daily Telegraph in France describes the fighting between the allies and the Germans in the quarries where the Germans have been entrenched.

"From some of these natural fortresses," he says, "the Germans have been driven at last. It is rumored that they left others owing to the unburied dead, whose bodies poisoned the air. A quarry near the forest of Aigue was attacked under cover of a mist by the French, who drove out the defenders after desperate fighting. Another quarry was won similarly by the French, who set fire to several buildings and attacked the batteries under concealment of the smoke.

"A prisoner taken here, who was formerly a professor in one of the universities, said that the casualties during the past fortnight have been terrible. French bayonet charges have left the plains along the Aisne strewn with dead.

"Victory everywhere has been with the allies. The enemy's resistance has been broken, and there must soon be another retreat to the north and east. But the Germans must hold this right flank at any cost until the last moment in order to save the centre, which has been shaken by the British."

A Reuter despatch from Paris says: "A fight is proceeding on one part of the allies' left resembling that at Paardeberg, in the South African war. Nearly 4,000 Germans are in the same plight at Gen. Cronje was. They are completely surrounded by French troops in some quarries, where they are cut off from all hope of rejoining their division, and are being shelled."

At the town of Albert, 18 miles from Amiens, the Germans made a two-day attempt to cut through the allied lines. The fighting at this point was some of the bloodiest of the combat, resulting in tremendous losses to both sides. It came as the result of a sudden change in Von Kluk's tactics. Following his effort to counteract the flanking movement to the north, he suddenly concentrated heavy artillery at Albert and strove valiantly to cut through. The guns were supported by endless columns of infantry, and for a time it seemed that the assault would succeed, but the French brought up their redoubtable machine guns and the tide was eventually stemmed. On the French right the Germans have been driven back, and Metz is declared to be isolated. This narrows the route by which the Kaiser's armies can fall back, and will materially shorten the opposing battle lines.

Maritime Farms Need Unemployed.

The Federal Government, through Sir Robert Borden, has expressed a desire to co-operate with Ontario and other provinces in working towards the supply of employment to men thrown out of work by the unsteady industrial conditions. As a result it is expected that 1,000 men will be placed on farms in the Maritime Provinces and that half that number may be accommodated in Ontario agricultural communities.

HINDUS ARE ON THE JOB

Were Given Warm Reception by French at Marseillas

ARE IN KHAKI

LONDON, Oct. 2.—A special correspondent of The Times wiring from Marseilles says:

Yesterday witnessed the flower of one of the world's most ancient civilizations set foot for the first time on the shores of Europe.

I have seen the proud Princes of India ride at the head of thousands of troops, princes and men alike fired with all the ardor of the East, determined to help to win the Emperor's battles or die. Of far greater significance than the mere making of history, I saw welded before my eyes what may well prove to be the strongest link in the singularly wonderful chain which binds the British Empire together. The hot day had just begun to lift from the bay when suddenly an interminable line of steamships crept along by the adjacent islands. The awakening port knew that the long-expected ships with Indian troops aboard had arrived.

With precision the expedition of transports swung into the harbor and moored alongside their appointed quays.

Native and British alike stepped ashore, all in magnificent condition. Every road within a mile of the docks was a mass of excited Latins. Every second-storey window and every roof was a coveted vantage seat.

All the troops are in khaki, with only slight differences in design. Some of the British contingent from India wear short pants, identical to those of Boy Scouts. Others wear knickerbockers that cover the knees. The puttees are the same as those of the army at home.

The head-dress in every instance is the turban. This also was khaki, but the different regiments and different castes show slight distinctive markings. The most pronounced is the band of green interwoven with khaki in the Gurkha's turban.

SAVED HIS WILD GOATS.

Emperor Maximilian Was Lucky in Having a Wise Adviser.

Of the great Emperor Maximilian it is told that once when traveling far from home he wore so sad an expression that a courtier asked him what affairs of state could cause so much concern. The emperor replied it was not the state but ibex he was thinking of. In his absence he feared a certain poacher, whom he mentioned by name, would make havoc with the herds. Could the courtier propose any preventive?

The astute person thus addressed immediately suggested a letter to the poacher's wife, signed and sealed by the imperial hand and offering her the best silk dress that could be obtained if the emperor's wild goats were not touched during his absence. And such, alas, is the influence of the sex that history hints the bribe was more effectual than "all the king's horses and all the king's men" in the way of forest rangers and wood reeves.

Maximilian had a preserve of these animals in the Tyrol near the Aachen sea and has left on record some interesting notes and illustrations of the sport he enjoyed among them. One picture represents him in a boat on a lake assisting to catch an ibex in a large net, which may have been good fun, even if it were scarcely sportsmanlike. It was Maximilian, too, who boasted that on one occasion he killed an ibex at 200 yards with a crossbow when his companion had missed it with a gun. Seeing that the "fire tubes" of the period were about the slowest and most awkward weapons any one could imagine, the feat was scarcely to be wondered at.—London Globe.

"Janey Canuck's" Philosophy.

The Bookman of London, Eng., has in its August number placed Mrs. Arthur Murphy of Edmonton in its "Gallery," and has given three pages to discuss her philosophy, which it describes as having "literally sung its way through the Dominion." "Her work," says The Bookman, "has the optimism of the true lyric, the song of the open road. The refrain of the windswept spaces was never set to a better tune. * * * It is not style that matters in the work of 'Janey Canuck' any more than it matters in the work of Walt Whitman, a kindred philosopher. She comes scattering seeds of gladness in our midst, and lo! our gloom is gone like a black cloud that breaks before the April sun. She is the philosopher of gladness and content and common sense, a philosophy as durable as Bergsonism."

BASEBALL SHAKEUPS INEVITABLE THIRD MAJOR LEAGUE PROBABLE

Fitzgerald Plans Changes in Canadian League

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—Despite the many denials that have emanated from the heads of the various leagues it is apparent that there will be a general upheaval in baseball during the forthcoming winter. President Barrow, of the International League, states that there will be only one or two changes on his circuit for next winter. He expects Jersey City and Montreal to drop and believes that their franchises will be transferred to other cities. He adds that the International has not been and is not considering any proposed amalgamation with the Federals, with a view to forming a third major league.

However, it is evident that there will be many changes. The International had the worst season in its history. Montreal and Jersey City lost so heavily that they are to be dropped. The Federals practically crushed the International at Buffalo and drove it out of Baltimore altogether. President McCaffrey, of the Toronto Leafs, admitted his deficit was the heaviest he had ever sustained. Sammy Lichtenhein declares that he will not throw up the sponge, but that he will carry on the club there at any cost. Rochester and Newark dropped thousands and the Providence club, which won the pennant was the only one to show a surplus.

President Gilmore of the Federals, was not far astray when he stated that the International was a dead issue. He hit back at President Barrow by saying that the International was not to be feared to any extent.

The Toronto News on Monday came out bravely and advocated the installation of Federal or major league ball. Sporting Editor Charlie Good contends that Toronto has outgrown the International and that a change must be made, otherwise baseball will die a natural death at Toronto. Owner Lol Solman is said to be sharing the same view.

As soon as the world's series has been decided the baseball magnates of the big leagues will likely hold a peace conference with a view to improving the present state of affairs. From the cities now in the Federal and the International, a first class third major organization could, undoubtedly be formed. Many schemes have been mooted and the heads of the various leagues should be able to plan out some sort of action that would stop hostilities and create peace all over the circuit.

There is little or no chance of getting the Montreal club into the Canadian. Toronto considers the International too small and in the same vein, the Montreal fans would hardly welcome the Canadian. A league consisting of London, Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Brantford would form a rattling good circuit.

President Fitzgerald is said to be looking into some scheme for the expansion of the Canadian and it will be discussed at the annual meeting, which is to be held next month at Toronto. He does not regard with favor the London suggestion that Ottawa be dropped and that the league consist of Hamilton, London, Brantford, Toronto, Peterboro and St. Thomas. Fitzgerald states that Erie will be the only club to drop out and that the Yankees can be replaced without any serious difficulty.

BRAVES HAVE GOOD CHANCE TO LAND THE WORLD'S SERIES

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York.—The Boston Braves have a mighty fine chance of winning the world's series when they clash with the Athletics.

Fandom in general seems to be spoofing the chances of the Braves in such a battle. But fandom does so without taking into consideration these highly important facts:

1—The team that the Braves would send into battle with the Athletics is, at the present writing, outhitting the slugging Athletics by two points.

2—The Brave regulars are fielding 13 points better than the Athletic regulars.

3—The Brave pitchers—James, Rudolph and Tyler—who will be hurled against the Athletics, are about the equal in pitching skill of the three best men the Athletics can pit against the Braves.

4—The Athletics are in something of a slump, that may continue right through the series.

5—The Braves, confident and full of fight, and with spirits high because of their phenomenal spurt during the past two months, will have the big psychological edge.

The statement that the Braves at present are outhitting the Athletics may seem surprising. But it is true. The Braves, as a team entire, are hitting about 20 points under the Athletics. But, when the Braves meet the Athletics, they will hurl against the enemy their full hitting strength, both in pitching, catching and in the field.

The Brave trio of pitchers is batting for a .208 mark now. Bender and Plank, who will do the bulk of the pitching for the Athletics, are hitting for an average of .133. However, to give the Athletics the full benefit of their hitting power, the averages of the three youthful pitchers who may get a chance to work in the series was included in the averages. Two of these are batting over .200, while the third, Bush, is hitting .184. With the averages of these three added to those of Bender and Plank, it gives the Athletic pitching staff a grand batting average of 1[illegible]6.

Some, in figuring the relative batting strength of the two teams, will not figure in the pitchers. But why shouldn't the pitchers be figured in? A pitcher constitutes one-ninth of a team's batting strength. His strength or weakness as a hitter adds or detracts just one-ninth to or from the team's offensive power.

SPORT "DOPE" UPSET IN ALL BRANCHES

The dope has been upset so often this year that it must be very dizzy by this time. And more upsets seem due.

The American polo team, if you'll remember, was to have one of those lead pipe cinches against the British invaders. But the polo championship now rests on some English mantelpiece.

The tennis persons hereabouts were sure. McLoughlin et al could turn aside any foeman that attacked them. All the early dope pointed in that direction. Messrs. Wilding and Brookes came into our midst and left — with the championship laurels encircling their domes.

The Harvard crew was doped to beat the Yale outfit by a half mile or so in the June regatta on the Thames. Yale won. The Columbia crew wasn't figured to have a chance in the Poughkeepsie regatta, nor was the Pennsylvania aggregation doped to land better than fourth. Columbia won the race and Pennsylvania was the runner-up.

Willie Ritchie was doped to knock the consciousness out of one Frederick Welsh, an English person. Frederick is now doing vaudeville skits as "lightweight champion of the world."

The Pittsburg Pirates were doped to make a great fight for the National League pennant. And the Pirates are—well, what's the use of rubbing it in? The Cubs and Cards, if you'll recollect a bit, were assigned places in the second division throughout the 1914 season. Look at 'em now!

The Giants were doped to win the National League flag in this year A. D. 1914, but—

And who knows what may happen in further dope spilling when the Braves and Athletics meet. It will be well to keep in mind that this has been a disastrous season for favorites.

COMMENT As You Like It

As the old dope begins to assemble, it is evident that the question so vigorously propounded at the world's series a year ago—whether heavy artillery will overwhelm speed and cunning in the box—is again to come forth with a demand that an answer be given. The Mackian 42 centimetre guns are ready to be mounted for the siege opening in Philadelphia a week from tomorrow. Rudolph, James, and Tyler, who have blazed through the National League, turning back batsmen on every start, will be exposed to the fire before which Mathewson, Tesreau, Demaree—and, going further back—Overall and Brown—have withered and been forced to retreat. On the dope, the Athletics should out-hit and out-foot the Boston Braves on the bases. About the second station will be a battle of brains in the Collins-Barry and Evers-Maranville combinations. But Boston's pitchers hold the strategic point of the battle line. Should they break or crumble before the hostile fire and enveloping movement that would speedily cut off all lines of communication and strings to the sixty per cent. end of the world's series dough bag might be expected to develop. In their appearance in New York against the Giants yesterday the habit of winning stuck out all over Stallings' men. Mathewson and Tesreau chased from the mound, and a collection of fourteen runs and 22 hits, may not be considered a bad afternoon's work, even though it was directed against a team in full retreat. Barry, of the Athletics, was in the grand stand looking over the Braves' attack. If he was making any mental notes of what they hit and didn't hit, however, he will have to spend another afternoon inspecting Connolly's methods. In seven out of his nine times at bat, the only things Connolly didn't hit were those clear out of reach, and his swats included a home run, triple, double and four singles.

The following is the dope on the big series in as short a form as possible:—

Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the American League — Connie Mack, manager; Baker, Barry, Bender, Bressler, Bush, Collins, Coombs, Davies, Davis, Kopt, Lapp, McAvoy, McInnis, Murphy, Oldring, Pennock, Plank, Schang, Strunk, Thomas, Thompson, Walsh, Wyckoff, Shawkey.

Boston, champions of the National League—George Stallings, manager; Cather, Cocreham, Connolly, Cottrell, Crutcher, Davis, Deal, Devore, Dugley, Evers, Gilbert, Gowdy, Hess, James, Maranville, Mann, Martin, Mitchell, Moran, Rudolph, Schmidt, Smith, Tyler, Whaling, Whitted, Stroud.

Dates—Oct. 9 and 10, Philadelphia; Oct. 12 and 13, Boston; Oct. 14, Philadelphia; Oct. 15, Boston.

Games called at 2 o'clock.

Umpires—Klem and Byron, N.L.; Dineen and Hildebrand, A.L.

Prices—Boston—Boxes, $5 each seat; grand stand $3; pavilion, $2; general admission, $1; bleachers, 50c. Philadelphia — Same, except that there will be no bleacher seats sold.

Tickets will be sold in each city for a series of three games. Money will be refunded for games not played.

Woodie Bearss has passed away. His defence has finally been broken through, yet only after the former hockey player had fought a hard fight in the game of life.

The big defence man came to this city in the fall of 1911, and turned out with the O.R.F.U. Rugby team. His weight and ability soon won him a place, and with Hill and Eccelstone formed the scrimmage. The first game he participated in was with T.C.S. on October 7. He chased the pigskin all fall and was in great condition when the first coat of ice appeared on Brock street rink. He, Bond and Derocher composed the defence. The work of this defence was mainly responsible for the Intermediates winning the district honors. Cobourg had won their district, and it was during the Peterborough-Cobourg series that "Woodie" made his fatal error. He had been laid up with a severe cold, in fact, under the doctor's care. Nevertheless, he played, and the Petes succeeded in vanquishing the lake shore aggregation.

For days following the game in Cobourg Bearss was confined to his room, but he rallied, although he was unable to play any more that season. In the spring he was seized with a hemorrhage of the lungs. It was the beginning of the end. The following winter he played again, but not with the same dash and "pep" as he had the winter previous. Had he turned a deaf ear to the pleadings of the sporting circle and remained off the ice, he might have recovered.

The funeral was held this morning at Ingersoll.

THE COST OF THE WAR PENDING

Statisticians who have been working out the cost of the war to all nations involved declare that hostilities are costing at the rate of $38,000,000 a day, adding that it is more than probable that this figure is really lower than the actual figures will be. It is also stated that the cost involved in the killing of each soldier is about $3,250.

VACATION PROSPECTS.

THE penny we have laid aside,
The dime and eke the nickel,
The quarter, half and dollar bill
Securely placed in pickle.
We take them out and size them up
With fear and palpitation
To see if they will see us through
Our brief two weeks' vacation.

We long to cut a giddy swath
And keep the gay bells chiming,
To shoot off several noisy loads
With money for the priming.
We long to stroll along the strand
In garments truly killing,
The breasts of all the other swells
With greenest envy filling.

We want to ride the joy machine
And o'er the hills go tooting
And as we move, a streak of red,
To see the chickens scooting.
We want to paralyze the clerk
Whose eye is cold and glassy
And pass him back in his hotel
A look as bold and sassy.

In those two weeks we want to crowd
About two months of pleasure
And have our days one round of joy,
With nights for extra measure.
With waiters in the swell cafe
We want to get real funny
And order everything in sight—
But have we got the money?

Bad Connections.

A telephone is a great convenience. A man can call up his wife if he is to be detained at the office, so she won't keep supper waiting, and a woman can call up her husband if she happens to think of some little thing she would like to have him bring home.

Mrs. Trusting called up her John the other night for that purpose and was much disappointed to learn that he had just left for home, having finished early. A few minutes later the bell rang.

"Yes, this is John," said the voice. "I just called up to tell you that important business will keep me at the office, so don't keep supper waiting."

"John Trusting, you just let that important business slide and come right home or you will hear something to your disadvantage when you do get here."

Safe There.

"He hasn't a single bad habit," said the old married grouch, speaking of a young friend.

"Then he ought to make an ideal husband," said his wife.

"No danger of that."

"Why not?"

"When I said he hadn't a single bad habit I meant the marrying habit included."

Perfectly Harmless.

"I am afraid in this matter concerning Percy."

"Of what?"

"The consequences."

"But there never are any consequences where Percy is concerned."

Too Severe.

"Why don't you marry Jack?"

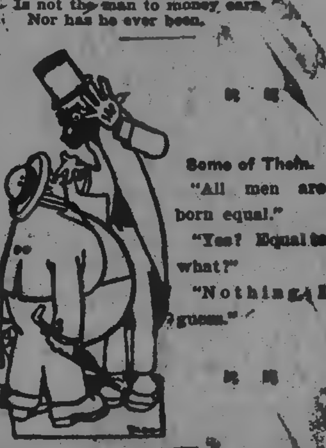
"What! Me marry Jack?"

"Yes."

"I don't deserve it."

It Isn't In Him.

The man who has the coin to burn
And time to burn it in
Is not the man to money earn,
Nor has he ever been.



Some of Them.

"All men are born equal."

"Yes? Equal to what?"

"Nothing, I guess."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

You never can get a small person to see a big thing.

No doubt we would cut our acquaintance with certain persons if we knew what instrument to use.

People who find it hard to restrain themselves should consult a policeman.

When a girl doesn't know what to do she eats pickles.

Probably it is called vacation because the brain about that season vacates its premises.

When it comes to getting himself advertised a man is apt to think that the end justifies the means.

But it is little satisfaction to know that you could have done better.

If we could revise our troubles out of existence we would all be for revision.

If you are gentle when speaking with your enemies it hurts the more when you get into action.

Sometimes we are tempted to think that an easy way to save money is not to earn it.

Keeping still is sometimes a good way to get yourself into it.

C.P.R. CLAIMS GROW

Action Against Storstad Owners Now For $3,000,000

MONTREAL, Oct. 2. — By an amendment made in the Admiralty court yesterday the C. P. R. has changed the sum of its suit for damages against the owners of the collier Storstad for the ramming of the Empress of Ireland from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000. The additional million, it is stated is to cover actions for damages by loss of life, either on the part of the relatives of the crew under the Workmen's Compensation Act or otherwise.

It is likely that the case will be given a hearing soon.

"FIGHTING JOE" MARTIN.

Veteran Parliamentarian Has Sat In Four Legislative Bodies.

The news that "Fighting Joe" Martin is shifting his political scenery—leaving the British House of Commons and coming back to Canada—is far from a surprise. But if he stays in Canada that will be a surprise. He has established a unique record, being the only man in the British Empire who has held a seat in four different Houses. He has been in the Manitoba Legislature, the Dominion House of Commons, the British Columbia Legislature (where he became Premier), and in the British House of Commons. He might now be expected to round off his career by introducing his dynamic personality into the rest of the Legislatures and Parliaments of the Empire.

Joseph Martin has held a career unmatched in Canadian politics. He left his birthplace in Milton, Ont., when a young boy, and before he was out of his teens he was a telegraph operator in the United States. Then came the panic of 1873, and he returned to Canada to become successively a school teacher, a lawyer, and a professional politician. Wherever he was and whatever he was at he exhibited revolutionary tendencies. "He might be a good leader in time of war, but not in time of peace; and a mighty poor follower at any time," so he once was summed up.

"Fighting Joe" started out not as an ordinary Liberal, but as an extraordinary Radical. He was up in Portage la Prairie, Man., and made a stand for Provincial Rights, thus winning a seat in the Manitoba Legislature in 1882. He stayed in that House ten years. While there he roused the whole country by stating that "Mr. Speaker was the most unscrupulous partisan he had ever met." The Legislature refused to proceed with business until he apologized. "Joe" stayed away for several days until his action became a widespread sensation. Then he turned up, and made an apology, which he closed by adding, "But it's true just the same." That was in Opposition. When the Liberals came into power Martin became Attorney-General in Thomas Greenway's Cabinet. Among other remarkable demonstrations of his individuality he announced that the French language would be abolished in the Separate Schools. This, it is said, was the commencement of the Manitoba school question.

Mr. Martin was next heard of in the Dominion House as member for Winnipeg. He sat there from 1893 until 1896, when his faculty for disagreeing with other people and standing rigidly for his principles led to his defeat.

Then he went farther West, and of course soon became a political factor in British Columbia There, in spite of the dislike of the vested interests and the regular politicians and enemies who took a pot shot at him whenever possible, Mr. Martin became Premier of the province. Lieutenant-Governor McInnes, in a period of turmoil in which "Fighting Joe" mixed merrily, dismissed Premier Semlin, and called on Mr. Martin, who had been Attorney-General, to form a Cabinet. The situation did not please the members, who with Western impulsiveness filed out of the House through one door as the governor came in the other to prorogue the House. Martin hurriedly got together a Cabinet, but in the ensuing election he was given a tremendous trouncing, winning only nine seats.

After that the "stormy petrel" bobbed up in England. He was elected member of the British House of Commons for East St. Pancras, London, in 1910, and has since held that seat.

The man who is all the time hustling for business seldom notices the hard times.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

CLIFFORD—McROBERTS.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at Knox Church manse, on Wednesday evening, by the Rev. H. J. Keith, when Miss Jennie McRoberts was united in marriage to Robert George Clifford, both of this city.

After a short honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Clifford will reside at 212 Reid St.

DARLING—GRAHAM.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Graham, Smith township, was the scene of a pretty wedding, Wednesday evening, September 30, when their eldest daughter, Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. Russell S. Darling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Darling, the Rev. R. J. McLaren, pastor at Gilmour Memorial Church, officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Darling will reside in Smith. They will have the best wishes of many friends, for happiness and prosperity.

Mr. F. McCune, Toronto, is here on business.

Mr. S. Fenote, Montreal, is in the city for a few days.

Mr. E. T. Boyd, Hamilton, is visiting friends in the city.

H. A. Dunne, Montreal, is registered at the White House.

Mr. A. S. May, Toronto, is enjoying a short stay here.

Mr. J. E. Herring, Toronto, and R. T. Beckett, Brighton, are guests at the Snowden House.

Mr. D. Moore of the Review has returned after an extended trip through Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. McCrostie and little daughter, of Peterboro, are visiting the Misses Clark and other friends in town.—Trenton Courier.

Miss Josephine Barnette of Havelock is visiting in the city. Her many friends are pleased to find her recovered from her recent serious illness.

OBITUARY

MRS. R. M. MATCHETT.

The death took place in St. Joseph's Hospital this morning of Mrs. R. M. Matchett. Born in County Cavan, Ireland, seventy-three years ago, she came to this country with her parents, when only two months old, the family settling in Otonabee. Her maiden name was Rebecca Neithercut. She was married in 1869 to the late Richard Matchett, who predeceased her some twenty years. She leaves to mourn her loss three sons, M. W. in Hamilton; Stanley and Oscar S., both of this city. Three brothers are Montgomery Neithercut, Lindsay; Joseph of Dundalk, and Alex M. of Gaylord, Mich. In religion the late Mrs. Marchett was a Methodist, being a member of Mark Street Methodist Church. Her death will be regretted by a large circle of friends, by whom she was loved and esteemed.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 384 Mark St. on Sunday afternoon at 2.30. Rev. F. A. Conners will conduct the services at the house at 2 o'clock.

JUDGMENT RENDERED

One Lady Sent to Mercer for One Year, Three More for Six Months and Man Fined $100

Magistrate Dumble gave judgment this afternoon in the several cases before him. John Godfrey charged with procuring a young woman for immoral purposes was let go on suspended sentence and payment of costs amounting to $10.50. The Magistrate explained to Godfrey that if the girl had been innocent of immorality before she met him the sentence would have been more severe.

The case of Mrs. Leavis and Wm. Nelson, who were tried on a charge of keeping a disorderly house was disposed of by sentencing Mrs. Leavis to the Mercer Institute for one year where there is a possibility of her overcoming the drug habit which she has been a victim for twelve years. Wm. Nelson was fined one hundred dollars and three months imprisonment, failing to pay the fine he will have to serve six months.

Mrs. Green, Mrs. Alice Butcher and Margaret Tucker, inmates of the Leavis' house were all sentenced to six months in the Mercer Reformatory.

MUST RETURN MONEY

Prisoners Are Brothers and Come From Respected Family in Rochester

Charles Rose and William Barr, the two short-change artists came before His Honor Judge Huycke this morning for sentence. Their counsel J. V. McElderry made an excellent plea for leniency bringing before His Honer the fact that the accused came from respectable people in the States and this was their first offence. He claimed the crimes were due mainly to the impetuousness of youth and should they be given a short sentence, he was positive that they would reform and become useful members of society. He urged that they be permitted to return to their home before January the first so that they could start their life anew on the first of the New Year.

Judge Huycke and Messrs. McElderry and Wearing held a short consultation after which His Honor addressed the prisoners. He brought to their mind the poor way in which they have commenced their life and stated that should they continue in that manner, their complete life would be nothing but disgrace to themselves and their loved ones. They had bright prospects ahead of them and for their own sake and for the sake of their friends they should brace up and become men.

Judge Huycke then imposed on William Barr the sentence of eighty days on each of the three charges for which he was convicted. The sentences will run concurrently. Charles Rose who was found guilty of one charge was sentenced to eighty days. The money stolen must be refunded and their friends must come, when their terms have expired, and take them home. Judge Huycke explained that the reason for making the sentences eighty days, was that the boys might both be home for their Christmas dinner.

Acting Crown Attorney Wearing informed The Review today that Rose and Barr are not the names of the prisoners. They are brothers and are sons of very respectable parents, who reside in Rochester. Neither knows the use of intoxicating liquors nor do they smoke. The younger boy had been going to school while the older one was a printer by trade. The former went with a circus a few months ago and later urged the latter to join him. Since then they drifted from bad to worse. The boys' father and older brother were present in the courtroom this morning.

Milady's Mirror

Nervous Headaches.

Nervous headaches are a common complaint among women. If a doctor is not consulted the best treatment is to keep the patient in bed and allow nothing to come near her which might worry her. All troubles should be kept away and perfect quiet preserved until the overwrought nerves resume their natural condition.

The Secret of Beauty.

Good health, good grooming and a good complexion are the secret of feminine beauty and charm, and it is a woman's own fault if she does not possess all these. Much depends upon her choice and use of her toilet accessories, for eternal vigilance is the price of beauty as well as of liberty.

Deep Breathing.

When you breathe deeply your muscles gradually strengthen, your eyes glow like twin stars, your chest becomes full and rounded and your pale cheeks are stained a vivid red.

The Review was shown yesterday an October apple blossom from a wealthy apple tree. The tree has a large number of blooms, some green buds and others full bloom. The blossoms came from the farm of John McGirn, Smith. October apple blossoms are an oddity and Mr. McGirn has something to feel proud of.

Beware of Poles.

A north end resident, the proud possessor of a new flag pole, forgot to leave the sign "wet paint" when he finished the first coat, the other evening. As the pole was supported by jacks, some small boys took to gymnastic performances, the paint to all appearance being a coating of dew. This sad mistake was not discovered till their clothes had taken on another color.

JAPS HAVE UPPER HAND

German Troops at Kiackau Are Forced to Fall Back

PEKIN, Oct. 2.—A German report from Tsingtau, the fortified position of the Kiaochau territory, sent by carrier pigeon to Tsinan, in Shantung Province, and thence to Pekin by telegraph, indicates that the German retirement from the second line of defence around Tsingtau, which took place last Monday, was due to the overwhelming numerical strength of the Japanese.

Continuing, this report says that the Japanese losses were 1,700 killed and 800 wounded, a result of the fire from German warships, coupled with the fire of machine guns on land. The German losses are described as small.

At the German legation in Pekin it was said yesterday that Germans caused the destruction early this week of the railroad bridge at Yayuho, six miles west of Weihsien, and that they will cause other bridges to be dynamited if the Japanese continue their westward movement. They will dynamite also all the Government buildings at Tsingtau when a further defence of that place becomes impossible.

DR. CARMAN TO RETIRE SOON

Venerable Head of Methodists to Step Out

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—Rev. Dr. Albert Carman, who for over thirty years has been general superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, will practically retire from active office when the quadrennial general conference, now in session here, rises in a few days. Yesterday afternoon an unanimous vote of the conference decided in favor of the recommendation of the superintendence committee to appoint him as superintendent emeritus for the next four years with the same salary as is paid to a general superintendent.

Rev. S. D. Chown, of Vancouver, was again elected general superintendent, with the proviso that his term of office be for the next eight years.

Henry Savage Landor Missing.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—A. Henry Savage Landor, the explorer, is missing from the place in Antwerp where he had been stopping for the last two weeks, says a despatch to The Pall Mall Gazette, from Antwerp. The correspondent adds that it is feared that Mr. Landor ventured beyond the outer line of fortifications and has been unable to return to the city.

PLACES MEN ON THE FARMS

Four men and one woman were found positions on farms this week by Might and Taylor, local emigration agents. During the month of September thirty places on farms have been secured for men out of work, by the local agency, and the Ontario inspector of agencies on his regular rounds of inspection stated that the local agency is far outshining many other agencies throughout Ontario.

STILL LEADING

For the past thirty-nine years Guy Brothers Greater Minstrels have been continuously on the road and playing to crowded houses and pleasing hundreds of people every night, a record that no other company can claim. Mr. George Guy, the Proprietor and Manager of this company, is always assured of good business, as the theatre-going people are sure to witness a clean, wholesome and refined production. Never has a single word been uttered or anything acted on the stage to offend man, woman or child. Guy Brothers' Minstrels always please, and will continue to do so this season. Thirty-five people are carried to make the company complete, and every man and act with the show are of the best, as no time or money was spared in gathering together this large company. The band and orchestra, which has always attained the very highest standard, and is without a doubt the best on the road to-day, will parade at noon on main street. Don't miss hearing it next Wednesday, Oct. 7, and secure your tickets early, when the sale opens on Monday. This is the only large minstrel show to play here this season.

"BOBS" 82 YEARS OLD

London, Oct. 2.—Lord Roberts was 82 years old Wednesday. It is over sixty years since he fought in the Indian Mutiny, and ten years since he resigned as commander-in-chief of the British army. Just now he is hard at work encouraging recruiting, inspecting regiments, collecting field glasses and saddlery for use at the front.

Once an old darkey visited a doctor and was given definite instructions as to what he should do. Shaking his head, he started to leave the office, when the doctor said :

"Here, Rastus, you forgot to pay me."

"Pay you for what, boss?"

"For my advice," replied the doctor.

"Naw, suh—naw, suh! I ain't gwine take it." And Rastus shuffled out.

LAST AWFUL DAYS IN FORTS AT LIEGE

Graphic Account of Gallant Defence by General Leman, the Belgian Commander.

This is the story of the fall of Liege in the simple graphic language of a German officer. It was told to a Dutch representative employed by a big international news bureau.

General Leman's defence of Liege combined all that is noble and all that is tragic. The commander of one fort, at the moment when the bombardment was at its heaviest, went mad and shot his own men. He was disarmed and bound.

Capola and another fort were destroyed by bombs dropped from a Zeppelin. The other forts were swept away like sand castles on the seashore before the relentless waves of our 11-inch siege guns.

As long as was possible, General Leman inspected the forts daily to see that everything was in order.

General Leman decided to hold his ground or die. Steadily his gunners were shot down and he, himself, helped to man the guns. For some time, with a mere handful of men, he held out, but nothing could have stood against the hail of shells from our guns.

When the end was inevitable, the Belgians disabled the kit, and exploded a [illegible] of shells kept in readiness. Before this General Leman destroyed all plans, maps and papers relating to the defences. All food supplies were also destroyed.

With about one hundred men, General Leman attempted to retire to a higher fort, but we had cut off their retreat. By this time our heaviest guns were in position and well placed shells tore through the cracked and battered masonry and exploded in the main magazines. Pieces of stone and concrete 25 cubic metres in size were hurled into the air. When the dust and fumes passed away we stormed the fort across ground literally strewn with the bodies of one hundred defenders. All the men in the fort were wounded, most all were unconscious. A corporal with one arm shattered valiantly tried to drive us back by firing his rifle at us.

Buried beneath the debris and pinned beneath a massive beam we found General Leman. With a gentleness and care which showed our respect for the man who had resisted us so valiantly and stubbornly, our infantrymen released the General's limp form and carried him away. We thought him dead, but he recovered consciousness, and looking around, said, "Put in the despatches that I was unconscious." We brought him to our commander, General Von Emmich, and the generals saluted. We tried to speak words of comfort to the old General, but he was heedless."

"I was unconscious, be sure to put that in your despatch," and more he would not say. Extending his hand, our commander said: 'General, you have fought gallantly and nobly held your forts.'"

GENERAL LEMAN

"General Leman replied: 'I thank you, our troops have lived up to their reputations.'"

With a smile, he added, "War is not like manoeuvres." He referred to the fact that General Von Emmich was with General Leman during the last Belgian manoeuvres. Then unbuckling his sword, General Leman tendered it to General Von Emmich.

"No," replied the German commander with a bow, "Keep your sword. To have crossed swords with you is a great honor."

Just the Material.

"They were married kneeling on a cushion stuffed with their love letters."

"I should think such a cushion would be full of angles."

"No; those letters were very, very soft."—Kansas City Journal.

Theory or Practice.

"He who puts his hand to the plow," screamed the crossroads orator, "must not turn back."

"What is he to do when he gets to the end of a furrer?" asked the auditor in the blue jean overalls.—Christian Register.

HOW WAR TIME ALTERS ROUTINE IN ENGLAND

The proud boast "an Englishman's home is his castle" does not operate during the present war. Here are some of the things the naval and military authorities may do under the Defense of the Realm Act, passed by Parliament:

Take possession of any land, building, gas, electricity, water works, or sources of supply, horses, automobiles, or any other means of transport.

Cause any buildings, statues, or any property to be moved or destroyed, and order the inhabitants to leave any given area if necessary for naval and military purposes.

Close saloons entirely, or during specified hours.

Enter by force, if need be, any house or ship which is suspected of being used to the prejudice of the state.

Arrest, or order the arrest, without warrant, of any suspected person.

Despite his singing of "Britons Never Shall be Slaves," here is some of the things a free-born Briton may not do:

Loiter near a railway bridge.

Give or sell liquor to a soldier or sailor on duty.

Spread reports by word of mouth or writing, near a defended area, likely to create alarm among the troops or civilian population.

Light fires or display lights of any description on hill tops or other high ground or buildings without permission.

Tamper with or loiter near telegraph or telephone lines.

IN LESSER SPHERES

Recounting the Time When Leading Men Took to Minor Occupations.

Now when everyone is doing what he or she can to help the country in her fight against oppression, a few stories of well known men who have turned to at unaccustomed tasks will be of interest, says a writer in "Answers."

For instance, when King George as the Duke of Cornwall and York was crossing the Atlantic on the return from his world tour he donned a stoker's dress and went down into the stoke-hold. He had seen the men come up, like seals to their blowholes, for a breath of fresh air, and he was anxious to try for himself what the work was like. Not content with looking on, the King siezed a shovel, and, for a considerable time, worked hard at feeding the boilers with fuel. When he had had enough he did not wonder that the men should seek a brief respite in the upper regions.

Some time ago Prince Alexander of Teck found that owing to the withdrawal of a large number of men from the barracks at Hampton Court many horses would go unfed and unattended unless the officers themselves did the work. He at once took off his coat, and set the example by carrying bucket after bucket of water, and worked as hard all the morning as any trooper in the ranks.

When Lord Denman, Governor-General of the Commonwealth, was turning the first sod of the Australian Continental Railway he did it in such a workmanlike way, tossing the sod into a barrow, wheeling it across a narrow plank, and returning with the barrow behind him in proper navvy style, that a real navvy shouted: "Bully for you! You're good for seven bob a day!"

The father of the present Duke of Westminster was an expert engine-driver, and so was the late Duke of Sutherland. Sir William Russell used to tell a story of the duke starting one day from Dunrobin Station, when an admiring navvy exclaimed: "There, that's what I call a real duke! Why, there he is, a-driving of his own engine on his own railway, and a-burning of his own coals!" King Albert, of Belgium, too, can drive a railway engine in true workmanlike style.

Colonel Seely, a former Minister of War, has been a member of the lifeboat crew at Totland Bay, in the Isle of Wight, for many years, and only last winter he went out in a raging storm as an ordinary member of the lifeboat crew and assisted in saving several lives. Indeed, he is a very efficient member of the crew, and has often been in the boat in circumstances of great risk.

[illegible] had it.

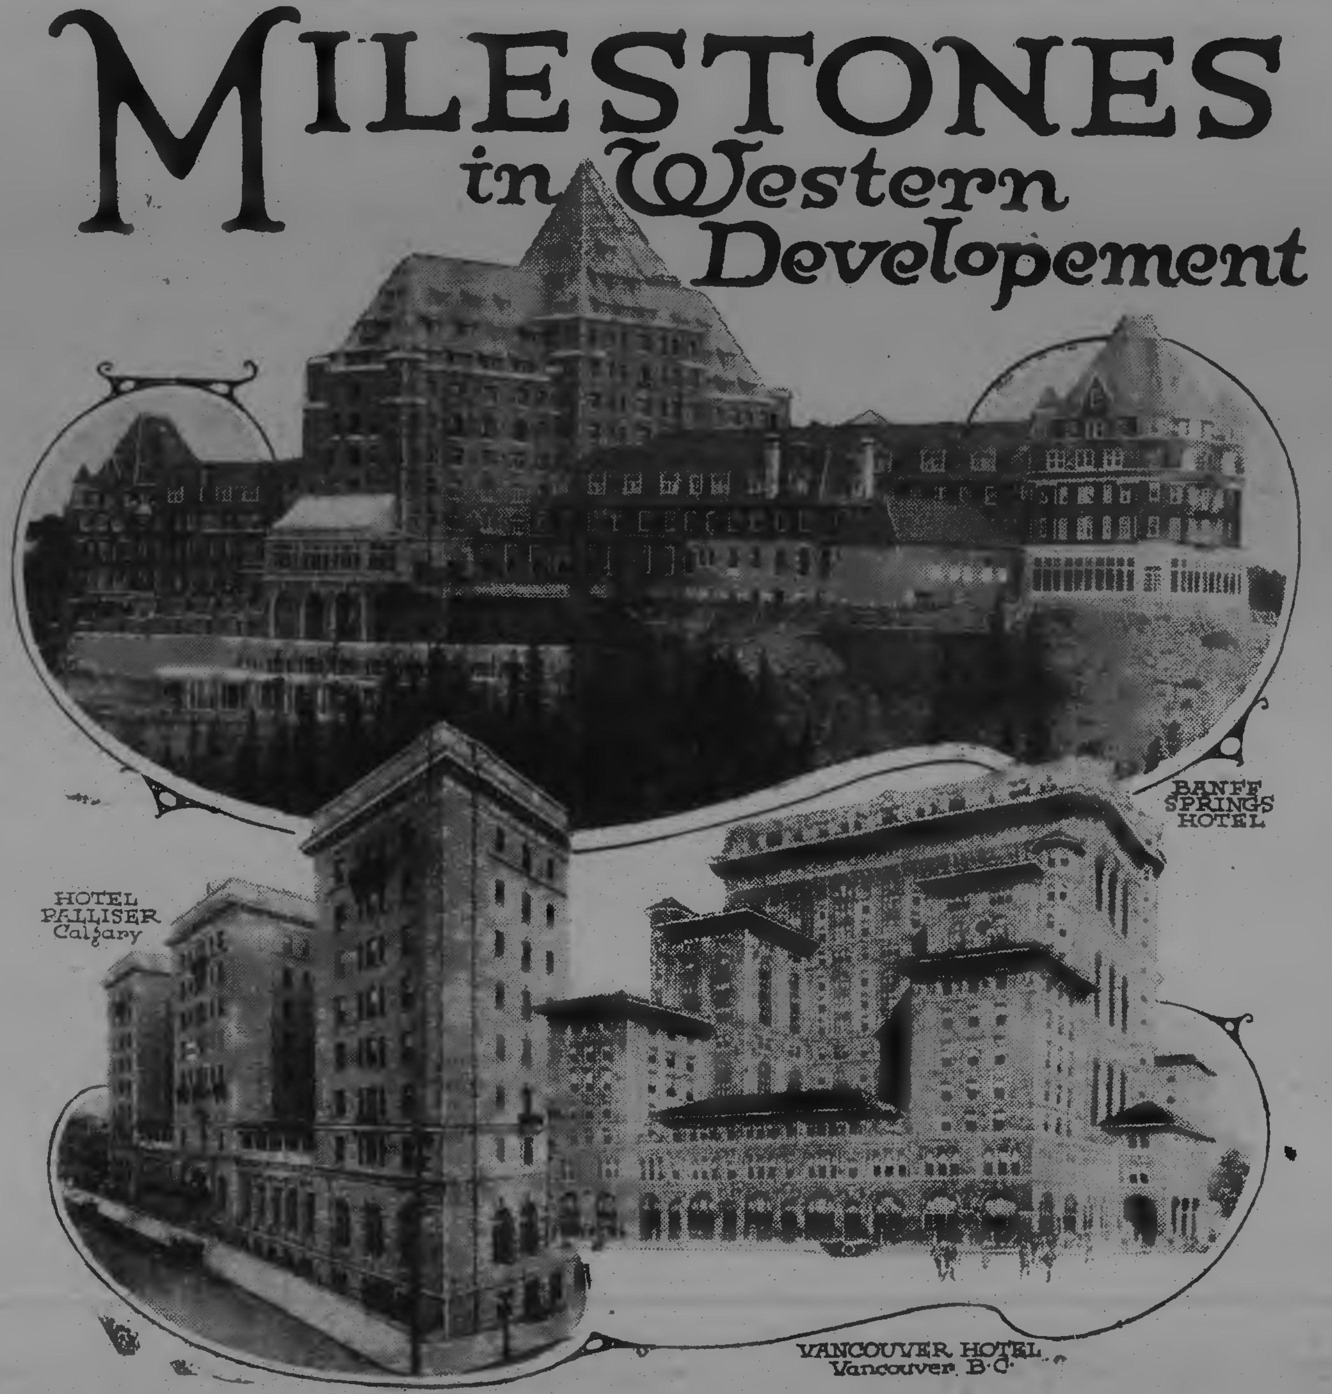
MILESTONES in Western Developement



As Western Canada, from Winnipeg to Vancouver, has become the new land of promise to those who seek ready prosperity or great fortune, so as the Golden West and the Titanic Rockies become the new Paradise of the tourist and the health-seeker. It was this several decades ago, even before the peoples of foreign countries began to realize that the Canadian Pacific, the British Empire's "greatest highway," had provided tourists and health-seekers with unrivalled facilities to see a land of natural facilders, in prairies, forests, mountains, rivers, lakes and climatic vigors and exhilarating attractions far surpassing the combined lures of Scandinavia, the British Isles, France, Switzerland, Spain and Italy.

But since the world's greatest war has made leisurely pleasure-travel impossible in Europe, the British Empire's "greatest highway" is now, as a noted "globe trotter" put it, "the chief objective of tourists, and without a peer in the whole wide world." It is the unexampled travelling accommodation and comfort, and more particularly the unique modern terminal and hotel system, of the Canadian Pacific, that invite tourists to see the Dominion's wondrous land of sunshine and the grandeurs of the Rockies. These modern terminals and hotels are an evolution—"milestones" in western development.

The first milestone on the way is at Winnipeg, the Gateway to the Golden West. Not many years ago it was only a trading post. To-day it is one of the most beautiful and progressive cities on the American continent. Here the Canadian Pacific first exemplified its ideal of thorough modern terminal and hotel systems which would be commensurate with its equally unique transportation system. The Royal Alexandra hotel, connected with the company's terminal at Winnipeg, is a splendid structure, taken architecturally; its interior appointments are refined, its cuisine is beyond criticism, and guests have choice of European or American plan of service.

Leaving Winnipeg the tourist to the Pacific coast is soon entranced with the spectacle of unending expanses of level grain-bearing prairie, where the immense distances, first fulvous with saffron light, fade away at last into the most delicate purpling shadows. Feasting the vision on this ethereal natural beauty, the tourist eventually arrives at Calgary, the Ambitious City of the Canadian West. Here, again, the Canadian Pacific exemplifies its progressive ideals in Terminal and Hotel. At Calgary Hotel Palliser, the newest hostelry in the Company's system, is the most beautiful architecturally, and is under the most expert management.

Starting anew from Calgary, the tourist travels over rolling grassy foothills, which rise tier behind tier, forming successive outposts to the base of the gigantic Rockies, and at length alights at Banff. Banff is the gateway to the Canadian National Park, incomparable in beautiful and sublime scenery, and without a peer as a holiday playground. One and a half miles from the station is Banff Springs Hotel. This is another of the Canadian Pacific's giant and palatial hotels, equalling the others in architecture, refined apartments, cuisine and service, but surpassing them in environments of matchless beauty and in health-giving pleasures, notable amongst which are the world-renowned baths supplied from the sulphur springs close at hand.

Vancouver Hotel is the final milestone in Western development. On the way to Vancouver City the tourist is overwhelmed with a five-hundred mile panaroma of cloud-piercing, ice-capped mountains, unfathomable canyons and thundering torrents.

Passing the Doctor

How Volunteers Are Tested For Physical Fitness in Britain.

When a man goes up to be examined by the doctor with a view of joining the forces and being sent to the front he has to go through a tremendous lot of tests. Heart, lungs, teeth, etc., but particular attention is paid to eyesight in respect to clearness of vision, and also the possibility of color blindness.

A piece of colored silk is thrust into the man's hand, and he is asked to name the color.

"Red," he says.

"Right," says the doctor, and, taking the silk from him, lays it back on the table amongst a heap of assorted colors, and then tells the would-be recruit to cross the room to another table heaped in a similar manner, and to match it from memory.

Frequently the man succeeds in finding the right shade, or one sufficiently near it, but at a recent test the candidate asserted that a brilliant green was red, and upon being asked to match it did so by finding a purple.

Forcing a Safeguard

One of the most serious of military offences on active service—one invariably punished by death—is known as "forcing a safeguard."

When an army is moving through an enemy's country its commander will often place sentries over the houses of well-disposed inhabitants to prevent their being looted or pillaged by his own men. Interference with such a "safeguard" is a military crime for which no "extenuating circumstances" are ever recognised.

TIGHT CENSORSHIP

Even the Court Newsman Had to Modify Language

One of the most remarkable features of the war in England has been the completeness of the censorship and the unanimity with which the censors have been assisted by the newspapers themselves in keeping out anything that might be of value to the enemy. Even the king has been censored. The Court Circular, the official document issued every night by the court newsman, giving an account of the King's movements for the day, contained the information that the King and Queen had visited Aldershot to review the troops there "on their departure for the front." The newspapers had been warned that nothing must be printed about the movements of troops and this indiscreet phrase was spotted at once in several offices and the censor was warned. What he did has not been disclosed, but half an hour later the court newsman was ringing up every newspaper office in London and imploring them to delete the dangerous words from The Court Circular.

Prefer Suicide to Capture

An Austrian count, sailing for home from New York to take part in the war against Servia as lieutenant in a cavalry regiment, said that the officers of the Austrian army "are supplied with small vials of poison, which, if they are captured, will be used to destroy themselves rather than undergo indignities at the hands of their enemies."

The danger of firing upwards at aircraft is that, if the bullet misses its mark, it will descend and endanger those below.

An aeroplane salutes by dipping and rising in the air.

By Fortune of War

Many a chance occurrence has had a marked effect on the fortunes of war. It has often been stated that a strike really caused the Spanish-American War. Two destroyers were on order in England, destined for work on the Cuba coast, but a strike delayed their completion.

The Spanish have declared that had these vessels been delivered to time it would have enabled them to prevent gun-running in Cuba. In consequence the revolt would have been crushed, and there would have been no reason for the United States to interfere.

The German Empire might never have come into being had some French artillerymen been able to shoot straight. During one of the fights outside Paris a troop of cavalry came within range of the guns of Mont Valerian. Fire was opened, and a few men fell, disclosing a carriage, but it was driven out of range as quickly as possible.

The carriage contained the Emperor, or, rather, King of Prussia, as he was then, Bismarck, and Moltke.

Servians Good Fighters

The quality of the Servian army stands very high. The men are drawn from a hardy peasant class, and are used to hardships and fatigue. Though the majority are illiterate, they are quite intelligent, and among them are a number of leading spirits who, thanks to warlike experiences with the roving bands which infest the Balkans, have been men of war from their youth up.

No man is thoroughly accomplished unless he has an ability to mind his own business.

If you wish to prevent green vegetables from boiling over, drop a piece of dripping the size of a walnut into the centre of them, just as they commence to boil.

LOOKING TO AFRICA

Richest Prizes of the War Lie in the Dark Continent.

Every power involved in the war, with the exception of Servia and Austria, the two original principals have oversea possessions, and, whichever combination should win, there can be no doubt that it would seize some of the extra-European possessions of the other.

If we leave out of account Canada Australasia and India the great overseas prizes for which the armies are contending are in Africa. It is in Africa that the colonies of France, Germany and Britain are closest together. Belgium, too, has a veritable empire in the heart of the Dark Continent, and in the event of the allies being defeated the Belgian Congo would certainly be called upon to salute a new overlord. Looking at the map of Africa, it is to be observed that there are only two black portions upon the whole continent. These represent pure African ownership. All the rest has been divided among European countries. Abyssinia and Liberia alone recognize their original owners. Probably ninety-five per cent. of the whole continent is one of the stakes for which the rival combinations are now contending.

Colonial Nurses Volunteered

Two of the nurses serving with the British Red Cross corps in Belgium are New Zealand ladies who where in London on holiday, and loyally offered their services to the Motherland. Another nurse had unique experience in a plague hospital in India.

Despite foreign competition, the large majority of the British Army aeroplanes are of British manufacture.

CARRYING DESPATCHES

Many a Trick Resorted to Hide Papers From Enemy.

"The military despatch bearer," the late Archibald Forbes used to say, "must combine the artfulness of the Chinee, the skill in disguise of the actor, and the scorn of danger of a V.C. hero, if he is to carry his life through the thousand risks of his calling."

In the old days, when war moved on leaden feet, a favorite method of conveying a message through the enemy's lines was to write the despatch on the shaven head of a slave, allow the hair to grow again, and then send the courier with his message, which a second shaving of the head revealed. A messenger, disguised as a pilgrim, would carry a parchment roll concealed in the hollow interior of his staff, and an arrow shot over the enemy's head has carried many a missive into a besieged fortress in the Middle Ages.

That the war courier of to-day is as daring and resourceful as his long-gone predecessors many a story proves. In the South African War the Kaffir runner was invaluable as a despatch carrier, eluding the Boers by his invisibility on dark nights and by his assumption of childish ignorance. If he was intercepted, the guileless child of Nature would lisp, "Me no speak English; me farmer's boy. Me hate English." And with such consummate art would he play his role of innocence that he was almost invariably allowed to pass.

One of these wily creatures was caught between Mafeking and Kuruman, and for once his assumption of guilelessness failed to convince. He was stripped by the Boers, but the most thorough search failed to reveal a scrap of incriminating paper, and he was dismissed with a parting kick. No wonder he chuckled as he sped away, for he carried in one of his nostrils a quill containing an important despatch.

Equally successful was a young Scotsman who fooled the Boers with his charming amiability. "Despatches? No," he laughed. "Catch me carrying despatches." "What have you got there?" asked the Boer commandant, pointing to a parcel the canny Scot was carrying. "Only a few sandwiches. Will ye no tak' one?" was the smiling answer, as the North Briton unrolled his napkin and offered the burghers some of his fare. The Boers declined the hospitable offer, and the Scot got away with priceless papers concealed in his sandwiches and in a hard-boiled egg.

DRAKE'S DRUM

There is a legend that when danger threatens Great Britain it is only necessary to sound Drake's drum and he will come back to beat her enemies, as he did in times gone by.

Nowhere is this idea better expressed than in Henry Newbolt's fine poem, "Drake's Drum."

"Take my drum to England, hang et by the shore,
Strike et when your powder's runnin' low;
If the dons sight Devon I'll quit the port o' Heaven
An' drum them up the Channel, as we drummed them long ago," the great sea captain is supposed to say.

The drum is still to be seen in Devonshire at Buckland Abbey, in the possession of a descendant of Drake's brother. Those who believe in the old fairy tales laughed at by the cynic say the drum has already been sounded twice, and not in vain.

While Drake's memory was still green the Dutch tried to wrest the command of the sea from England, and at the tap of the drum his spirit was incarcerated in Blake. Yet again clouds gathered round Britain when Napoleon dominated Europe, and the drum that had sounded round the world was heard once more.

This brought to life the finest admiral the world has seen, and Nelson saved the country.

Marching Records

Until a few months ago when a company of the London Rifle Brigade marched to Brighton at a pace averaging slightly over four miles an hour all the way—the world's military marching record was held by the French Foreign Legion, with a march of 50 miles in 15½ hours. The Rifle Brigade covered 52 miles in 14 hours 23 minutes. Any march of a whole regiment over 30 miles in one day is regarded as remarkable, but the Royal Scots have done 23½ miles in 12 hours and this feat was all the finer through having been accomplished in India. The Potsdam Battalion of Guards once did over 100 miles in three days on grand manoeuvres.

France Guards Field Gun Secret

There is a popular impression that the French army is equipped with field guns of the type made familiar by the Servians and the Boers. This is erroneous. The French Government gun is manufactured at the Government arsenals and under no circumstances can it be purchased. The greatest secrecy surrounds the manufacture of this weapon, and it is a rule to keep the guns well covered with tarpaulins when on parade.

A Mystery Of Jewels

It Remained a Mystery For Many Years

By F. A. MITCHEL

When I first met Lucy Larraway she was living with her mother, and they were having a hard time to make ends meet. We were both very young then and formed a boy and girl attachment. As we grew older and I reached an age at which I realized that I had a career before me and must be considering how to meet it the fact that neither Lucy nor I had any capital seemed to render a marriage between us undesirable.

I don't remember that I stated this to her in so many words. Indeed, there was no need to do so, for she spoke of it herself. She was a practical girl and looked at things as they were rather than as she would have them. "I would only be a drag on you," she said. "You are capable of taking a good stand in the world provided you don't handicap yourself in the start with a wife who must throw the whole burden upon you."

"Would you have me—that is, considering yourself out of the question—marry a girl with a fortune?"

"No," she replied; "I would not."

"What are your reasons?"

"First, it would deprive you of the stimulus of necessity, which is the foundation of all or nearly all success. Second, I do not believe that any poor man of proper pride can ever feel comfortable if his wife possesses a fortune and he has nothing."

"The deduction being that a poor man had best not marry so long as he is poor?"

"Rather that if he marries a woman who supplies comforts and luxuries he is in an unpleasant position, and if he marries one as poor as himself he is very badly handicapped."

In all this I agreed with Lucy, but I neither admitted nor denied its truth. We being practical young persons, there was never a proposal on my part or an acceptance or refusal on hers. We conferred upon the matter of our marrying much as two persons will talk over the practicability of forming a business partnership. Whatever of love there was underneath this common sense deliberation was unexpressed.

This condition lasted about a year, when Lucy's mother died. It seemed to me then that Lucy might best marry me, for she must live alone. But the conditions were otherwise unchanged, and since her mother had been nonproductive pecuniarily Lucy could provide for her wants more easily than before. I was then struggling to get a start in my profession, and it did not seem wise for me to urge her.

Then followed a period in which Lucy and I saw very little of each other. I was away from home a great deal, and I heard of her being away, too, though where she had gone I did not learn. I wrote her a despondent letter, in which I said that at the rate we were progressing—or, rather, not progressing—financially she would soon be an old maid. I advised her, if she found a suitable opportunity, to marry. She replied that if she found the opportunity she would let me know before engaging herself.

Such was the very practical situation when one morning I received a package by express. Not expecting anything in that way, I looked long at the typewritten address before opening it. There seemed to be a box under the wrapper, and had it not been very light I might have feared an infernal machine. Untying the string and taking off the cover, there, true enough, was a box. Its lid was on hinges and was held shut by a spring, which I pressed and raised the lid.

I recall with the freshness of that moment the dazzling splendor of what lay before me. The box was lined with purple satin, on which rested a heap of diamonds. For a moment I was lost in contemplation of their beauty; then I began to wonder how they could have come into my possession. Again I took up the wrapper and scrutinized the address. There were my name, street and number, plain as the stones in the box. Turning again from the printing to the jewels, I made a rough estimate of their value. Several large stones I believed, if genuine, to be worth between $10,000 and $12,000 each. There were many smaller ones, and when I figured up the value of each I concluded the lot was worth not much less and not much more than $50,000.

After many theories as to why this treasure had been sent me I came to the conclusion that it had been stolen, the thief had feared being caught with it in his possession and had shipped it by express to get it into the hands of some one else. But in doing so he must have given up all claim to the property, for he must have expected that the receiver would report the matter to the police. But why had he chosen me for his purpose? My only theory on this point was that he had taken up a directory to find a name and address and his hitting on mine was a mere coincidence.

Being a methodical sort of person, I thought out what I would do before doing it. I made a list of the stones, giving a description of each, then started for a safety deposit company. On the way I submitted the jewels to a diamond expert, who pronounced them genuine, of excellent quality and offered me $60,000 for the lot. At the deposit company I rented a box, locked the stones in it, then reported the matter to the police.

There had been several jewel robberies reported, but none very lately. I looked over the description in each case, but none of them tallied with the case in hand. Mine were all unset, but this made no difference, for they might easily have been removed from the setting. Mine were all diamonds, while in the other cases the stones consisted of various jewels.

By arrangement with the police I had each stone weighed and described by a diamond expert, and they were authorized if any one described any of the jewels correctly to put him in communication with me, that he might prove property. A number of descriptions of stones or lots of stones came to me, but none tallied with those that had been sent to me. It was impossible that I should be imposed upon in a matter of weight alone.

The theory of the police was that the jewels had been stolen, probably in one lot, from a diamond merchant, who had reasons for not reporting his loss. Sometimes those losing goods, suspecting or not suspecting the thief, put a private detective on the case, who advises keeping the whole matter secret. I showed the gems, the box in which they came, the paper in which they had been wrapped, to a detective, who studied them closely, but without getting a clew. Had the box been a new one he might possibly have traced it from the maker to the person who had bought it, but it was evidently very old, nothing of its kind having been manufactured for many years.

I told no one except officials of my find for several months. Then I informed Lucy Larraway of it. She gave me no assistance in ferreting out the sender. That I had not yet heard from him did not argue that I would not hear at any time, though the longer the delay the less likelihood. The fact of their having been sent to me instead of a confederate tended to indicate that when the thief had shipped them his object was to get rid of them without even calling for them.

Lucy suggested that there was some story in high life connected with them, possibly a tragedy. She fancied, for instance, a profligate son of a wealthy father stealing them from him, then becoming terror stricken at exposure and shipping them at random. A case like this would probably never be exposed.

As time went on this theory or something like it seemed to be gaining ground with Lucy, and I fell in with it myself. I stated it to the police, who told me that not a tithe of the skeletons in family closets ever walked out into the open. Possibly an explanation of this case of mine might come in time, but there was little likelihood of my having been put in possession of the jewels temporarily or I would have been called on for them before now.

At last I came to the conclusion to use the property for my advancement. At a time following a financial panic when securities were much depressed I made a loan on the diamonds and bought productive property. A quick rise followed, and I sold out at a considerable profit.

When I told Lucy of what I had done I expected that she would blame me for jeopardizing property that I might at any time be called upon to return. She did not seem to take this view of it, however, reminding me that I had done all I could to discover the owner, whereupon I told her that I now saw no reason why we should not be married, and she consented.

For years the diamonds remained in the safety deposit company's vault. Children grew up about Lucy and me. But I prospered, and there was enough for all. When sons and daughters were going to college and our expenses were considerable my wife suggested that I sell the jewelry and put the money into interest bearing property. But I declined to do so, intending them for my children after my death.

For thirty years I lived a happy life with my dear wife; then she left me. Some time after her death I devoted myself to the melancholy duty of weeding out those numberless effects, consisting of old letters and trinkets, that accumulate during a lifetime. Going over some private papers of hers, I found a list of diamonds, giving their standing as to purity and their accurate weight. I recognized that it comprised the gems which had been sent to me years agone. I could not remember my wife having had a copy of this inventory.

Passing on to other papers in the same receptacle, I came upon a will executed more than thirty years before by one Jane Larraway, bequeathing to her niece, Lucille Larraway, all her property. I opened my eyes at this and pushed on through the bundle of papers among which I had found it and saw at once that they concerned the settling of the estate of Jane Larraway and that Lucy had received an inheritance of $63,000.

If ever man looked back with emotion on a noble deed of one lost I did on seeing the evidence that my beloved Lucy had converted a fortune into diamonds and given them to me, concealing herself as the donor. Oh, that I could bring her back for one moment in which to take her in my arms and tell her—or try to tell her—what I felt!

Alas, how many of us realize sacrifices that have been made for us only after the beloved one has passed beyond our gratitude!

I told my children what their mother had done for us all and divided the gems among them, to keep in memory of her.

UTAH'S NATURAL BRIDGE.

The Secret of Its Origin Somewhat Puzzles the Scientists.

What is thought to be the largest natural bridge in the world is that of southwestern Utah, known as the George natural bridge. The total length of this great work of nature is about 200 feet; its width—i. e., the "roadway"—is about thirty-five feet; the span in the clear is about ninety feet. At the base there flows a small water course which, during the hot months, dwindles to a mere rivulet.

Scientists are somewhat perplexed to explain the means by which nature produced this bridge. It is thought hardly possible that it could have been created by water erosion, unless, as was most unlikely, there was a very large and swift stream flowing at the point where the brook now runs.

Some authorities are inclined to the view that this bridge was due to volcanic action, occurring at some remote geological period.

Although long known to the Indians, it was not until about fifteen years ago that white men became familiar with the sight of it. Mining prospectors were the first of the whites to see it, since it is located in the heart of a very rugged and inaccessible region.

The span is composed of a dark brown standstone of unusual hardness, and the thickness of the span is twenty feet or more.

Engineers who have examined this bridge assert that it is perfectly safe and secure and that it is fully capable of sustaining an immense weight, especially as the span is free from flaws or seams.—Washington Star.

JUSTICE AND LUNCHEON.

They Seemed to Clash a Trifle, So the Court Made a Change.

It was formerly the practice of the supreme court to sit from 12 noon until 4 o'clock continuously on each day that it was in session. From time to time, as the afternoon progressed, the justices, one or two at a time, would slip out of their seats, snatch a bite of luncheon and return. Sometimes as many as four or five of them would be off the bench at once. They usually had their luncheon brought to them by their messengers and ate it in the little curtained recess behind the bench, and as the argument progressed there could be plainly heard in the courtroom the clink of knife and fork on plate and what O. Henry has called "the crash of dishes on the American plan."

One day a lawyer pleading a case made bold to enter a protest. He most solemnly inquired if he could count upon the continuous and undivided attention of even one justice to the thread of his argument. "The personnel of the court has been twice entirely changed since I began," he said plaintively.

The court deigned no response, but on the following Monday it was announced from the bench that a recess for luncheon thereafter would be taken every day from 2 to 2:30 o'clock and that the court would sit until 4:30 o'clock every afternoon. — World's Work.

Birds That Fight Eagles.

In Foula, one of the Shetland islands, the natives make a business of rearing skau gulls in order to rid the islands of eagles that congregate there and commit many depredations. The magnificent red sandstone cliffs that skirt the northwestern coast became a favorite haunt of the eagles, and in this inaccessible spot they increased so rapidly that they became a terror to the farmers and fishermen who dwell on this isolated spot. The skau gulls are also strong and fierce and the inveterate foes of the eagle. In battle the gulls are nearly always victorious, and so the inhabitants of Foula hit upon the novel plan of feeding and caring for the skau gulls, which, though formidable to their feathered enemies, are very peaceful and docile when brought in contact with man.—Dallas News.

IT PERMEATES

THE steel age and steam age are ended,
And now we turn over a page
And mark up another new era,
For this is the gasoline age.
You can't get away from the odor;
It greets you on sea and on land,
And soon in the air as we travel
A whiff in our face will be fanned.

Go out for a sail on the river,
Go forth for a spin on the road,
Stroll round by the bench in the workshop
Or sit in your humble abode,
Walk out in the places of pleasure
Or in by the side of the loom,
For any old place you may journey
It's there you will get its perfume.

Or if you should happen where madly
My lady is cleaning her dress
Or giving her gloves a new borning
Its odor you'd note more or less,
Or idle an hour in a printshop
When you have some leisure to spare
And you will quite readily notice
The gasoline scent on the air.

For years we lived happy without it
And managed, I do not know how.
We couldn't—can any one doubt it?—
Exist without using it now.
It's right on the ground with the contract
Our organs of scent to engage.
It blooms in the city or country,
For this is the gasoline age.

WATCHFUL WAITING.

WHEN Mary was a little kid
I liked her plenty from the start;
She kind of got me, she did,
And stole away my boyish heart;
She thrilled a heap of us that way,
And she had lots of beaus, I found;
I couldn't talk as well as they,
But—well, I sorta stuck around.

And then, as Mary grew and grew,
My love waxed greater than before;
But she was followed by a crew
Of five or six or ten or more;
They used to joke and laugh and sing,
I scarcely ever made a sound,
For I was shy as anything,
But—well, I sorta stuck around.

She used to treat me pretty rough
And make a doormat out of me,
But my old hide was thick and tough,
And I was fond of her, you see;
She'd call me Fido and she'd make
Gay jokes about a faithful hound;
Sometimes the jests were hard to take,
But—well, I sorta stuck around.

The fellows came, the fellows went,
And Mary gently turned 'em down;
I stayed, according to my bent,
And was the laughingstock of town;
Folks called me "Old Fidelity;"
I meekly smiled and held my ground,
And Mary's married now—to ME,
For—well, I sorta stuck around!

Embarrassing.

Joseph Jefferson, the actor, once told a friend this story:

"I was coming down the elevator of the stock exchange building, and at one of the intermediate floors a man whose face I know as well as I know yours got in. He greeted me warmly at once, said it was a number of years since we had met and was friendly and gracious, but I couldn't place him for the life of me. I asked him as a sort of feeler how he happened to be in New York, and he answered, with a touch of surprise, that he had lived there for several years. Finally I told him in an apologetic way that I couldn't recall his name. He looked at me for a moment, and then he said quietly that his name was U. S. Grant."

"What did you do, Joe?" his friend asked.

"Do?" he replied, with a characteristic smile. "Why, I got out at the next floor for fear I'd ask him if he had ever been in the war!"—Chicago News.

Local Manager of the Dominion Guarantee & Accident Co., Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir:

Will you kindly convey to the Dominion Guarantee & Accident Company, my sincere thanks for the prompt and fair manner in which they settled my claim for indemnity as a result of my recent accident.

I desire specially to mention Mr. H. H. Bounter, the Claims Agent, whom I consider to be a gentleman admirably fitted for the position he holds. For, while he seems to never forget the interests of his company, his sympathy for the injured, and his manifest spirit of fair dealing, win for him both gratitude and confidence.

I wish also, through you, to express my thanks to your Local Solicitor, Mr. George Elliott, through whom I effected insurance in your company, who has proved himself to be an efficient Agent, and who has looked after the renewals, and other matters connected with my policy, faithfully and well.

With such officers on its staff as Bounter and Elliott, the Dominion Guarantee & Accident Company is sure to secure a large patronage from the insuring public.

I am, Sir,
Yours very truly,

Ceremonious.

If there is one thing a commercial traveler dislikes more than another it is elaborate ceremony; and if the spirit of his profession is in him be generally finds some way to let his prejudices be known.

One evening a traveling salesman from Cincinnati happened to sit down at a hotel table in company with half a dozen state legislators, who talked with excessive formality. It was "Will the gentleman from Hardin do this?" and "Does the gentleman from Franklin want that?" the ordinary form of direct address being carefully eschewed.

For nearly ten minutes the commercial traveler suffered in silence. Then he turned to the waiter and said in deep, oratorical tones:

"Will the gentleman from Ethiopia please pass the butter?"

The remedy was effectual.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Occupying a Trade Vacuum

THE withdrawal from the Canadian market of much merchandise that prior to the war came from Continental Europe left, as it were, a trade vacuum, and a vacuum is abhorrent alike to Nature and to business.

The ceaseless effort on the part of business to expand itself has already led many a Canadian manufacturer to attempt to fill the void caused by the stoppage of imports from the countries at war.

The spinners and weavers of cotton are finding new and surprising uses for cotton as a substitute for jute. Manufacturers of electrical equipment are fast finding substitutes for materials and parts hitherto obtained from abroad. The growing of sugar beets and the making of beet sugar will be stimulated in Canada as a consequence of war. Yarns, hosiery, underwear, gloves, and garments for women and children, aforetime imported, will now be produced in Canada. And so one could go on and on in illustrating the triumph of human energy and genius over disabilities and disorders.

Watch the advertising columns of the public press for proofs that Canadian manufacturers are making efforts to fill the trade vacuum.

ARABIAN JUSTICE.

A Desert Problem the Cadi Had No Trouble in Solving.

Two Arabs stopped at an oasis to bare luncheon. One had three dates, and the other had five, which they were to eat together. Presently a stranger came up and asked permission to share their meal, which they cheerfully granted. After all had eaten the stranger thanked them for the food they had given him, left eight ducats and rode away.

The Arab who had the three dates said, "Here is 8 ducats for eight dates—1 ducat for each date; therefore three ducats are mine." But the other Arab argued differently and contended that he should have seven ducats and the first man one. The case was referred to the cadi of the nearest town, who upheld the second man's contention. This is the way he reached his decision:

The three men divided eight dates. There were two and two-thirds for each, or eight-thirds. The first Arab had three dates, so he contributed nine-thirds to the whole, but he ate eight-thirds himself, so he gave only one-third of a date to the stranger. The second Arab contributed five dates, or fifteen-thirds; he ate eight-thirds himself and gave seven-thirds to the stranger.

So reasoned the cadi, and he gave the first Arab 1 ducat and the second 7 ducats.—Youth's Companion.

TWO CROPS AT ONCE.

Tree Agriculture an Old Story on the Island of Majorca.

Approximately nine-tenths of the arable area of Majorca, one of the Spanish islands in the Mediterranean, is planted out to crop yielding trees. That makes one story agriculture. Then beneath the trees grain is grown. That makes the second story, which may properly be likened to the cyclone cellar.

For miles and miles in every direction that beautiful island is covered, with continuous orchards of almonds, olives, figs and carobs, with occasional grafted oak trees, the sweet acorns of which are prized as highly as the chestnut.

This tree agriculture is nothing new, for many of these orchards are of unknown age, and some of them give evidence of having seen generations of men rise, dig awhile and die before Columbus sailed past on his way from Genoa to Gibraltar, and throughout all the years that the white man has striven in America these same old olive and carob trees have been standing there, handing down their harvests of fruit and beans to the men who raised other crops at their feet—crops of wheat, oats, barley, beans and peas.—From "Two Story Farming," by J. Russell Smith, in Century.

Make Appearances Count.

A good appearance is always an entering wedge when a man seeks an interview, but all the clothes in a king's wardrobe won't sell a bill of goods. It takes human intelligence to do that. Vanity sometimes leads a fellow to bedeck his person like a five storied wedding cake, and some men do it, I suppose, because they believe in the foolish aphorism that "clothes make the man." It's the other way. Man makes the clothes, and just as often clothes unmake the man. Fine feathers may make fine birds, fine hats or fine dusters, but the best that fine clothes ever did was to make fine looking men. No doctor ever prescribes for himself, and by the same token you'll notice that the men who own the clothes foundries don't wear their own styles—not publicly, at any rate. —Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Sawing the Wood.

It was only on rare occasions that Mrs. Cutler, a kind faced old lady, accepted invitations to dine out. Upon repeated invitations of her friends, the Joslins, however, she consented to attend a little informal dinner they were giving, accompanied by her daughter.

Unfortunately Mrs. Cutler was quite deaf and consequently could not enter into the general conversation. She was engaged in cutting a piece of steak when her daughter turned to her and said:

"Mother, dear, why are you so quiet?"

"I'm all right," responded mother, with a sunny smile. "While you talk, Mabel, I say nothing and saw wood."—Buffalo Express.

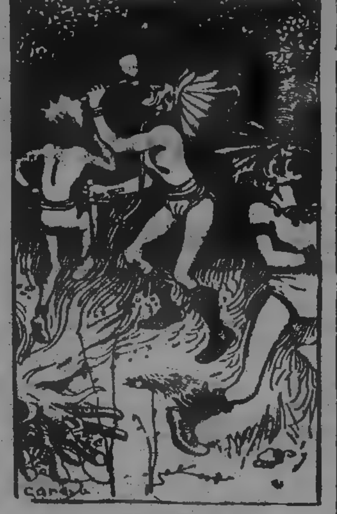
MR. Q. HOPE JONES

He Gives a Free Lecture, but Takes up Collection

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

"LADIES and Gentlemen—It is needless for me to observe that this large and intelligent audience does me proud. It was advertised that this lecture would be free, and you found the doors wide open to you. I feel it a sort of duty, however, to take up a collection. Any money so contributed will be evenly divided. One-half will go toward erecting a tombstone over the grave of the father-in-law of Christopher Columbus, as soon as the same can be located, and the other half will be economically expended in paying my personal expenses from town to town. As I pass the hat I will call your attention to the fact that if Columbus hadn't been backed by his father-in-law he could never have set out on his voyage, and that the said father-in-law has never had a fair show in history. As I count up the proceeds of the collection, which amounts to $1.78, I wish to return thanks on behalf of Columbus and all his relations.



"YELLS FOR SCALPS."

"My subject is the American Indian, and the duty of the American white man toward him. I hope to make your duty plain to you, as I turn the light of my stereopticon on the canvas, and you behold the picture of the savage at home. Instead of sowing or reaping he is engaged in a war dance. Instead of broadening his mind he is clinging to old time traditions. As he dances he yells for scalps and hollers for gore.

"Who is to blame for this state of affairs? All of us. Had we followed the finger of duty thirty years ago the red man of today would have been wearing plug hats and high collars, and his thirst for gore would have been washed away in mock turtle soup and ice cream. We see this savage engaged in a war dance, when he might just as well be employed in compiling a family almanac or running a cider mill.

"We lay aside the picture of the war dance and substitute another. My heart aches every time I exhibit it. You see the picture of a squaw standing in front of a wigwam. Years ago she was called Blue Bell and the young men of her tribe raved over her willowy form and fawn like glide. Had the hand of the white race been extended to her then she would have been ornamenting a drawing room. Instead of wearing an army blanket she would have draped and posed for a goddess before some great painter.

"No helping hand was extended and the Blue Bell with the willowy form was left to mature into a sawed off squaw, who smokes a pipe. I ask the red headed man on the end seat, third row, how he would like to be an Indian buck in old clothes, with nothing to do but lick his squaw in the morning, kick his dogs in the afternoon, and cuss his pappooses around after dark? I ask the woman with the frozen expression over there by the post how she would like to be a squaw in a wigwam. We have taught the people of Africa how to eat mince pie and we have taught the folks of China how to devour ice cream, but we have turned our backs on the Indians under our feet and had no concern in their welfare. I feel, to speak plainly on this matter, I feel to say to the fat man with the bald head and contented look that he has been derelict in his duty and ought to be ashamed of himself.

"My dear friends, I think I can detect looks of sympathy on the faces before me. I think I can see mental resolutions to do your duty in future. My feelings in the matter almost oblige me to announce that another collection will be taken up as a fitting close to the meeting, but prudence bids me not to overdo a good thing. In order to prevent a stampede, in which numbers of you might be killed or injured, the collection will be dispensed with, but as you depart for your homes think the matter over seriously and earnestly. Extend your hand and it won't take ten years before the Indian will eat with a fork, pull wires at a ward caucus and promote trusts and syndicates for the benefit of mankind."

EDITORIAL OPINIONS FROM OLD WORLD AND NEW

Echo de Paris: "Rarely has Great Britain been seen to interfere with all her forces in a war between the peoples of the Continent. That only happens about once in a century, and when she has intervened the conflict has never terminated until the power which she was fighting for supremacy has been beaten and the equilibrium of Europe restored."

London Telegraph: "When nations are stirred to their depths they may be moved to frenzy by the song or the hymn which suddenly is found to be what, for fault of a better word, we call inspired. Happy is the army which goes on singing longest, for where there is song there is victory."

New York World: "It is to be a contest not so much between peoples and empires as between systems. It is British self-government, British sea power, British commerce and British wealth, world-wide in their extent, in a life-and-death struggle with consolidated German autocracy and militarism, which for forty years have burdened mankind with armaments and menaced it with war."

Manitoba Free Press: "It has been left to modern Germany, ruled over by an Emperor who claims a close alliance with the Almighty, to plunge the world back into barbarism and savagery. What the fury of the Huns did not seek to accomplish has been wrought for us by the withering, paralyzing hand of German militarism."

New York Times: "No voice or pen, however eloquent or gifted, can convince an impartial world of the justice of Germany's cause or change the rooted belief of right-thinking men that she is battling for ends, that, attained, would retard the advance of civilization and make the peace, the prosperity, and the happiness of the nations less secure."

Ottawa Free Press: "What is to be the end for Germany? Distress, whether she win or lose. If she loses, the crushing of her empire and her homes; if she wins, the maintenance of her overlordship by the despoiling, crushing militarism, the perpetual rule of the sword and the Krupp shell."

London Daily Telegraph: "On and by the sea we live; loss of its command means death to every British aspiration and interest. In the far flung Crown Colonies and Dependencies of the King eager, troubled hearts are chilled by the thought of what might happen to them if—banish the thought—disaster fell."

We are told that Eve was made from Adam's rib, but some of us really have an idea Adam lost his backbone.

"HUBBY," said young Mrs. Wombat brightly, "I think I'll give away your old winter suits. You'll never wear them again."

"Quite true, my dear. In fact, you might sell them, and thus earn a little pin money for yourself."

"No; I have tried that at various times with father's old clothing. The prices you get from old clothes men are not worth considering. Fifty cents for a suit that cost forty dollars is ridiculous. Such a suit would mean much to the janitor or to one of the elevator boys. They run a great many errands for me, and I prefer to see them get the benefit."

"I think you are right, my love," assented Mr. Wombat indulgently. "But, by the way"—

"Yes?"

"I wish you would save me one of those suits for a fishing suit."

"Very well."

"One of those winter suits will not be too heavy, as it gets quite cold in Maine."

"You are right. I'll save out a good suit and brush it nicely."

The suit was indeed nicely brushed and folded when Mr. Wombat came home that afternoon. He examined it and smiled.

"Did you give away all the other suits, my dear?" he inquired.

"Yes; but I saved the best for your fishing suit. It's your old dress suit, dear. What's the matter?" she added, as she noticed Mr. Wombat's somewhat wry smile. "Isn't it the thing for fishing?"

"Just the thing for fishing," declared Mr. Wombat, as he bore it away. "I always fish in a dress suit, pet."—Judge.

SHE chose him out of all the crowd
Of men that came and went.
His voice was low, his tie was loud,
But she was well content.

HELD IN TRUST

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Sailing from London for America my baggage was carried on board by a steward. One of my pieces—a wicker extension case—had no mark on it, but finding one exactly like mine I carried it to my stateroom.

I had no occasion to look into this case till we had been out half the voyage, or four days. When I did I met with a surprise. It was filled with articles used by a woman. Realizing that I had changed baggage with some one, I looked over the contents to discover a name or something by which I might return it to its owner and get mine. Here again I met with a surprise. I found no mark, but came upon numerous little boxes containing jewels which were evidently very valuable. Here was a subject for a job of thinking.

Had the lady placed the jewels there merely to convey them, or did this placing them in a frail and unlocked receptacle indicate that she intended to smuggle them into America? Had they come into my possession through an error, or was I to be used as the smuggler? All the thinking I did on the matter did not solve it. The only thing I could do was to go to the purser and if any one notified him of the loss of a wicker extension case to let me know. The ship having been out four days and no one having reported such a loss, the inference seemed to be either that the lady, supposing that she had her own case, had not examined its contents or—well, the only other supposition was that she would use me for a purpose. I must await developments.

The trip was a pleasant one to me, for I made some agreeable acquaintances. There were a Mrs. Harbeson and her daughter aboard, who sat a great deal on deck. A gentleman who was with them at times I met in the smoking room. We fell to talking one day about the run of the ship and thus became acquainted. Passing the ladies I have mentioned while he was with them, he made a remark to me which led to an introduction to his friends. The mother was quite cordial, but the daughter seemed a trifle ill at ease. However, since she was a pretty girl I labored to make myself entertaining and succeeded in doing away somewhat with her embarrassment or whatever it might be.

I was too circumspect to say a word to any one about my find. I left the jewels where they were in the case, which I shoved under my berth. Not knowing what trouble I might get into in the matter, I preferred, if accused, to be able to take any position that might be for the best. But my intention was to tell the truth.

The day before reaching port I concluded that I must take some action with reference to the goods, which I did not doubt had either been stolen or were to be smuggled, or both, and, going to my stateroom and locking the door, I pulled out the extension case and lifted the top. What was my astonishment to see that it contained my own belongings and did not contain any other property.

There was a mystery indeed. How the jewels came into my possession I did not know; how they left me I did not know. But it was evident that two exchanges had been made, and, the second one having been purposely accomplished, it was evident that some game was going on. But it seemed to me now that I should never receive an explanation of the incident. Nevertheless I felt relieved that the property had passed out of my possession. Indeed, I had about made up my mind before leaving the ship to turn it over to the purser.

The Harbesons, Mr. Etheridge, the man who introduced me to them, and I all made rapid progress in becoming intimate and before reaching port agreed that we should meet on the evening of our arrival for dinner at a certain uptown restaurant. We bid each other goodby at the dock at noon, and at 7, attired in dinner costume, I met my friends in a private dining room. I was received cordially, especially by the ladies, and after getting warmed up with wine Mrs. Harbeson said to me:

"I have something to tell you provided you will promise to take no advantage of it."

I looked at her sharply. It struck me at once that she knew something about my find on shipboard. I made the required promise.

"My daughter and I," said the lady, "have done a good deal of smuggling, not for profit, but to save money on what we bring from abroad. We stopped at the same hotel as you in London. Believing that we were suspected by a detective on the other side and having some $20,000 worth of jewels to get through the New York customs house free of duty, we were at our wits' end.

"My daughter, passing along a corridor, heard you order your baggage taken to the steamer. You left your room unlocked. She went in and saw your wicker case. We had its duplicate. She put the jewels in ours, carried it to your room and took yours away.

"On the ship we asked Mr. Etheridge to bring you and introduce you that we might the better keep track of one who held our property in trust, and it was he who made the second exchange. Having bad led the detective on the other side, we knew how to fool the customs men in New York."

SUMMER PASTIME

PLOT THICKENS

Each picture represents, by its meaning, some name of a player of lacrosse, baseball, soccer, Rugby or hockey. Names of such athletes have been chosen in order to make the game definite. But a name is a name. Study to-day's picture. A name will occur to you.

You can test the correctness of your judgment by referring to the Summer Pastime Handbook, which is guaranteed to contain the correct answer-names to the 75 rebus pictures in our series. The Handbook also includes seventy-five extra coupons. Price of the Handbook is twenty-five cents (or thirty, by mail).

The rules have been printed several times, and will soon be published again. One person may send in several sets of answers, and, if merited, may win one, two, three or four prizes.

Back pictures can be obtained free when purchasing the Handbook. Sufficient time will be allowed for compiling answers. Beginners may still enter. Summer Pastime is open to all and is being enjoyed by boys, girls, men and women.

DON'T FORGET THE LOGBOOK. You want to make the Judges' task as simple as possible; so help them by keeping your answers together in convenient, compact form. Also make things easier for yourself. USE THE LOGBOOK. The Participants' Logbook contains a full set of coupons (1 to 75), which you may use in place of the coupons you were originally required to clip from this newspaper. The Logbook also contains three sets of answer forms (from 26 to 75), being a continuation of the 3 sets (from 1 to 25) in the Handbook. Thus the Handbook and Logbook together give your complete entry of four sets of answers.

Handbook and Logbook cost 75 cents. Compare this sum with what it would cost you to obtain four copies of our newspaper for seventy-five days. Note the large cash saving.

You already know how important an aid to winning the Handbook is, aside from the extra coupons. By means of the Handbook you can find the correct names which are answers to the pictures.

The Logbook also has its especial advantage. It contains PLAIN CLUES to TWENTY REBUS PICTURES. Can you afford to miss this opportunity? Price of the Logbook is fifty cents.

THE OBSESSION.

We speak about Philosophy,
Discuss Professor James,
The Pragmatist, whose genial tongue
Materialism shames.
And then, of course, we mention Kant.
In Koenigsburg be dwelt,
That brings us to the fighting, and
The blow the Russians dealt.

We speak of literary art,
And with rejoicing, think
Of all the polished eloquence
Of Maurice Maeterlinck.
But ere his works we analyze,
We drop a silent tear,
Because this gallant Frenchman is
A marching Volunteer.

We speak of Music and its charm,
Its elegance and grace,
Of Chopin's tone-embroidery
As delicate as lace.
But Chopin was a Pole. His land
Produces gifted men,
Which brings us to consider Lodz
And talk of War again.

We speak of common household tasks
Like watering the grass.
That makes us think about the sea
And all the ships that pass.
That brings our mind to Beatty, and
His crew of gallant men,
There isn't any help for it,
We talk of War again.

OUR EARLIEST HUMORIST.

Sam Slick Was Born In Windsor, N.S., and Died In England.

Thomas Chandler Haliburton, popularly known as "Sam Slick," was for many years a judge in Nova Scotia. He was born in Windsor, N.S., in 1797 and at the age of twenty-three was admitted to the bar. In 1829 he was appointed chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and in 1840 became a judge of the Supreme Court. Two years later he resigned that office and removed to England where he afterwards resided. He died at Isleworth, nor far from London, in 1865. He is best known as the auther of a series of sketches satirising the New England character, which appeared first in a Nova Scotia paper and were subsequently (in 1837) collected and published in book form under the title of "The Clockmaker, or the Sayings and doings of Samuel Slick of Slickville." These were followed by a second series which appeared in 1838, and a third in 1840. The hero of these sketches is Sam Slick, a Yankee clockmaker and pedlar, who is a sort of American Sam Weller. His quaint drollery, unsophisticated wit, and aptitude in the use of what he calls "soft sawder" gained for him many admirers, though just how far the author succeeded in portraying the typical Yankee is a matter of opinion. One American critic says: "We can distinguish the real from the counterfeit Yankee at the first sound of the voice, and by the turn of a single sentence; and we have no hesitation in declaring that Sam Slick is not what he pretends to be; that there is no organic life in him; that he is an imposter, an impossibility, a nonentity." On the other hand the London Athenaeum asserts that "Sam Slick deserves to be entered on our list of friends, containing the names of Tristram Shandy, the shepherd of the Noctes Ambrosiaual, and other rhapsodical discourses on time and change, who, besides the delights of their discourses, possess also the charm of individuality." Judge Haliburton afterwards wrote "The Attache, or Sam Slick in England," in which British society is amusingly depicted. He is also the author of "An Historical and Statistical Account of Nova Scotia," "Bubbles of Canada," "The Old Judge, or Life in a Colony," "Letter-Bag of the Great Western," "Rule and Misrule of the English in America," "Yankee Stories," "Traits of American Humor," "Nature and Human Nature," "Letters to Lord Durham," and "Wise Saws and Modern Instances."

Distribution of Rams and Boars.

As the distribution of pure-bred stallions and bulls, 125 and 414 of which respectively have been located in different parts of the Dominion, has now been completed for the current year, it is announced that the Live Stock Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture will undertake a further distribution of pure-bred rams and boars during the months of August, September, and October next, to associations of farmers organised in districts in which the services of satisfactory breeding animals in these classes are not already available. Applications for rams and boars, a large number of which have already been received, should be made at an early date, as it will not be possible to consider those that are not made prior to Oct. 1st. Farmers desiring to secure the services of such stock should arrange to organize an association in their district and forward their applications.

Want German Trade.

A remarkable number of inquiries from Canadian manufacturers and others as to opportunities for profiting by the suspension of all German foreign trade indicates that this country is likely to benefit very considerably in this way. The Department of Trade and Commerce is preparing information on what Germany supplied this country and other foreign markets. Since the Government secured power from Parliament to fix the prices for the necessities of life, prices in certain localities have dropped somewhat.

A Real Cosmopolite.

Several Austrians and Germans were interview by the Toronto police recently regarding their future movements. One of them, a well-known business man, told the police that his father was French, and that he was born in Russia. He was a German reservist, and has relatives fighting in the Russian, French and German armies.

BRITAIN'S BEST FOR THE WAR!

The most striking soldiers now organizing in London for England's second army to go to war, are the Colonials. They are largely men from Canada, South Africa and Australia, who happen to be living in England. The men in the above picture are in training for a cavalry regiment. Note their splendid physique. Many of them have had actual experience in war. The officers are Canadians, notably Kaid Belton, who commanded the army that put Mulai Hadif on the Moroccan throne in 1908, and Major Norton Griffith (Empire Jack), who fought in the Boer War.

THE ONTARIO AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOW QUITE A VETERAN CONCERN

It was in 1874 that the Ontario Agricultural College first opened its doors to students. The forty years that have lapsed have been years of growth and years of service. Those who are familiar with the history of the institution would perhaps qualify this statement by dividing the forty years into two periods—the first twenty being years of struggle, the later twenty years of service and accomplishment.

It is not to be inferred from this that the earlier period was a record of inefficiency. There were dissensions on the staff and political enmity as well as indifference of the farmers generally, all tending to nullify the efforts of the few faithful workers. Students were not attracted in large numbers, but the practical side of farming was given a foremost place with the result that the merits of the institution gradually became recognized abroad. At one time it was considered the best institution of its kind in the world and its graduates were in demand to fill responsible positions in the United States. This appreciation from outside probably had some influence in bringing Ontario farmers round to a more favorable point of view until at the present time there is a close bond of fellowship between them and the professors at Guelph. There is now no real opposition to the expenditure of money for the support of the various departments.

It is doubtful, however, if the O. A. C. occupies as high a position relatively among agricultural colleges as it did twenty years ago. Especially during the last decade have other colleges been increasing their buildings, enlarging their teaching and scientific staffs and multiplying their agencies and their facilities to make them more useful to the people. The Ontario Agricultural College is so vital to the people of the whole of Canada that they cannot afford to allow it to stand still. There is on the college grounds at Guelph to-day a million dollar plant; but if the institution is to keep pace with the needs of the province this equipment must be materially increased.

The most striking thing about the Ontario Agricultural College is the beauty of the grounds and the fascinating landscape on every hand that meets and delights the eye. The splendid trees, the spacious lawns, well cultibated fields and the beautiful woodlots illustrate more vividly than words can describe how easy it is to work with Nature in enriching and glorifying the country. The college grounds are an object lesson that always make a lasting impression on the visitor. The trees, the shrubs, the flowers, the lawns, the orchards and gardens are all on a scale that only a Government institution can afford; but there is scarcely a tree, or shrub or flower growing there that could not be grown as well on almost any Ontario farm. If the people of the rural districts would only take this lesson to heart and put it into practice every farm in the country might be as beautiful in its way as are the college grounds. What this would mean in multiplying the happiness and contentment and in enriching the character of the rural dwellers of Ontario can scarcely be estimated. This fact was wisely emphasized by Dr. G. C. Creelman, the president of the college, during his address of welcome to the visitors.

There are several new buildings on the college grounds; but more are needed. A new dining hall for the men's residence is nearing completion. This building is most necessary as the old dining-room was inadequate. The dormitory accommodation is sadly in need of extension. Only the freshmen of the college are able to live in residence. The second, third and fourth year students have to find lodgings outside. The chief attraction of the college is thus destroyed. It will require a large sum of money to build and equip the residence so all the students taking regular courses may live within the college walls.

It is understood that the college is to receive $50,000 a year for several years from the Federal grant for the purpose of enlarging and completing its equipment. The new field husbandry building was the first to be erected from this grant. This is a beautiful brick structure 164 by 64 feet and from basement to attic is especially constructed to meet the requirements of the agronomy department. The two main floors provide offices, work rooms, investigation rooms, class rooms, etc., for both regular and short course classes. There is also an agricultural museum presenting some of the most important results of the experiments conducted by the field husbandry staff. The poultry department has also a new building that cost $25,000. It is a substantial two storey building 100 feet long and 63 feet wide. The basement of this building contains a boiler room, killing room, fattening room, store and repairing rooms. The upper floors are occupied by offices, class-rooms, laboratories, egg candling rooms, and exhibition rooms for live and dressed poultry. The erection of this building is indicative of the importance of the poultry industry in Ontario. The poultry plant is now reasonably well equipped to carry on its vital and rapidly expanding work. A new dairy barn was last year added to the equipment and has accommodation for 50 cows. After the residence for the men is enlarged to more adequate proportions it is hoped that a physics building and a building for the department of pomology may be erected.

The graduates of the Ontario Agricultural College and the University of Toronto have as investigators gone to scores of other colleges, universities and experiment stations and have not only made a record for themselves, but have brought the institutions in which they worked to the attention of the world; and yet, their own Alma Mater had not always had the means and facilities to do similar work. The wealth producing power of Ontario is not sufficiently realized. The subject of investigation in the various departments of the college and Experimental Farm is apparently a side-issue. If one wants expert advice on the thousand and one subjects that are embraced in the exceedingly comprehensive name agriculture one may get it at the college; but in many cases the information was actually secured and tabulated by a graduate of the O. A. C. working under a foreign flag. As a school of pedagogy, as a teaching institution and as a demonstration farm the college is splendid; but as an investigation station it is far short of ideal.

In field husbandry the college is now in possession of an equipment equal to any on the continent. There are seventy-five acres of land devoted entirely to experimental work with farm crops. The visitors to the college this season saw one hundred different plots of winter wheat, the three best being strains of the "American Banner," "American Wonder," and "Dawson's Golden Chaff." "Ontario Verigated" and "Sand Lucerne." There are six varieties of winter rye. The best yielder of grain and straw is the "Mammoth White."

The work of plant breeding in this department is intensely interesting. There are records on file of more than 100,000 plants that are hybrids and selections. The outstanding varieties of grain produced through the cross fertilization work are: "O.A.C. No. 21 barley," O.A.C. No. 72 oats," "O.A.C. No. 3 oats" (early); and "O.A.C. No. 61 rye."

One of the more valuable discoveries of the field husbandry staff is an annual pasture crop that will feed a cow in full milk flow or a mature steer per acre. On good soil and in a favorable season this crop will support one and a half animals per acre from 60 to 90 days in the hottest part of the summer season. The mixture should be sown on well cultivated soil—the richer the better—and should be put in during the first week of May. It will be ready to pasture in about six weeks. It consists of oats 51 pounds, Early Amber Sugarcane 30 pounds, and common red clover 7 pounds, or a total of 88 pounds per acre. The oats and sugarcane are mixed together in the ordinary way while the clover seed is sown in front of the drill. This crop has been grown with great success at the college for eight or nine years and throughout the dairy and beef raising districts of Ontario for four or five years. It has been the means of saving thousands of dollars to the farmers of the country who have for various reasons found themselves short of grass or other pasture crops. The mixture is estimated to be twice as valuable as the ordinary pasture crop. The oats grow rapidly in the early part of the season, then in the hot and dry months the sugarcane grows, while in the fall the clover keeps up the supply of pasture. The tramping of the cattle does not seem to injure the growth of the crop. In some instances the farmers of Western Ontario are substituting white sweet clover for the common red clover in this mixture.

One of the more recent developments of the work of the college is the department of pomology. This is under the direction of Prof. J. W. Crow. Orcharding, small fruit growing and vegetable gardening are the specialties embraced within the department's responsibilities. Prof. Crow not only teaches and practices economic horticulture, but assists fruit growers and vegetable growers in solving their problems, carries on co-operative fruit and vegetable growing and conducts experiments in plant breeding. He has a large number of experiments now in hand. These include experiments in apples, pears, strawberrries, currents and other fruits. Also experiments with indoor tomatoes, indoor cucumbers and in such crops as asparagus and rhubarb, both of which are important money-making crops for the market gardener. He is trying to get better varieties than those now used. In the green house were 700 seedling apple trees from the seeds of the Wealthy crossed with the Wagner; 500 trees of the Wealthy crossed with the McIntosh. He has 6,000 hybrid strawberry plants crosses from the best Canadian, American and English varieties. It is certain that this department will be heard from in the future. Fruit and vegetable growing in Ontario has a brilliant future. There are thousands of acres of fruit land that are still utilized for the production of ordinary farm crops. This land will gradually come under more extensive tillage and will treble in value. The area in this country that will grow fruit and vegetable crops successfully is limited by the climate. Southern Ontario is certain to be called on in the years to come to supply the enormous demand of a rapidly expanding population. The call to men of intelligence and skill to turn their attention and their money to fruit and vegetable production is loud and clear and strong. There is yet a great deal to learn about our climate, much more about our soils and a wide open field for investigation in producing varieties suitable to our needs. Will the college lead the way?—W. Good Excuse.

A hunter over in the mountains once had a dinner with a querulous old fellow who was complaining about hard times. "Why, man," said the Nimrod, "you ought to be able to make lots of money growing and shipping potatoes to market."

"Yes, I orter," was the sullen reply.

"You have the land, I suppose, and can get the seed."

"Yes, I guess so."

"Then why don't you go into the business?"

ATTACKS BY GERMANS ARE REPULSED

CHOLERA IN GERMANY---MINE DESTROYS JAPANESE BOAT---HEROIC FIGHTING OF THE PRUSSIAN GUARDS

PARIS ANNOUNCES ALLIES HAVE REPULSED GERMANS INCLUDING CROWN PRINCE

BRITISH PEOPLE RECONCILED TO LONG AND TERRIBLE STRUGGLE

Germans When Driven Back After Termination of Aisne Battle Will Continue Fight From Equally Strong Entrenchments

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 3.—The official announcement issued this afternoon, declares that a violent attack of the Germans at Roye, has been repulsed by the allies.

The text of the official statement to-day follows: "First, on our left wing the violent action which has been progressing since yesterday, continues without interruption, particularly in the region of Roye, where we have repulsed all attacks, although upon this part of the front the enemy has been reinforced by new additions taken from the enemy's centre, as has been previously noted.

"Second—On the centre, nothing is to be noted from Rheims to the Argonne region. In the Argonne district the Sixteenth German Corps (the army of the Crown Prince), which had attempted to slip by through the woods of Grurole, has been driven back toward the north."

London, Oct. 3.—Though the German right is less than 50 miles from the Belgian frontier, never since the outbreak of the war, apparently, have the people of Great Britain been more reconciled to the idea that the struggle yet to come will be long and terrible.

When the Germans first began to retreat, after their rush toward Paris, hope ran high that some master-stroke would bring a complete rout to the invaders. Now, however, many observers emphasize that, even should the so-called battle of the Aisne be terminated, the Germans would only fall back on equally strong entrenchments.

GERMAN FORTS SHELL JAPANESE ARMY.

Tokio, Oct. 3.—An official announcement states that another mine sweeping boat at Kiau Chow has been sunk after striking a mine. The casualties are given as four killed and nine wounded. The mine dragger was known as the Kayo Maru.

German forts and ships are constantly shelling the Japanese army, which is slowly preparing for a big assault on Tsing Tau.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT AGAINST AUSTRIA.

Venice, Oct. 3.—A report has reached here of the sinking of another Italian boat and the death of her crew of 50 men at a point near Trieste, as a result of coming in contact with a floating mine.

There is a larm all along the Italian coast at the presence of Austrian mines. Water traffic with Austria has been suspended and goods destined for Austrian ports is being abandoned on the docks.

London, Oct. 3.—The North German Gazette admits the appearance of cholera in German, as well as in Austria, says a Rome despatch to Reuter, but assures the public that the outbreak is well in hand.

KING CHARLES VERY ILL, BUT—

Rome, Oct. 3.—A despatch to Giornale d'Italia from Sofia says the condition of King Charles of Roumania has suddenly become worse. The doctor's bulletin to-day declares he must have absolute quiet in order to save his life.

The well-informed. however, believe the King's illness is really a political step, whose aim is to end popular agitation to have Roumania join forces against Germany.

AUSTRIAN FIELD MARSHAL REPORTS PROGRESS.

Vienna, Oct. 3.—An official communication signed by Field Marshal Potiorek has been given out. It says: "Up to the present, our offensive movements of the past two days against the Servians, who are strongly fortified in positions protected with barbed wire entanglements, have proceeded slowly, but favorably."

The announcement from Servia concerning the annhilation of the 40tht division of the Hungarian Honved, is proof of the vivid imagination of the Servians. This division, as the Servians have had repeated opportunity to learn, is in the best of condition at the battlefront.

VON KLUK IN DIRE STRAITS

Heavy Reinforcements Saved Army From Disaster

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Oct. 3.—Dow Jones & Co.'s Wall Street news agency put out the following to-day: "Bordeaux—Minister of War Millerand declared to-day that only the steady arrival of heavy reinforcements had averted disaster for the army of General Von Kink and the entire right wing of the German army.

"He said that early in the week the forces of General Von Kluk were in desperate straits and that part of them had been forced to withdraw from advanced positions to a point northeast of St. Quentin, by a raid by French cavalry."

PASSENGERS ASKED TO LEAVE TRAIN TO WATCH ENGLISH PRISONERS

Miss Killmaster Relates Some of Her Experiences, in Kaiser's Country

Miss Killmaster of the Conservatory of Music staff returned to the city yesterday after an extended trip on the Continent. She, in company with Miss Topping, late of New York, was in Berlin when Austria declared war on Servia, and they were detained in that momentous city until about the time Germany made the unsuccessful march on Paris. They were enabled to leave Berlin by obtaining emergency passports from the American Consul, besides telegraphing Holland for permission to enter that country. Miss Killmaster and her companion left Berlin amidst a scene all too familiar to readers of present day history, and arrived in Flushing, Holland; from there they went to Folkstone, England, later sailing from Glasgow, Scotland, for New York, where they arrived on Monday.

Miss Killmaster and Miss Topping, of course, were Americans, and this coupled with an excellent command of the German language, enabled them in having less difficulty in leaving Germany.

Little News of Defeat.

Very little news of defeats to the German army is heard in Berlin but a victory for Germany is cried from one end of the land to the other.

When leaving the capital both young ladies were forced to leave all their baggage, with the exception of one or two small bags in which they carried actual necessities of travellers. At a station in Germany the passengers on a train were asked to get out on the platform and witness a trainload of English prisoners pass by. Such instances as these are but common in Germany, in the easily fathomed brave front the Kaiser is putting up both to his people and to the enemy.

Both Miss Killmaster and her companion were pleased to return to a peaceful country after such trying scenes of a country at war.

Miss Killmaster visited Miss Gladys Seward, formerly of Peterboro, whose success in the musical world is well known to this city. She is at present in the making of a highly successful musical career in Germany.

REGIMENT OF PRUSSIAN GUARDS WENT TO DEATH FIGHTING DESPERATELY

Threw Themselves Against French Cavalry Five Times To Save Main Body --- Guards Loss Placed at 3000 Men

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 3.—"Details are just available of the heroic engagement of the Prussian Guards at Suippes a fortnight ago," says the Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail. "It arose out of a German attempt to cut the railway connecting Rheims and Verdun. This attempt failed, and the Germans were in danger of being caught between French infantry and cavalry. It was at this moment, while the greater part of the German troops were retiring in the direction of Rheims, that a regiment of the Prussian Guards threw itself desperately upon the lines of French cavalry.

"Five times did this devoted regiment hurl itself against the solid French front. After the fifth charge there were only a hundred men left surrounding the flag. With signs of reluctance, they gave the signal of surrender, and it was then found that nearly all of the hundred were wounded.

"In this engagement the Guards lost 3,000 men, it is stated."

AMERICAN BOAT SUNK.

San Francisco, Oct. 3.—The Union oil tanker Elsinore was sunk by the German cruiser Leipsig off the coast of Chile on September 15, and the crew landed on the Galapagos Islands, off the coast of Ecuador.

The Elsinore, which is of British registry, though American-owned, was in ballast, bound north for Port San Luis, California. The news was received here to-day from Valparaiso in a cable to the Union Oil Co.

PEARL SUNBURST FOR MRS. TAYLOR

In Appreciation of Her Efforts as W.C.T.U. President

Yesterday evening the members of the W.C.T.U. assembled at the residence of the President, Mrs. T. W. Whalley, Boswell Ave., and presented the retiring president, Mrs. Wilson Taylor, with a beautiful sunburst of pearls and the following address:

Dear Mrs. Taylor,—We, the members of the W.C.T.U. of this city, feel we cannot let you leave us without presenting some token of our appreciation of your efforts in the interests of our loved white ribbon work, "for God and Home and Every Land." So we ask you to accept this little gift, not for its intrinsic value but for the love that goes with it from all our hearts.

Our union needed just what you have given us and we are sure we shall always do better work because of your sojourn with us.

'You bear a lamp of Hope,

BIG TASK IS ACCOMPLISHED

British and French Troops Feel That They Have Succeeded in Their Work and Although German Attacks Continue Victory For the Allies is in Sight---Not a German Left of the Meuse.

ON THE BATTLEFRONT, Oct. 3.—(Via Paris.)—A thrill was in the air all along the extended allied lines to-day. The French and British troops, who have been over a fortnight in the closest contact with the Germans, felt that they had accomplished their hard task of preventing the Germans breaking through the human barrier erected between them and their main objective, Paris, and that this meant eventual victory for the allies.

The following communication was issued last night by the French War Office:

"First—On our left wing one of our detachments which came out of Arras (a fortified town and capital of the Department of Pas-de-Calais) has fallen back a little toward the east and north of that city.

"North of the Somme we have made progress in front of Albert. Between Roye and Lassigny the enemy has directed violent attacks, which have broken against our resistance.

"Second—Quiet prevails along the rest of the front. It is reported that in the neighborhood of St. Mihiel (Department of Meuse, twenty miles southeast of Verdun) there remains no enemy on the left bank of the Meuse."

The fury of the German onslaught was unabated yesterday, especially on the western wing, but their every effort was met with vigorous resistance by the allies, who seemed to vie with each other in throwing all their strength and courage against the attackers.

The scene of the most violent attacks changes day by day. The Germans, finding it impossible to penetrate the allied lines in the vicinity of Rheims and Soissons, quickly transported many of their divisions farther northwest and yesterday hurled them against Roye. Again they failed, although last night they had not ceased their efforts to batter down the resistance.

Spies are so numerous along the front that orders have been issued stating that any German in civilian dress encountered will be considered a spy, and those furnishing him with clothes will be regarded as accomplices. Germans who do not surrender on the first summons to do so will be executed. The order says that any group of more than three armed Germans found behind the allies' lines will be considered as ghouls and shot while every person found committing robberies on the battlefields, whether civilian or soldier, will be court-martialled.

Fight Three Weeks Old.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The battle of the Aisne, as it is still called, although the armies contending in it have spread far beyond that river, has been in progress just three weeks now, and no decision has yet been reached. The reports coming from Paris earlier in the week that the results of the allies' operations were about to be attained were premature, and from all appearances there must be more hard fighting before either side gives way.

The heaviest blows are being given and taken in the western area, where, according to yesterday's French official communication, an extremely violent battle continues, especially in the Roye district, where the Germans have concentrated considerable forces. The communication added that the action was extending more and more northward, and that the fighting front now extended to the district south of Arras.

This, apparently, was a modest account of the northward advance of the French, for private telegrams received in London last night announced that the French actually had reached Arras. Stubborn resistance is being offered by the Germans in the vicinity of Roye, where earlier in the week they succeeded in occupying the heights, which, however, they later were compelled to give up.

Along the front from the Oise to the Meuse rivers, according to the French report, only partial operations have been attempted by either side. Frontal attacks by the allies have, as a matter of fact, been discontinued, while the flanks are fighting for ascendancy.

On the allies' right the Germans have made another attempt to cross the Meuse at St. Mihiel, where they got across last week. The German attempt to regain this ground, which they had abandoned when threatened on their flank by troops from Toul, was made Thursday, when they tried to throw a bridge across the river. The bridge, however, according to the French report, was destroyed during the night.

Although figures are naturally withheld, it is learned in Paris that during the last two days the army of Gen. D'Amade, which commands the extreme left of the French position, has been reinforced by nearly three army corps (about 120,000 men), so that it has been possible to extend this line very nearly to the Belgian border. As a matter of fact, the French are in touch with the Belgian forces, who have been operating irregularly in the west of Belgium and with the British base at Ostend.

OBJECTS OF CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

The following are the objects for which the Canadian Patriotic Fund was organized:

"To collect, administer and distribute the fund hereinbefore mentioned, for the assistance, in case of need, of the wives, children and dependent relatives of officers and men, residents of Canada, who, during the present war, may be on active service with the naval and military forces of the British Empire and Great Britain's allies."

CITY DISCLAIMS LIABILITY FOR THREE HOSPITAL CAS

The finance committee met last evening, there being present Ald. Anderson (chairman), Ald. Duncan, Langford and Green.

A communication was read from St. Joseph's hospital, stating that three persons had been admitted to that institution as patients. The committee decided that the parties mentioned are not indigents, and the city is not liable for their hospital bills.

A letter was received from the inspector of public charities saying that Antonio Mascaro had been admitted to an asylum and was a resident of this city. The city solicitor was authorized to make a search to ascertain if Mascaro owns property here.

The meeting was the [illegible] which Ald. Anderson [illegible] At the meeting of [illegible] Monday evening [illegible] be submitted and [illegible] accepted.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1914

ONTARIO'S NEW PREMIER.

THE NEW PREMIER of Ontario is the Hon. W. H. Hearst. He is a new man, practically unknown in the political sense in which he must henceforth be regarded. He has no sins for which apologies are in order. He has the future before him, with a fine reserve of physical energy. His training in the legal profession and in the Legislature, during the few years he has been a member of that body, are distinct advantages to a man chosen to lead a political party. He has been recognized generally as a man of promise, and be assured, there are problems of a magnitude so great in the politics of this province that they require a man of first rank capacity. Mr. Hearst's elevation to the leadership of the legislature is like the entry of a strange knight displaying no device, in the lists of a tourney. Public opinion is much interested in the new man; it knows not where or how to place him, and watches his actions closely and eagerly to arrive at some basis of pigeon-holing its man. Mr. Hearst has therefore to win his spurs.

As to the manner of his appointment, that is open to criticism. It is a significant fact that the press on both sides of politics have pretty generally condemned the hole-in-corner process. Mr. Hearst got his position, not from a caucus of the party, but from the seats of the mighty. However, when all the circumstances are considered, the choice was, we think, a good one, and possibly a caucus under prevailing conditions would have been fatal to a smooth settlement of the difficulty. The choice has been made; we now look to Mr. Hearst to discharge the duties of his high office in a manner fitting its dignity and trust. We hope he will dominate the policy of the government with his own personality, for, if it becomes a Hanna, or Beck, or Cochrane regime, disaster will come. There cannot be two leaders if the Conservative party is to govern this province as it should. One man must be in control of affairs.

The road is clear, the problems are not obscure, the Cabinet is able, the party strong. Give Ontario good government, and press and people will not swerve in their allegiance to the new leader.

A SUMMING UP.

IT IS CREDITABLE to the intelligence and courage of the press of the United States, says the Hamilton Herald, that it has been so little affected by the campaign which has been organized in that country for the purpose of winning public sympathy for Germany. This pro-German campaign is exceedingly thorough. Strong pressure and many influences have been brought to bear on American newspapers to cajole or coerce them into becoming apologists of the German cause. Some, for business reasons, have succumbed; but almost all the great newspapers have dared and still dare to print the truth, and to say what they think. Almost all of them agree in the opinion that the war was deliberately planned and provoked by the German war party and is indeed the fruit of German militarism.

One of the most impressive testimonies that has appeared in any American periodical with regard to the origin of the war is an editorial article in the current number of the Outlook. This weekly periodical has from the first, in its discussion of subjects relating to the war, been studiously fair. It has invited and published articles from leading German-Americans, presenting the German view. Its own utterances have been cautious and temperate. At length it has set forth its deliberate conclusions. In an article entitled "Who Is Responsible?" the Outlook gives an impartial summary of the official correspondence during the ten days preceding the commencement of hostilities, as contained in the German White Book and the British White Paper. In the latter the correspondence is given without a word of note or comment—the correspondence speaks for itself. The former consists of extracts from the official correspondence (such extracts as the German foreign department wished to be made public), accompanied by laboured arguments and special pleas in defence of Germany's case. After making a careful study and summary of all of these documents, the Outlook arrives at these conclusions:

> First: We do not believe that any lover of peace in America who will plead for peace on October 4th (the day set apart by President Wilson as a day of prayer for peace) has begun to do as much for the world's peace as Sir Edward Grey did during those eventful days, and we think it will be difficult to find in history any man who has better earned the right to be enrolled among the world's peace-makers.
> Second: Mere arrangements for securing peace are useless unless there is in those who control the government of the nations a sincere desire to take advantage of those arrangements. The arrangement for securing peace in July, 1914, was all that could be desired — a reference of the charges of Austria against Serivа to either The Hague tribunal or to an independent conference of the four great powers. Either of these references would have secured something like an impartial adjudication of those charges. The refusal of Austria to accept such adjudication was the prime cause of the war. The support which Germany gave to Austria in maintaining that persistent refusal in the face of persuasions by England, France, Italy and Russia, was the secondary cause of the war. History will hold Austria-Hungary and Germany responsible for the terrible tragedy which is now spreading desolation throughout Europe.

It is certain that history will hold the governments of the two Germanic powers responsible for the war. But the strong probability is that history will reverse the primary and secondary causes as mentioned by the Outlook. When all the facts are revealed it will probably be demonstrated that the government of Austria-Hungary acted not merely in collusion with, but as the instrument of, the government at Berlin.

EGYPT'S COTTON ACREAGE.

TO SAVE the Egyptian cotton crop from being sacrificed by war prices, the Egyptian Colonial Government has decreed a reduction of forty-two per cent. in the cotton acreage of the lower valley of the Nile next year. Egyptian cotton has fallen ten cents a pound in price since the war broke out, and the authorities intend to save the native farmers from the folly of planting another large crop.

While British pro-consul in Egypt, Lord Kitchener proved his skill as an administrator by carrying on the good work begun by Lord Cromer. Cotton growing in the Delta of the Nile was fostered in every possible way, and the area under cultivation was greatly extended. Most of the farmers lease their land from the government, and all of them depend upon it for water to irrigate crops in that rainless territory. These farmers will have to do just what they are told, or they will get no water, and many of them will lose their farms; so the task of reducing the cotton acreage will be easy. Paternal despotism has its uses at times, and the Egyptian farmers will grow crops they can eat or sell at remunerative prices instead of working blindly and depressing the price of their cotton to the starvation point.

This news of the reduction of the Egyptian cotton acreage is of vital importance. The British Government is primarily responsible for it, and those now in office in London are usually influenced by the wishes of the Lancashire spinners who always cry for cheaper and yet cheaper raw cotton. When the British Government takes steps to check a further decline in the price of Egyptian cotton the outlook must be bad. It takes an emergency to make a Liberal government disregard the wishes of Lancashire.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT SEEMS to us that that $12,000 job will look good to Hon. Mackenzie King, who has been out in the cold since that eventful day in September, 1911. A comfortable salary is usually better than a starving reputation.

ALREADY Canada is reaping some of the present war's compensations. A large Toronto concern has placed an order with a Hamilton lithographing firm for some millions of can labels that were printed formerly in Germany. However, to make any perceptible change for the better in trade conditions, such orders will need to come the way of a good many different manufacturing concerns.

WHILE we are at it, we might say that the idea in the cartoon in Saturday Night of the Militia Department was perfect, but the execution was abominable. New York Life some time ago had a similar cartoon referring to Roosevelt, which was not only not offensive, but quite humorous—strange to say.

AS WE do not feel like improving it, we print the following words of wisdom from Toronto Saturday Night: As we understand the economic conditions, the choice for young men is to go to the front and get glory or stay at home and get tired.

CANADA'S SWORD.

(Ralph Connor.)

O Canada! A voice calls through the mist and spume
Across the wide, wet, salty leagues of foam
For aid. Whose voice thus penetrates thy peace?
Whose? Thy mother's, Canada, thy mother's voice!

O Canada! A drum beats through the night and day,
Unresting, eager, strident, summoning
To arms. Whose drum thus throbs persistent?
Whose? Old England's, Canada, Old England's drum!

O Canada! A sword gleams leaping swift to strike
At foes that press and leap to kill brave men
On guard. Whose sword thus gleams fierce death?
Whose? 'Tis Britain's, Canada, Great Britain's sword!

O Canada! A prayer beats hard at heaven's gate,
Tearing the heart wide open to God's eye,
For righteousness. Whose prayer thus pierces heaven?
Whose? 'Tis God's prayer, Canada, Thy Kingdom come!

O Canada! What answer make to calling voice and beating drum,
To sword flash and to pleading prayer of God
For right? What answer makes thy soul?
"Mother, to thee! God, to Thy help! Quick! my sword!"

A Demonstrated Fact.

(Philadelphia Public Ledger.)

It is not the spirit of Goethe, it is not the spirit of Treitschke, which has influenced German opinion and directed German culture in the present generation. Admitting that the German people did not want war, admitting even that the German emperor has on occasion avoided war, the fact remains that it was Germany that compelled in this instance the final arbitrament of the sword.

Merit Unrewarded.

(Montreal Star.)

If the Kaiser doesn't hurry up and decorate Count von Bernstorff with an iron cross for his startling achievement in winning the liars' championship, well, it simply means that merit in this world is no longer rewarded, that's all.

A Necessary Qualification.

(New York Sun.)

Suitor—I want to marry your daughter.

Father—Can you divorce her in the manner to which she has been accustomed?

PEACE

By Walt Mason

If things were right, we'd never fight to add to our dominions; the dove of peace would never cease to wave its snowy pinions. We would abhor the game of war, detest the sight of battle; with scythe and flail we'd earn the kale where now the sabres rattle. The ages scoot, and man's a brute, and culture is a fable, and to our shame we're much the same as Cain, who butchered Abel. Our grace, I fear, is but veneer, and when you scratch it, you find a wretch who longs to fetch you three licks with a hatchet. The lessons dire of nations' ire we carelessly are spurning; two thousand years of blood and tears, and yet we're nothing learning! If we were wise we'd all arise and can the fierce battalions, so busy now, and to the plow we'd hitch their pawing stallions. It could be done, peace could be won, if all would work to gain it, with voice and pen, again, again, expound it and explain it. Too long the harps of poet sharps have boosted blood and battle, exalted knights who yearn for fights, and all that sort of cattle. Now let us sing of peave, by jing, of home and happy labor, and let us show that spade or hoe is nobler than the sabre.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

VILLAGE-LIKE.

Editor Review:

Sir,—Much is said and money is spent in beautifying and making our city up-to-date. A stranger takes a walk around the principal parts of our city to see the sights; he halts on the corner of Brock and Aylmer. He is told he is within three minutes' walk of the postoffice, and within a stone's throw of the residences of many doctors and leading citizens of our city. He looks on either side of him and, behold, two large, unsightly billboards and a vacant lot grown full of burdocks about three feet high, ripe, all ready to harvest, but no harvester. He asks why things are in this wild state. This is a violation of law to allow weeds to grow anywhere. This looks like the outskirts of a little village away back in Muskoka. Why is it so, especially on a street we are now paving?

The only answer that could be given was this: The owner of this lot is a wealthy citizen. If it was owned by a poor man or the money had to come out of the city treasury to pay the cost, it is more than likely the law would have been enforced, and this brown harvest of burs would not appear as it does.

A QUESTION.

Editor Review:

Sir,—The Boston Globe says: "The European war is demonstrating that, after all, civilization is only veneer, and when it is hacked away there stands the savage with devilish, up-to-date cunning." Are we to suppose that this applies to the Ministerial Association?

Yours truly,
READER.

GOODS MADE IN CANADA.

Editor Review:

Sir,—I see in the windows of both Grit and Tory alike the printed appeal to the people to buy goods made in Canada. If Free Trade were proper for the country, that is, if it were right to buy in the cheapest market of the world and to sell in the dearest, as Free Traders love to say, it would be a crime to do as they are now asking us. This request is as much in line with the principle of protection as any other feature of protection. While I am writing, let me call your attention to another fact, and that is this, protection can really be made to protect without any injury being done to anybody. In other words, it can be made an unalloyed benefit. I will give you a simple instance. Let us suppose that we put a 100 per cent. duty on everything imported into the country. This makes no distinction, and all classes and kinds are treated alike. Here we have prohibitive protection, and yet no distinction made between one class of people and another. It is true that a good thing may be made to go wrong, and so it is with protection, but that is wholly in the power of the people themselves, and they can stop it at any time. It is not so with Free Trade. Free Trade means the triumph of the strong over the weak. It means that those with capital have the world for their market, and that local producers, whether of work or products, are at the mercy of the negro labor of Africa and the Chinese labor of that great empire. Free Trade puts the people on a level with the cheapest producers in the world, and they are those who have the cheapest labor. Money does not suffer, because it is the same the world over. Protection prevents all this and enables a nation to maintain as high a standard as it likes, and it can be so if, like Canada, it is a country that lacks nothing within itself.

Yours,
CITIZEN.

PARE DOWN THE SALARIES.

Editor Review:

Sir,—I saw a communication in your paper some time ago stating that at least some of the factories had reduced the workmen's wages twenty per cent., on account of the war, and made the suggestion that in order to even up matters and provide for the needy, made so by the war, the council should deduct a similar percentage from the high salaries of their employes. If they would only reduce these salaries, say, ten per cent., it would lessen the taxes on the poor man and add to the relief of the suffering caused by the war during its continuance. There are others who should share in the reduction for the term commencing and ending with the war; for instance, the Ministerial Association, who are undoubtedly patriotic, should take into consideration a reduction of their salaries and set the ball rolling. The poor man, generally, has done his duty nobly, but I am afraid that most of our rich men have been impervious to their responsibilities.

Yours truly,
FAIR PLAY.

HOLLAND SOLVES TROUBLE.

He Will Not Allow Any Goods To Be Exported To Germany.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Holland has given assurance that it will prevent the exportation of foodstuffs from Holland to Germany or to other countries now at war.

This action by the Dutch Government greatly simplifies the differences which have arisen concerning cargoes of food destined for the Netherlands, and makes it possible for the British Government to cease the seizure and investigation of cargoes of foodstuffs consigned to Dutch dealers.

The decision will eliminate also the friction caused by the seizure of foodstuffs bound from the United States to Rotterdam, and is described as gratifying both to the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, and the American Ambassador, who have been conferring daily as to what shipments may be properly considered contraband. A great percentage of the American exports to Holland is wheat and other foodstuffs, the status of which is now thoroughly defined.

THREE JUDGES DEAD.

Paris Bench and Bar Has Suffered Heavily In War.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The French Bar has suffered the fortunes of war. In opening the sessions of the courts yesterday the public prosecutor, Jules Herbaux, announced that three judges of the Paris bench had been killed, while a list of dead issued by the War Office contained the names of many lawyers, among them being a large number of young men who had already entered on brilliant careers and whose futures seemed full of promise.

Justice Blondel, the public prosecutor said, fell in the fighting at the Meuse, Justice Matillon was killed at the Aisne and Justice Perlange was mortally wounded in a recent engagement.

War May Solve Problem.

LONDON, Oct. 3. — Sir Edward Carson, speaking in Ulster, said though Home Rule was now on the statute book, the act was not worth the paper it was printed on. Ulstermen, having helped the Empire in the present emergency, would never be asked to go under the government they so detested. The present war might prove the solution of the Irish troubles.

Seventy-Five Millions In Bonds.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Tenders will be received by the Bank of England on Wednesday next for treasury bills to the amount of $75,000,000, in amounts of $5,000, $25,000 and $50,000. The bills will be dated Oct. 10, and will be payable in six months.

Cabinet Sworn In.

TORONTO, Oct. 3.—The Ontario Government is once more ready to resume business under a new directorate, the new members of the Cabinet and Premier Hearst having been sworn in yesterday. The whole morning was devoted to the ceremonies necessary to the taking up of the reins of Cabinet office by new officials, and at the end a social function, presided over by the Premier and Lieut.-Governor Hendrie, was held for an hour in the council rooms. This resolved itself into a period of congratulations and well wishes to the administration on the part of the guests.

Zeppelin To the Front.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Count Zeppelin is declared to have passed through Essen on route to the front, where he will direct the operation of the Zeppelins, according to a news agency despatch from Amsterdam.

Mr. Perkin's Lawn Mower

By M. QUAD

Mr. and Mrs. Perkins had been sitting on the front steps of their home for ten minutes when she carelessly queried:

"Mr. Perkins, please turn to that diary of yours and see what you find recorded under date of Feb. 20."

"With pleasure, Mrs. Perkins. Are you on track of something?"

"Just a little something."

"Well, here's the date."

"Do you find anything about a lawn mower?"

"I do. It says that I will either have a lawn mower before the 1st of April or perish in the attempt."

"Is it the 1st of April?"

"Oh, yes."

"Have you got the lawn mower yet?"

"Not yet."

"I didn't know but that you had it hidden away in a coattail pocket and was going to bring it out and surprise me. They have been mowing their lawns all around us."

"Mrs. Perkins," he said after drawing a long breath, "I owe an explanation."

"Not in the least, Mr. Perkins. That is simply your way of doing business."

"On the evening of Feb. 20, when I uttered the words recorded here, I fully and firmly meant to purchase a lawn mower of the latest pattern at an early date in the spring."

"Poor man!"

"But it so happened that I got hold of some vital statistics in a newspaper."

"How terrible!"

"There was a list of deaths by heart failure. It numbered hundreds."

"And you did not want to die of heart failure?"

"I had no great longing to. I went to our family doctor and put the case up to him, and he shouted at me:

" 'Perkins, are you a born fool?'

" 'No.'

" 'Then don't talk about pushing a lawn mower around. With your heart the way it is it would mean sure death to you.' "

"While if you continued to simply play poker you might live a hundred years," said Mrs. Perkins.

"Come, come, my dear—this is not a matter for sarcasm. There are other risks besides heart failure."

"Sweating your collar is one."

"Suppose that some enemy of mine throws a bomb amid the grass and I run the mower against it?"

"Awful! Awful!"

"Mrs. Perkins, I am afraid that you don't understand the situation. In Albany last week as an eminent citizen was mowing his lawn there was a sudden explosion."

"But don't they generally come suddenly?"

"There was a sudden explosion, and he was killed dead."

"Poor man! He shouldn't have been killed more than half dead! Go on, Mr. Perkins. Did the boiler of the lawn mower burst, or did some one fire a cannon at him?"

"The machinery got heated up, I believe. He was pushing it too fast."

"A thing that could never happen to you, Mr. Perkins."

"And, again, at Syracuse a man who was lawn mowing was struck dead by a thunderbolt."

"He must have had a nickel in his pocket to attract it."

"And so, Mrs. Perkins, with all these warnings hanging over me I thought it best"—

"Not to get a mower, of course."

"Something that way, my dear."

"And not to hire a man to come with his own mower?"

"Have I the right to subject him to such risks?"

"Of course not. Just let the grass grow as high as the fence—as high as the trees. We shall want to camp out there a little later. And the higher the grass the less of the house you see."

"Mrs. Perkins, you are inclined to acrimony," said Mr. Perkins.

"Grass seven feet high will probably help it. If you were to use a sickle or scythe on the lawn would it give you heart failure?"

"I spoke of that to the doctor. He said he wasn't sure about it, but would look up the matter and report."

"And when can we look for this report?"

"By December or January. He is a very busy man, you know."

"Yes, I know, and so are you. Mr. Perkins, how much oil does a lawn mower consume in a day?"

"About a gallon."

"And what is the cost?"

"A dollar and a half."

"But why didn't you use this as an argument?"

"I knew I had forgotten something."

"And you had forgotten the fact. A mower won't last over a month, will it?"

"About a month."

"And then it must be thrown away! Why didn't you make that statement to strengthen your case?"

"I wish to add it now."

"You would have to hire a garage to stable it in, wouldn't you?"

"By John! Yes."

"Mr. Perkins," said Mrs. Perkins as she rose up to go in, "we won't have a lawn mower. It is too dangerous and costly. We won't have a sickle nor yet a scythe. We won't meddle with the lawn."

"But"—

"Oh, just write down in that diary that in a couple of years you'll buy and bring home a five cent tack hammer and we'll consider the subject closed."

Pleased to Recommend Baby's Own Tablets

Points for Mothers

What Children Should Eat.

"The best meats for children of all ages are crisp bacon, broiled and roast beef, lamb, mutton, chicken and white fish. If meat broths are used it should be remembered that they are valuable chiefly as stimulants and contain very little food substance," declares Miss Cora E. Binzel, instructor in the extension division of the University of Wisconsin.

"Between the fifth and tenth years the diet should still include a large amount of milk. New foods are gradually added until the child is eating practically the same food as the adults of the family. A well mixed diet, including a reasonable amount of vegetables and well ripened fruits, is always desirable. Individual preferences cannot always be overcome, but careful training will do much toward cultivating a taste for all kinds of food.

"In the adolescent period the large amount of food needed makes it important that it be of an easily digested kind, simple and rich in protein and mineral salts. The average active boy of fourteen will need quite as much food during the day as a grown man of sedentary habits.

"Egg lemonade, made with two yolks to a glass, is a valuable addition to the diet of the girl in her teens if she is pale and undernourished."

Teaching Baby to Walk.

Do not try to teach a baby to walk. As soon as its leg bones are strong enough it will stand and toddle of its own accord. You can, of course, guide it, but do not set it on its feet and make it stand and lead it by the hand when it doesn't want to go.

It is pitiable to see a weak legged little creature pulled along by the hand when its heavy body has no firm support from its frail legs and its mother or nurse is under the delusion that by making it walk thus she is strengthening its limbs.

Instead of this she is letting the child run the serious risk of being permanently deformed. It is thus that bow legs are formed.

The child should take exercise rolling and kicking on a rug. It may have its legs massaged twice a day with salt and water, but should have only as much exercise on its legs as it wishes to take.

Picturesque Garb For Boys.

The small boy just exalted to trouser suits signifies an appreciation for picturesque effects by wearing Oliver Twist raiment, comprising a pair of knickerbockers fastened on a blouse, the whole displaying a far more generous use of material than poor Oliver's scanty clothes did.

Many mothers, however, still prefer the belted tunic and knickerbockers of time honored use, thinking that it suits the rotund figures of their young sons better than the new kind of dress. But there is a spice of novelty in the Oliver Twist design which is of appealing force.

Selecting Juvenile Shoes.

The footwear of small girls and boys is of exceeding importance to their appearance. Not only must the shoes be of the shape best calculated to the proper development of the feet, but they must be kept shapely. For mornings and play hours the best summer shoe is the high boot, laced or buttoned in white canvas or in dark tan kid. Next to these comes the tie for semi dress occasions. For parties are the patent leather sandals for boys and sandals in various shades for the girl, whose shoes and stockings invariably match the color of her dancing frock.

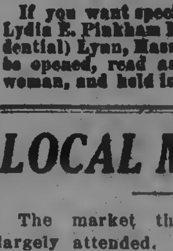
AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Doucette Tells of her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.



Belleville, Nova Scotia, Can.—"Three years ago I was suffering badly with what the doctors called Change of Life. I was so bad that I had to stay in bed. Some friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first. It is the only medicine I took that did help me and I recommend it. You don't know how thankful and grateful I am. I give you permission to publish what your good medicine has done for me."—Mrs. SIMON DOUCETTE, Belleville, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia, Canada.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

SUMMER PASTIME

$150.00

In Cash Prizes

First Prize $50.00

11 Awards in all

Competitors may win one, two, three or four prizes.

No entrance fee or special qualifications of any sort are required. Yet subscriptions will play an important part in this way.

If, when the winners in the Summer Pastime competition are announced, any one is found to be paid up six months in advance on his or her subscription, that person's prize will be increased 25 per cent. If a winner's subscription is found paid up one year in advance, then his or her prize will be increased 50 per cent. If the winner is paid up at least two years in advance from date, then the prize will be increased 100 per cent., in other words actually doubled. Thus the first prize may become, instead of $50.00 now, $100.00.

So, ladies and gentlemen, see to your subscriptions.

Here is to-day's picture.

WILL DELAY THE ASSAULT

Movement to Re-take Sarjevo is Halted

LONDON, Oct. 3—A despatch from Nish, Servia, according to a telegram from the Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co., asserts that Gen. Jankovitch, the Servian commander-in-chief, has ordered that the attempt to capture Sarayevo be abandoned temporarily, as it was found that the Austrians defending the city occupy positions that could only be taken by great sacrifices. The Servian general staff considers such action unjustifiable at the present moment.

Removing Crumbs.

The once much used crumb tray and brush have been discarded for the better way of taking off crumbs by means of a soft folded napkin into a small tray or plate where the table is bare. When covered with a tablecloth a silver crumb knife is better. This latter mode is much neater than the old way of brushing. In no case now is a brush used.

FOE RETREATS FROM SUWALKI WITH GREAT SLAUGHTER

Attack on Ossowitz is Repulsed by Russians and Assaulting Force Loses Heavily—Rome Despatch Says Germans Have Been Decisively Defeated in Provinces of Sulwalki and Lodz.

LONDON, Oct. 3. — The Russian War Office announced yesterday that following the assault of the Germans at Ossowitz, in the Polish Province of Suwalki, the Kaisers' forces have been driven back with great slaughter. The principal German forces are said to be strongly entrenched in the vicinity of Pitrokow and Kielce, in the region west of the Simno. Violent conflicts are in progress. Many of the German troops participating in the series of actions which lead to their retreat came from France. This is established by the capture of numerous prisoners.

Following the fall of Tarnow on Wednesday the Russians pushed forward and crossed the Nida river in Poland and the Donajec river in Galicia. This force constitutes the main Russian army. It is said to have gone into action along the Raba river, the first advance line before Cracow.

Gen. Von Hindenberg, who has scored several successes against the advance of the Czar's legions, is in command at Cracow, where several of the Bavarian army corps are stationed. These troops did valiant work in France before being transferred. The total Austro-German force are estimated in some quarters to aggregate 2,500,000 men. These figures are probably excessive.

Opposed to those forces are the pick of the Russian troops, under Gen. G. Rennenkampf. At least one million men will be on the fighting line, supported by an enormous amount of heavy artillery.

The Russian embassy at Rome announces that the Germans have been decisively defeated with terrible losses in the Province of Lodz and Suwalki. The Germans have been compelled to flee from Suwalki, Ostrowitz and other towns, leaving great quantities of transport guns. The troops in their route, threw away their rifles and small baggage. Numerous batteries were abandoned in the deep quagmires.

Other messages from Petrograd declare that the Germans lost 30,000 killed and wounded and 20,000 prisoners.

A despatch to the Central News from Rome says:

"The Russian embassy here has issued a communication which announces that the Germans have suffered a terrible defeat in the provinces of Lodz and Suwalki, Russian Poland.

"The Germans, the communication says, were attacked with extreme violence and compelled to flee from Suwalki, Ostrovitz, and other towns, leaving behind them great quantities of transport and guns. Their troops threw away their rifles and baggage. Numerous cannon were abandoned in the quagmire."

Other telegrams from Petrograd, the Central News correspondent at Rome says, declare that the Germans have lost 30,000 men in killed or wounded and 20,000 men taken prisoners.

Russian Cavalry's Success.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—A despatch from Petrograd gives the following official announcement:

"A division of Russian cavalry has obtained a brilliant success against the advance guard of Germans leaving Andreje, Government of Kielce, Russian Poland, in the direction of the city of Kielce. The enemy, surprised, threw down their arms and ammunition and fled, while the Russian cavalry cut up a laggard detachment.

"The German operations in Russian territory have nearly all failed, their artillery being defenceless on the roads, which are not macadamized. Most of the batteries become stuck in the mud as soon as they leave the principal routes."

J. J. DUFFUS IS LEADING AGENT

Has Sold the Largest Number of Ford Cars

Mr. J. J. Duffus, the local Ford representative, has returned from Toronto where he was winding up the business for the past "Ford" year which closed on September 30. Mr. Duffus was rather surprised when he was informed that he was the leading automobile dealer in the Province of Ontario. This fact is not only a credit to Mr. Duffus but also to the city. This municipality is to be congratulated on having within its boundaries a business man with the ambition and energy of the agent for the Ford.

He has been in his present line of business for but four years and in that short period he has surpassed all records for increasing business.

During the past year he has disposed of upwards of 120 cars or double the number sold during the year previous. To the question as to how the war had affected his business Mr. Duffus stated that August was his best month. He sold on an average of one car every day. That constitutes a record.

Broke Up the Staff.

After being on terms of warmest friendship for years, twenty-two out of thirty men employed by an export firm in London have left to fight in the different armies. Six are fighting for Germany, eight for France, four for Russia, three for Austria and one for England.

GERMAN OPERATIONS SHOW SIGNS OF POOR GUIDANCE

British Official Bulletin Says the Want of Cohesion in the German Movements is Due to the Loss of Officers---Allied Troops Have Lost no Ground But in Most Cases Have Gained.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The official bureau issued a statement at midnight from the headquarters of the British expeditionary force, under date of Sept. 29, concerning the movements of the British force and the French armies in immediate touch with it. The statement is in part as follows:

"The general situation as viewed on the map remains practically the same as that described in the last letter, and the task of the army has not changed. It is to maintain itself until there is a general resumption of the offensive.

"No ground has been lost. Some has been gained, and every counterattack has been repulsed—in certain instances with very severe losses to the enemy.

"Nevertheless the question of position is only a part of the battle, and there has been considerable improvement in the situation in another important respect. Recent offensive efforts of the enemy have been made without cohesion, his assaults being delivered by comparatively small bodies acting without co-operation with those on either side. Some of them, indeed, evince clear signs of inferior leadership, this bearing out statements made by prisoners as to great losses in officers suffered by the enemy.

"Further, the hostile artillery fire has decreased in volume and deteriorated both in control and direction. The first is probably due to the transfer of metal to other quarters, but the latter facts may be the direct result of the activity of our air craft and their interference with the enemy's air reconnaissance and observation of his fire.

"The Germans recently have been relying to some extent on observations from captive balloons sent up at some distance in the rear of their first line, which method, whatever its cause, is a poor substitute for the direct overhead reconnaissance obtained from aeroplanes.

"As a consequence the damage being done to us is wholly disproportionate to the amount of ammunition expended by the enemy. For the last few days it has amounted to pitting certain areas with large craters and in rendering some villages unhealthy, as the soldiers put it.

"Of recent events an actual narrative will be carried on from the 25th to the 29th inclusive. During the whole of this period the weather has remained good. On Friday, the 25th, comparative quiet reigned in our sphere of action.

"That night a general attack was made against the greater part of the allies' position and it was renewed in the early morning of the 26th. The Germans were everywhere repulsed with loss. Indeed, opposite one portion of our lines, where they were caught en masse by our machine guns and howitzers firing at different ranges, it is estimated that they left one thousand killed or wounded."

"On Sunday, the 27th, while the German heavy guns were in action, their brass bands could be heard playing hymn tunes, presumably at divine service.

"The enemy made an important advance on a part of our line at six p.m., and renewed it in strength at one point, with, however, no better success than on the previous night. Sniping continued all day along the whole front.

"On Monday, the 28th, there was nothing more severe than a bombardment and intermittent sniping, and this inactivity continued during Tuesday, the 29th, except for a night attack against our extreme right."

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND ON SEA

"THE 3RD COLD STEELS."

Sergeant Griffiths, of the Welsh Regiment, has written home an interesting letter, stating that at Mons the enemy appeared as ten to one. He continues:

"Then began that awful retreat which should, and will, go down in history as one of the greatest and most glorious retirements ever done. Let it be known we were not beaten, towards our flanks and causing us to retire. Our troubles soon began. The enemy were employing a lot of motor-lorries for the troops, which kept pushing many of their infantry towards our flanks and causing us to march sometimes as many as twenty-eight miles a day. We had to turn often and give them check, which we always did well, and so we kept on —ever southwards.

"Our boys were cursing because our backs were towards them, but when the British did turn, my word, what a game! The 3rd Coldstreamers should be named the 3rd Cold Steels. Their bayonet charge was a beauty, accounting, we were informed, for over 800 Germans, and losing only about 80 killed or wounded themselves. Then there were the Scots Greys' and the 9th Lancers' charges. When about 40 miles from Paris the main bodies of the enemy commenced retiring, and I left them on the run, and our boys after them hot-foot."

BULLET-RIDDLED CLOTHES.

Private Fred Hutchison, of the King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment, who was wounded at Le Cateau, has arrived home from the front. He lives in Openshaw, Manchester. He states that the regiment had been in action an hour when he got hit in the back with a bullet from a machine gun.

"Our regiment was taken by surprise by the Germans, who were waiting for us entrenched, after letting the Gordon Highlanders make good their retreat. We were about to have breakfast, after an all-night march, when the enemy opened fire. I had just got my pack off when bullets came sweeping over us like hailstones from the enemy's machine guns. They seem to have eight machine guns to our one. The Germans are good with the machine guns, but asses with the rifle. It had been raining heavily, and I was wearing my overcoat, in which afterwards I found six bullet holes. My tunic was pierced and torn at the left elbow, and the bullet which struck me cut three holes in my jersey and came out at the shoulder. I thought my time had come. Our fellows who went through the South African War said it was nothing compared with this. I walked through some fields to our motor transport, and was then conveyed to hospital."

A TRADES UNIONIST'S LETTER.

A popular institution where working men are wont to meet in peace time is the "swear" box, into which are dropped pennies by way of penalty for the forbidden use of the unruly member. A reservist, writing to a friend, thus expresses himself:

"I wish I was back again to have a penny fine. I have had a good many swears out here, and I have been trying to scratch my fines off with the Germans, as you cannot miss them. According to this I am a clear member."

The writer is also a trades unionist, a fact which leads him to observe:

"If strikes were the same as war, things would be a bit stirring, as we want combined action, and we are having plenty of that out here—too much 'combined action' for my liking—but the boys have stuck to the last, otherwise I am certain that France would have been wiped out."

EVANGELIST AT ST. JAMES' CHURCH

Rev. H. T. Crossley, Toronto, the well-known evangelist, arrives in the city this evening to begin a mission in St. James' Methodist church, corner Romaine and Aylmer. Those who desire to hear plain, pointed, practical, vigorous, edifying and optimistic messages will do well to hear him. The music will be entertaining, cheerful and inspiring. His meetings are bright, enthusiastic, sensible, reverent, interesting, hopeful and popular. His methods are not characterized by rant, cant, claptrap or wildfire, but are sane, manly, commendable and winsome. All seats are free. His motto is: Help everybody; hinder nobody. He preaches at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. on Sunday. Each night this week the meetings begin at 8. Come. Tell others.

FIRST MONEY FOR JIMMY DIRECT

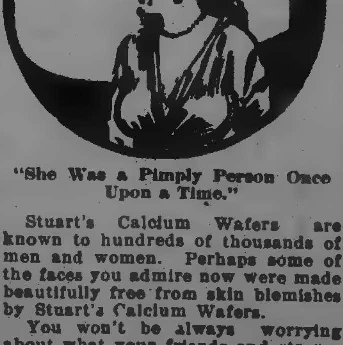
In the green race, Hester D. came home a winner, with Oro Medium second.

Everybody Loves A Lady Fair

And a Lady Can Have a Fair, Clear Complexion by Using Stuart's Calcium Wafers After Each Meal.

You women ought to hear some men rave over a beautifully clean and shell clear skin. There is nothing that so charms a man or a woman as this. Where there are pimples, blotches, liver spots, etc., the blood is diseased and filled with impurities. Clean the blood and these effects disappear at once. That is what Stuart's Calcium Wafers do almost beyond belief.



"She Was a Pimply Person Once Upon a Time."

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are known to hundreds of thousands of men and women. Perhaps some of the faces you admire now were made beautifully free from skin blemishes by Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

You won't be always worrying about what your friends and strangers think of your "broken-out" face, if you give these wonderful little wafers a chance.

That's because they go right to the seat of the trouble, the blood, driving out all impurities, strengthening it, toning it up. And when the blood is clear the skin is free from blemish.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are perfectly harmless and may be taken freely by any one. They contain absolutely no mercury, no poisonous drugs, no opiates.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain Calcium Sulphide, and a mild alternative — every doctor prescribes them a hundred times a year. They are the most effective blood-cleansers known to man.

It doesn't matter whether you have blackheads and pimples "something awful," or boils, tetter, rash, carbuncles, eczema, liver spots or a muddy complexion, try Stuart's Calcium Wafers and get a surprise in a short time.

Buy a box from your druggist anywhere. All druggists keep them in stock. Price 50 cents. A small sample package will be mailed free to any one who will address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Annual Exhibition Was Well up to the High Mark Attained and Held for Many Years

PETERBORO PROMINENT

All roads, or at least the most of them, led to Millbrook yesterday, the big event being the annual exhibition, which history records as being the one place where the best in the land is to be seen on exhibition. Friday's exhibition continued the enviable reputation Millbrook has gained for furnishing a good fair. The weatherman did his part, and everything was lovely.

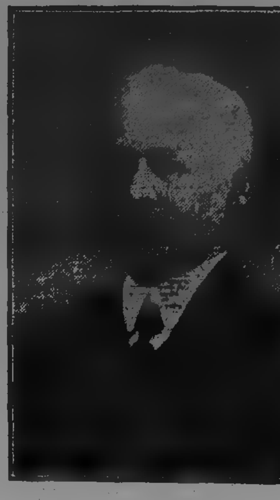
Smiles big and little were very prominent on the features of President A. T. Armstrong and Secretary J. N. McGill and his assistant, James Douglas. They expressed themselves as being altogether satisfied with results. The attendance could not be given in numbers, but most people said there was a big crowd, and that describes the attendance nicely. And not by any means one of the smallest features of the day was the number of automobiles on the grounds, many of the cars having been driven from Peterboro, each carrying a capacity crowd. The cars in themselves made a fine display.

The exhibits in all classes were up to the usual high standard, and one saw some of the finest horses and cattle that ever galloped in a pasture. The sheep and swine were also of a very high order, and the same can be said of every department. The people took a large interest in the judging, and particularly so when the judges were looking over the horses. The keen competition made judging a difficult proposition. The ladies had a big time as they handled the ribbons for the driving events, and their skilful handling of the handsome steppers called forth the admiration of the interested spectators.

"Down the Pike."

A midway of no mean proportions did a thriving business during the day, and the walk "down the pike" was enjoyed by the elder boys and girls as well as by the younger generation. The 57th Regimental Band supplied music of quality and quantity, and this entertainment, with the addition of the horse races, proved a bill-of-fare that pleased all.

PRESIDENT AND SECRETARY



A. T. ARMSTRONG.

J. N. McGILL.

Peterboro Winners.

The poultry exhibits were a show in themselves, and Peterboro breeders were very prominent, among them being Messrs. Lush, Kelly, Kidd, Robson, Cunningham, Brault, Simmons, Pilling, and Meharry. As might be expected, the local birds secured a good share of the prize money, and at least one of the local men captured a prize with every entry.

Over in the building for the exhibits in farm products, dairy products, fruits, flowers, fine arts and ladies' fancy work, splendid displays were to be seen, and here again the competition was most keen.

Best Collection Baking.

One of the competitions which attracted wide attention called for the best collection of baking, including one loaf of bread, half dozen buns, one loaf cake, and one layer cake. There were eight competitors, and the first prize, a china tea set, of 42 pieces, valued at $10, went to Mrs. Osborne. Mrs. Stapes won second prize, and Mrs. Hamilton took third. R. J. Soden donated the first prize.

Prominent among the exhibitors in flowers were Mrs. George Thorne, Millbrook, Mrs. R. T. Hounsell, Peterboro, Miss Bessie Armstrong, and Mrs. Martin Brock, of Millbrook. Mrs. Thorne and Miss Armstrong were the big winners.

Mrs. A. Carroll of Fraserville was a prize-winner in canned and preserved fruit and best collection of pickles. Mr. Carroll kept up the good work and took quite a number of firsts in farm produce.

Mrs. Jos. Hamilton, Millbrook, took first prize for a 10-lb. crock of butter, and Mrs. H. Lowry, also of Millbrook, captured two seconds on her exhibits of butter in crock and rolls.

Won Fifteen Prizes.

Mrs. R. T. Hounsell, of Peterboro, always a big winner at fall fairs, won fifteen prizes with her exhibits in fine arts, flowers, etc. Some of Mrs. Hounsell's work attracted much attention. Other well-known exhibitors in arts and ladies' fancy work were Miss Irvine, Port Hope, Mrs. Givens, Millbrook, and Miss Edith Tully, of Smith.

Peterboro business men assisted in boosting the prize list, among the contributors being Grafton Co., Oak Hall, E. N. McWilliams, R. J. Munro, R. Ruddy, K. C., Richard Hall & Son and R. J. Soden.

INTEREST CONTINUES IN RIFLE ASSOCIATION

Rifles and Ammunition, it is Expected Will be Received in the Near Future — Arrangements for Gallery Practice for the New Members

The executive of the Rifle association met last night and had a full attendance. Applications have been made by the club for rifles and ammunition, and the executive has reason to believe that these necessities will be supplied in the very near future.

The regular meeting of the members will be held in the armouries next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Anyone desiring to become a member will have an opportunity of joining at the meeting. After the meeting a lecture on rifle shooting will be given by W. H. Moore, an ex-Bisley man. Already a great many applications have been made for membership, and the outlook of the association is one of success.

All should understand that the association is civilian and not connected with the militia. All British subjects between the ages of 18 and 60 years, and residents of the locality, are eligible for membership on paying the one dollar fee. The government issues the rifles to the clubs in proportion of one per four members of the association. The rifle used is No. 303, government service.

Ammunition for individual practice is issued free to civilians by the government. A member in return is obliged to attend at rifle practice and make returns of his scores. Prior to taking up shooting at the ranges arrangements are being made by the executive for gallery practice for all new members not familiar with rifle shooting. It is expected that the first gallery instruction to beginners will take place next week.

On account of the large membership it is necessary to have the club divided into squads, such as business men, doctors, lawyers, clerks, mechanics, etc., each having a separate and distinct squad, which will compete against one another after the club is substantially organized.

Following is the list of members sworn in:

F. D. Kerr, 415 Water street.
E. L. Goodwill, 309 Boswell ave.
George Stevens, 335 Roger street.
W. H. Moore, 67 Morrow street.

LIBRARY NOTES

In starting these bi-monthly articles for the fall and winter months no more useful beginnig can be made than by setting forth a few of the ways in which a library can be of service to the public. Many people who have never been inside a library (and there are a few even in Peterborough who could plead guilty to the soft impeachment), are under the impression that it is a place when men are enabled to loaf and read the newspapers and women to satisfy their cravings for sensational fiction. Such an impression can easily be created in one's mind; it is a vastly different matter to eradicate.

Let it be understood, first, that the book shelves do not by any means represent the full resources of the library. Packed away in 60 pamphlet cases are many items of the greatest interest to the student. They deal with all manner of subjects and as every one of them is catalogued it is an easy matter to get access to them provided one knows how to go about it. This can be done by looking at the pamphlet case cards in the catalogue cabinet where the information desired may possibly desired.

Patent Office Records.

The library is in possession of as complete a set of Patent Office Records as it is possible to get. There is no necessity for anyone to write to Ottawa for information concerning patents, for it can be obtained here at a minimum of trouble and a total absence of cost.

Other valuable publications that are regularly received are those sent out by the Washington Bureau of Education.

The Canada Gazette is received every week and can be always obtained on enquiry at the receiving desk.

Topics of the Day.

The library is also in possession of publications having a direct bearing on the topics of the day. It does not matter whether these are of ephemeral or permanent interest, if reference to them is made in the English or American magazines the enquirer can be brought into touch with them.

The same holds good of the current literature of the day, for the library subscribes for publications devoted to criticism of the latest fiction and other works.

EIGHTEEN WARDS OF THE SHELTER

The directors of the local Children's Aid Society have decided to hold tag day on Saturday, October 10. Under the existing circumstances, the directors in charge were rather reticent as regards holding a tag day, but the finances of the Children's Aid are rapidly approaching a low ebb. The institution has taken care of the largest number of children since its inception, notably in the past two months. Eighteen are in the shelter at present, nine of these having mothers in the hospital, and applications are being made constantly for temporary relief.

SAVED YOUNG GIRL'S LIFE

Royal Humane Society Medal for Marmora Young Man

The Vancouver Daily News-Advertiser contains the following which refers to a son of Mr. Alex. A. McDonald, of Marmora.

"The rescue of a young girl from drowning in Burrard Inlet by Mr. Fank McDonald, assistant secretary of the London Pacific Guarantee Company, is reported to "The News-Advertiser" by Mr. W. Hamar Greenwood. Miss Steeves, a seventeen-year-old girl, was fishing with her younger brother off the C. P. R. wharves on Saturday evening, it appears, when she fell in. Her cries for help attracted the attention of Mr. McDonald who was standing some 100 yards away. Without waiting to take off even his coat he jumped into 20 feet of water and succeeded in rescuing her. It is understood that his action will be brought to the attention of the Royal Humane Society.

Mrs. Taylor replied in a suitable manner thanking them for their gift and assuring them that she would cherish it as a reminder of the pleasant times spent in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and wishing them continued success in the Master's work. Afterwards a very pleasant evening was spent together.

Late Premier's Character Shown in Human Relations

A Woman's View of Sir James Whitney — He Believed the Mothers of Ontario Knew How to Take Care of Their Children — A True Democrat and Loyal Friend

By Marjory MacMurchy.

Likely it is true of every man, certainly it is true of Sir James Whitney, that to know the essential truth of his character one must look for it in his human relations. We care little for those who care little for other men and women. The man who sees one of the human family in a tramp or a king, a schoolboy or an old man, a woman at work or a woman with her children, is the man we are able to love, and always our love is justified. This is the essential truth in the character of Sir James Whitney. He did not care who you were, but what you needed made a great deal of difference to him. Those who knew him best and understood him best wondered that anyone should even find him formidable. The severe, penetrating glance and strong voice were only a cover to a tender heart. But the hand of a little child knew how to knock at that strong door.

A True Democrat.

Hundreds of people must still remember the story of Sir James and the working woman who was carrying home her basket of clothes, but no one can hear it rightly who does not understand that to plan for popular favor was extremely foreign to the nature of Sir James. To win applause by theatrical means would have seemed to him as preposterous and false as any other unnatural human action. There was a day, however, shortly after his successful election to the premiership of Ontario, when, on entering a crowded street car, he found a seat, but gave it up later to a woman who was carrying home a basket of clothes as bulky as washing sent out to be done generally contrives to be. Sir James would even as soon have given his seat to a washerwoman as to a queen. Perhaps sooner. Here we have the very kernel of his simplicity, his kindness, his feeling that all of us belong to a family, and that while God is great and high above the earth, as for the rest of us there is practically no distinction. Sir James was a true democrat, using that word to mean a good and great quality. He thought himself no better than other men, and he honored every draft made upon him by claims to a common humanity.

He Kept the Faith.

Sir James had a passionate love for Ontario, Canada and the Empire. But it was a simple, democratic, unstrained and natural love. He wore loyalty with the same unthinking ease that he put on his coat. What else could a man be but loyal? This word loyal as used here, perhaps, needs to be explained. In the case of Sir James Whitney, one may substitute the word faith. He kept the faith. If any man thinks he loves this province, he cannot have loved it better than the man who until Friday was its premier. For the same reason he was very jealous of provincial dignity, yet never of his own dignity—which truly needed no support or care. It was characteristic of Sir James that he introduced the practice of speaking of the premier of the province as the prime minister. He loved old usage and custom with a surpassing love. It is hard for an average individual to comprehend his passionate adherence to the men who were his leaders once. Sir James was most loyal and faithful to his colleagues. These are human and lovable traits.

Every Inch a Man.

He was a native-born Canadian. So is Lady Whitney. He is a rare example of that stock which was commoner in the last generation and the generation before than it is in this. He was not a modern statesman. But nevertheless he was the shadow of a rock. As long as he was here the people knew that some dangers ever would be averted. Brusk, abrupt, autocratic, domineering, speaking like a son of thunder, he had honesty like the honesty of an immortal; it was woven into the woof; it was part of the metal of his character. He could neither bend nor would he break before what he counted wrong. Here he was indeed a rock. Neither could he change nor assimilate new ways. Yet many of his ideas and a considerable part of his legislation are rightly described as radical and even socialistic. He was naturally a fighter. He was a friend who could not forget. It was a pleasant sight to see him when he laughed heartily with a confidant. One wonders if he was ever quite as happy in political power as he was in political opposition. A premier has a hard road and not much time for laughter. With all the world, we say to-day how greatly we admired and loved his great qualities. Anyone has done rarely well who is his equal. Politics in his hands were never a trick, a scheme, a pose or a game. The government of a free people was a great employment. His manliness, it may be, had much to do with his serious and elevated view of politics. He was every inch a man.

Driving in Rosedale.

Many must deeply mourn his loss. But it is impossible to dwell in melancholy reminiscence on one so vital as Sir James Whitney. With pleasant thoughts one recalls his strong steps as he used to stride up to the parliament buildings before the days of the bicycle. Then came the day of the bicycle, and with what considerate care, which had a smile, even a chuckle, in it, did he learn to guide judiciously that weighty equilibrium. The day of the motor came, too. He enjoyed it. But of all the pleasant pictures, the pleasantest left is when he drove with his family in Rosedale. "Quick! thy tablets, memory!" Paint faithfully the keen dark eyes, the bushy brows, the benevolent interest of the look, the easy carriage of a good citizen with his family, the darling little grandson where the grandfather's eyes could see the boy's utter enjoyment. The true Sir James Whitney was revealed beyond question, beyond doubt, in his human relations; for, knowing how he felt with his own, he knew the ways of the world with their own. How easy it is to understand if we go about it the way of the heart!

Children Sacred to Him.

A tale of childish distress would ever bring the tears to Sir James' eyes. Children to him, as to every good-hearted man, were sacred. Once a journal printed some comparison between infant mortality in Ontario and other countries where women have the vote. "No one can tell me," said Sir James, "that the mothers of Ontario do not know how to take care of their children. He seldom spoke of his deepest feelings to others; it is to be supposed that he did not expect others to speak much of such things to him. That he was reverent, believing, upright, compassionate, we have learned from his daily life. Those who knew him best, know how deep and warm were his affections. In their sorrow, with what affectionate consolation must Lady Whitney and his children consider his career. With what pride must they reflect upon his achievements. Honor, dignity, worth, service to his country, upholding of the right, a good fight well won, and an end becoming to a statesman, who will not lay down his task except under the great compulsion, there is no one who gladly does not pay him these dues. He has done well; and they sorrow not as those who have no hope.

ATTACK ON ANTWERP FAILURE

German Assault is Repulsed by Belgians

LONDON, Oct. 3. — The Antwerp correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. has sent the following despatch:

"The German attack on the fort and approaches of Koningshoyck (one of the new forts on the outer line) Thursday night was repulsed.

"A violent attack on Termonde was repulsed at two o'clock yesterday morning, the Belgians blowing up the bridge (over the Scheldt).

"The Belgians undertook a counter-attack from Antwerp Friday morning on the front of the easterly position. This still continues.

"The Germans have suffered heavily everywhere under the well-directed machine gun fire of the Belgians," according to a statement cabled from Antwerp by the correspondent of the Central News. "At the Wavre and St. Catharine forts alone (outside of Antwerp) the German dead may be counted by thousands. At several points the corpses lie in heaps. Entire companies have been exterminated, while the other troops were driven back at the point of the bayonet."

BRITAIN TO SOW MINES.

Admiralty Finally Forced to Adopt Counter Measures.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The official information bureau announced yesterday that the Government had decided to lay mines in certain areas as a counter stroke to the German procedure.

The official information bureau has issued the following on behalf of the Admiralty:

"The German policy of mine-laying, combined with the submarine activity, makes it necessary on military grounds for the Admiralty to adopt counter measures.

"His Majesty's Government has therefore authorized a mine-laying policy in certain areas."

SCOTLAND, ONT., Aug. 25th. 1913

"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pill manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them".

VIENNA IN PANIC

Government of Austria May be Moved

LONDON, Oct. 3. — Despatches from Vienna, via Rome, state that the Austrian Emperor and his Cabinet are debating the removal of the Government to Prague, in view of a possible siege of Vienna by the Russians. For the past month a large number of laborers have been throwing up defences in every direction and the city is believed to be almost impregnable. But the Government will not risk capture and has chosen Prague as its new location.

Prague is about midway between Vienna and Berlin on the north bank of the River Moldau. It is fortified.

Salsburg Also Mentioned.

ROME, Oct. 3. — (Via Paris.)—A great impression has been produced by a report circulating in diplomatic circles here to the effect that the Austrian Government, is urging Emperor Francis Joseph to transfer the court and seat of Government to either Prague or Salsburg.

END OF THE EARTH.

That Great Tragedy May Be 2,000,000 or 95,000,000 Years Away.

Scientists tell us that life on the earth began about 2,000,000 years ago. It has generally been accepted that life will last for 95,000,000 years.

Ninety-five million years is a fairly long time. None of us who are alive today need worry about what will take place 95,000,000 years hence. Even the most altruistic can scarcely be inspired by love for an inconceivably remote posterity.

But the French savants are altogether disturbing. Here comes one, M. Verronet, who says that the earth will permanently freeze within the next 2,000,000 years and that life will vanish. This is bringing the tragedy nearer home. We would gladly accept the older reckoning.

Verronet places mankind of today about midway between the beginning and the end. He computes that in the future life will exist as long as it has already existed. He specifies only one forty-eighth as long a life as those who have studied in the past.

There is only one consolation to be derived from the Verronet reckoning. As far as the influence of today is concerned 2,000,000 years is as good as 95,000,000. In either event those who are comfortably laboring today cannot expect to be lovingly remembered when the cataclysm of ice makes the earth a barren wilderness.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cornwall Man Injured.

CORNWALL, Oct. 3. — Frank Lavine, who lives on the Carlos Kinney farm at Massena Centre, is lying in the Hotel Dieu Hospital here in a critical condition as the result of a runaway accident, and his chances of recovery are said to be poor. While driving home from a neighbor's his horse was frightened by a dog and ran away, throwing him out on his head and shoulders. Dr. Elkins found that Lavine was suffering from a severe concussion and from bleeding from the nose and ears. He was hurried to Cornwall.

Greece Is Pacific.

ATHENS, Oct. 3.—(Via London)—Premier Venizelos of Greece has announced in the chamber that Greece is striving to avert war in the Balkans. He declared that Greece is willing to make concessions to Turkey, even going to the extent of restoring the Aegean Islands, taken during the latest war, on condition that Greek administration of the islands be continued.

Allies Bound to Win Battle of the Aisne Says Observer

LONDON, Oct. 3. — A correspondent of the Central News at Calais, who has returned to that city from a tour in the vicinity of the allies' left, says:

"Without disclosing military secrets, I can say that I have seen many things to remove any misgivings as to the outcome of the battle. The moment is near when the curtain will be lifted on the greatest drama ever seen in war.

"The position of the German right wing on Wednesday was such that a portion lying between Lassigny and Chaulnes was in extreme danger. Above Chaulines the German lines, which a few days ago faced westward, are now facing northwest, and have been bent back on the line of Chaulnes, Cambrai and Valenciennes. On Sunday a German patrol was captured near Chaulnes. The fate of the Germans was due to a shortage of horses. The men said that they had had nothing to eat for some days. They belonged to Gen. Von Kluk's command.

"It has been apparent throughout that Gen. Von Kluk's right was made more precarious by the crowding on him of reinforcements from the centre and left by the German General Staff. His commissariat failed. This might have been avoided if the Germans had been prepared to sacrifice their carefully selected position in the Noyon region, but they staked everything, holding that the peril of an envelopment was becoming more imminent daily."

German Emperor Travels in Train of Ten Pullmans

ROME, Oct. 3. — (Via Paris.)—Emperor William, says a telegram from Berlin, is going from one front to another. He travels in a special train of ten Pullman cars, which formerly were painted white and blue, but which now have been repainted like the ordinary cars, in order to protect the train from the bombs of French aviators.

When the Emperor goes to places out of the reach of the railway he travels by automobile. Besides his aides and bodyguard he is also watched by secret field police.

Col. Hughes Goes To England.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3. — Col. Sam Hughes, it is reported, has made arrangements for going to England for a few weeks' rest and to see the Canadian troops begin their training over there. He will sail from New York next Wednesday.

Col. Victor Williams, who was commandant of the Valcartier camp and is going to England, will, it is said, in all probability be attached to Gen. French's staff.

Japanese Warships Wreck Fortress.

TOKIO, Oct. 3.—A flotilla of Japanese destroyers has wrecked the German barracks at Tsingtau and fire is reported to be raging within the fortifications. The Japanese fleet continues to bombard the fortress, which is also being shelled by British and Japanese batteries from the land side.

Easiest Way Out.

"Guilty or not?" asked the judge.

"I haven't made up my mind," replied the prisoner.

"If you don't know, who does?"

"Well, judge, that may look like an easy matter to you, but I am trying to figure out whether it will be cheaper to hire a lawyer or pay the fine."

"MAKE ME A CEMETERY."

Huge French Field Guns Executed Order of Officer.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—"Black butchers" is the name applied to the big French field pieces by the armies of the republic. They are doing terrible execution in the German ranks, and have come to occupy a high place in the affections of the allied troops.

A story is recounted of one incident in the Aisne fighting where the big guns wrought wholesale havoc. The French guns were posted on a hill top, but out of sight of a German detachment of 500 men, which filed into the valley below. After carefully getting the range of the officer in command said: "Make me a cemetery down there!"

The command was instantly executed and frightful shambles created. The surviving Germans were picked off by expert riflemen.

Undecided, Says Berlin.

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—(By wireless to Sayville, L.I.) — According to announcement made in Berlin yesterday the great battle in France is still undecided. The Germans are described as hammering the French positions at numerous points by their heavy artillery. The attempts of the allies to break through the German lines have been repulsed. The heaviest losses have been in the Argonne region.

School Teachers Warned.

STALLINGS' BRAVES WILL GIVE ATHLETICS A FIGHT

Outfield Strength of Opposing Outfields Compared by Fullerton Who Finds National League Champs Right up With Invincible Mackmen on Paper, Anway

Editor's Note—Hugh S. Fullerton has evolved a system of "doping" baseball teams which has worked with marvellous success. Each year he has brought the system nearer accuracy and he claims that he can decide any series of games between two games in advance in nineteen out of twenty cases. The one element that cannot be calculated upon is luck. He studies each player as an individual, figuring his value as a batter, a base runner, fielder thrower and "inside worker." He calculates the relative value of base running, batting fielding, throwing and thinking separately and reduces the strength of the individual to his offensive and defensive strength. The offensive strength of each man in the team is added, and an average strength obtained. The defensive strength of each man is figured, and from it a team strength is obtained. With various other factors he has the comparative strength of the teams at the start of the series as closely as may be figured.)

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Philadelphia	.663	.673	.669
Boston Braves	.654	.660	.662

Boston Braves, in the outfield, compare with the Champion Athletics so favorably as to cause one to start with surprise when the final figures are counted.

I started to dope the two outfields with the sub-conscious idea that the Athletics would be found so much the stronger that it would be a joke and to my astonishment I learn that the difference between them is amazingly small; so slight in fact that a little luck in the play would make the Boston outfield to all intents and purposes its equal.

Further I discover that the Braves are doubly fortified; that they have much more reserve strength in outfielders, and that Stallings has at his command more outfield strength than Mack can muster.

This statement will create a howl. It needs proving. I hardly can believe it myself—but a study of conditions will prove it.

If we take the Boston Red Sox outfield—Speaker, Hooper and Lewis, as a basis of figuring, and calculate the strength of Murphy, Oldring and Strunk against them you have a simple proposition. If I say that Devore, Whitted and Moran are as good as Murphy, Oldring and Strunk in all departments then you laugh. That is what leads on to say, offhand that the Athletics have the better outfield both in attack and defense than the Braves possess.

But listen: Murphy, Oldring and Strunk are the Athletics' outfield with Walsh to help out and some youngsters. You can safely figure that Murphy, Oldring and Strunk will play unless one breaks something. We know their values absolutely in batting, fielding, base-running and throwing. Boston does not possess three men as good. Admit that, for it is true.

But—Boston has six men who play outfield. Take Devore for instance. He pulls a lot of bones, he runs well, he throws well, but at times with poor judgment, he hits certain kinds of pitching hard, and goes to first with much speed.

Take Cather. He is rather unfinished. Against some pitching he is dead. Against others he is a whale. He is a corking dangerous pinch hitter, and he can throw.

The strength then of center field is the best of Mann, Moran, Whitted or Devore—depending upon conditions, and who is pitching for the other side. Pick the strongest points of each of eight Boston outfielders and compare their best with the steady jobbers of the Athletics.

The strength of Boston's outfield then is their defensive strength of the three chosen for that day by Stallings—and the strongest batting and running trio against a certain style of pitching.

Connolly, of course, is the leading hitter of the Braves—about .310, which average is a boost above his normal, because Stallings sent him to play against the kind of pitching he likes. The outfield average of hitting is close to .260. The outfield probably will be Connolly, Gilbert and Mann or Cather against Plank, with Devore in against Bender and Whitted in against Bush or Shawkey.

Whitted, who plays infield or outfield, may be used, in fact must be used during the series for his value in keeping the team hustling and fighting, and for his base running. Connolly is unfinished, but a slashing hitter. Moran is one of the most timely batters in the country, a fellow at his best in a pinch and likely to break up a game with a long drive at any time.

Cather is a much improved ball player this season under Stallings. Mann is a magnificent fielder and hits only fairly well.

There is another difficulty that necessitated most careful study of the men and their habits. It is hard to figure on three more different players than Tyler, James and Rudolph; yet, in calculating the worth of the outfielders we are figuring for this series only and must value a man not on what he does in a regular season but on what he is likely to do against the kind of pitching he will face.

In this case we have to study what Murphy and Strunk will do against Tyler—which, we believe, will be very little if Tyler is right. Then we have to boost Oldring's stock materially for those games in which Tyler pitches, because the Rube certainly can take his wallops at that kind of pitching.

Nor would it surprise me to see Boston's outfielders reach first base more often against the Athletic pitching than the Athletic outfielders will reach it against the Boston pitchers. I is rather a bold prediction but one worth watching.

I have figured Mack's three regulars and two subs against Tyler, Rudolph and James, and also (for one game only) against Davis, Hess, Crutcher and Cochreham. I have figured each of the Boston men against Plank, Bender, Shawkey, Pennock, Bressler and Bush, figuring of course that Plank and Bender, especially Plank, will carry three-fourths of the pitching burden of the coming series.

By this composite figuring I have reached the values of the outfield as compared with the value of the Athletics.

The figures favor the Athletics in both attack and in defense, but the margin is not nearly as large as one would be led to expect. In fact, Stallings might, by his acknowledgedly clever using of his reserves, offset the seeming advantage of the Athletics.

From the outfield dope one thing is certain—Boston is not outclassed as hopelessly as a lot of the prophets think. We will next take up the infield and see how they compare theme.

The Canadian league will meet in Toronto next Monday. The circuit for next year will be discussed, in addition to winding up this season's business.

The Chicago Feds are barely showing in front of Indianapolis in the Federal League. A half game lead at this stage of the season shows a balance even more even than that which characterized the first division of the other big leagues, including the International.

Melbourne Inman and Willie Hoppe are about half way through their competition, the American being 122 points ahead of the Englishman. The latter naturally is showing great superiority at the English game, but Willie is more than proportionately better at the balk line method.

COMMENT
As You Like It

So far as can be learned, the major league clubs passed up the Canadian league in the drafting proceses. However, the Class AA and Class A clubs are said to have put in claims on several of President Fitzgerald's shining lights. Mitchell, of Ottawa, according to the dope, is likely to go to an American Association club. A Class A draft is going in on Firstbaseman Kading of St. Thomas and Outfielder Kopp of the same club. Both will likely go to the Southern league.—Ottawa Free Press.

Joe Connolly, the diminutive ex-Royal, made 7 hits in 9 times up in the recent double-header. His work was the feature of the games.

TEMPER VS. COOLNESS WHEN MACKMEN MEET THE BRAVES

No Two Managers Ever Presented a Greater Contrast Than Stallings and Mack, Both Men Being Tempermentally Opposite on the Diamond

It will be the iceburg against the hotbag, the extremes in human nature, when the Athletics meet the Braves. Connie Mack is the human iceburg. He's cool and calm and collected, regardless of the score or of the stake.

The man doesn't live who can boast that he saw Connie Mack leap to his feet and cheer as the run came across which won a pennant or cinched a world's championship. If he did such a thing his players would leap and grab him, and beseech him to remain calm, and they would be fearful of his reason.

And Stallings? A base hit sends him into a spasm of delight. A ball game won transfers him into a land of bliss.

A contrast? No two managers ever presented a greater one. And that these two managers are the predominating personalities on their teams is shown by the methods of the players.

For the Athletics are as Connie Mack. You don't read of them losing their heads and being chased by the umpires. That isn't their style of play. And the Braves? A bunch of hotheads, filled with the same enthusiasm, the same love of fight and strife that have made their boss one of the wonders of the game.

Ever watch these two managers at a ball game? You will see no more interesting sight.

Imagine Connie Mack sitting on the south side bench. He looks neither to the right nor to the left. He holds a score card in his hand. It has often been claimed that this is all he needs to give his signals. That he signs for the hit and run, for the sacrifice; that he sends his infield back for the double-play, or pulls it in to cut off the runner at the plate by the motions of his card.

The expression on his face never changes. A home run by Baker brings no smile to his face, and no new gleamor to his eyes. A rare boner by one of his men in the field brings no retort to his lips. Nor does the offender receive his call from the manager while his pals are present.

The game is over, and away strides the elongated figure. The day's work is over. His hair isn't ruffled; he'll talk to you about anything. You would never suppose that he was the most interested man at the game.

That's Connie Mack .

And Stallings? He's a bundle of nerves from the moment the game starts. He slides along the bench with every pitch of the ball. He's on his feet as it starts for the outfield. He's commenting to his players as his outfielders race for it, or as they round the bases if one of them smite it. He's past master of the art of sarcasm. There isn't a man on his team whom he hasn't nicknamed, and every cognomen fits the individual.

He's commenting on the work of the umpire, and it is never favorable, save when the decision favors the Braves. He's a fighting madman from the moment the game starts until it is over. And if it be a Boston win, he's joyful, and if it be a Brave defeat he's inconsolable.

He has often said that a Saturday defeat in the east was the worst thing that could befall him; that he must remain idle all of Sunday because there was no game that he might try for revenge.

He's a human dynamo.

DOC REISLING WILL BE BACK

London, Oct. 3.—London Canadian league team owners will hold their annual meeting ere long, and from an authentic source it was learned yesterday that they had decided to a man to give the managerial reins to Doc Reisling, if the Ohioian would accept the position for the 1915 season.

Thomas Gillean, one of the club shareholders, stated yesterday that so far as he was concerned, Doc Reisling would be welcomed back to this city when the curtain was rung up next year.

"Mr. Reisling acted like a gentleman throughout the past season, and so far as I am concerned, he had a free hand in dealing with the players. If he will take the team over the next term, I hardly think he will find any of the shareholders attempting to tell him how he should run the men on the diamond. From the attitude of the fans, I believe the doctor will be welcomed back," said Mr. Gillean.

One of the club directors received a letter from Doc to the effect that the latter already has garnered some promising talent for next season, and that, if he came back here, many new faces would adorn the London line-up.

The London owners declare that the past season financially was a bad one for them.

Mr. F. B. Marsh, Toronto, is registered at the Snowden House.

Mr. D. J. McDonnell, Toronto, is here on business.

J. W. McIntyre, Keene, is here for a few days.

Mr. P. Brown, Suthon, is visiting friends in the city.

Mrs. George Burnham, Toronto, is staying with Mrs. Kendry, Water street.

Mr. Francis Mason, with his daughter and grand-daughter, are leaving for California on Monday.

Miss Nan Hill entertained a few friends at "bridge" on Friday evening.

Mrs. Hopwood was in town for a few days this week, but returns to Chemong until Thanksgiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitby passed through town this week on their way to their new home at Hawarden, Sask.

Mrs. D. C. MacRostie and her little daughter have returned from Frankfort, where she had been visiting her sisters.

The many friends of Mr. J. D. Tully will be pleased to learn he was able to return home this afternoon from Chemong Park.

Mr. Wilbur Bennett, of Guelph College, is spending the week end with his father, Mr. J. J. Bennett, Perry Street.

Mr. Snider, manager of the Bank of Commerce, Madoc, and Mr. Martin Dunsford, are spending the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dunsford.

Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., will be one of the speakers at the annual Thanksgiving Day dinner, to be held by the ladies of the Lakefield Methodist Church.

Friends of Mr. Ormsby Boyd, son of Dr. Boyd, engaged in banking at London, were surprised to hear of his leaving for the war as a member of the Nova Scotia Highlanders. His friends will wish him a safe return, with all the glory obtainable by an honorable fighter.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Mr. G. A. Campbell, 242 Westcott street, who was appointed local delegate to attend the convention of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America at Indianapolis on Oct. 6, leaves to-morrow by C.P.R. at 5.24.

The ladies of Lakefield have organised the Soldiers' Comfort Club and will meet every Friday afternoon. The officers are; President—Mrs. F. J. Tate; Vice-President — Mrs. J. H. Sherin; Secretary—Mrs. W. M. Graham; Treasurer—Miss McKibbon.

Committee to assist the officers—Mrs. Wesley Sherin and Mrs. Sydney Hunter.

Lt. Alan S. C. Rogers, son of Mr. Edwin R. Rogers, inspector of prisons and public charities, and an officer of the 61st King George's Own Pioneers in India, arrived in Toronto Thursday afternoon from New Zealand. Lt. Rogers is on leave and had been in Australia, and after a short visit with his parents he will report at the war office in London, England, previous to going to the seat of war. Lt. Rogers is a nephew of Mr. R. B. Rogers, of 147 Hunter Street E., whose son has already gone to England with the Canadian overseas contingent.

One of the largest luncheons in the history of the Golf club was held on Wednesday. The dining room was crowded to overflowing, and it was necessary to have tables placed on the verandah. Fifty-seven in all sat down to table, proving that it is not only our well-known friend, "Mr. Heinz," who can provide "fifty-seven varieties" for the table. Among those present were: Mrs. Gardiner, Mrs. G. W. Roger (Cobourg), Mrs. Travers, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. Goodwill, Miss Edwards, Mrs. Crees, Mrs. Coulthard, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Hew[illegible] Miss Lundy, the Misses Hall, the [illegible] Kingan, Mrs. D. Davidson, M[illegible] and the Misses Harstone, Miss [illegible] Davidson, Mrs. Kells and Miss Wood (Millbrook), Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Basil Hall, Miss Dobie, Miss Pearce, Miss Monroe and Miss Cavanagh.

A small but enthusiastic meeting was held in the Bank of Montreal chambers to consider arrangements for the tag day to be held for the Children's Shelter. The officers of the society were most reluctant to bring the needs of their work before the public unless absolutely obliged, owing to the numerous other calls, but hard times for grown people also mean hard times for the little ones, who must be looked after, no matter what may eventuate.

Mrs. Travers was voted into the chair for the meeting, and Miss Nan Hall was appointed secretary.

Mrs. W. H. Dunsford was elected convener of the committee and Mrs. Matthews convenor of the committee to prepare the rosettes for horses and motors.

It was decided to hold the tag day on Saturday week, October 10, rain or shine, and it is hoped that everybody will have plenty of loose change on that date.

A meeting of the committee for rosettes was held on Thursday afternoon, and, judging by the number of ladies who were present, the interest in this work is very widespread. The colors chosen this year are very attractive, and any horse decorated with one, or, better still, two, of these rosettes will surely carry itself very proudly. About forty were seated around the tables, amongst whom were noticed: Mrs. Travers, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Dunsford, Mrs. Hopwood, Mrs. Buchanan, Mrs. Carmichael, Mrs. Meldrum, Miss Laura Davidson, Mrs. Kingan, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Denne, Mrs. McDermid, Miss Belcher, Miss Halliday, Miss Dobie and Miss Adams.

MILLBROOK PERSONALS.

Millbrook, Oct. 3.—Miss Lila Pethick and Miss Blanche Hales were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Mills, Lindsay, last week.

Mrs. Jos. Richardson, of Toronto, is a guest of her sister, Mrs. J. L. Richardson.

Miss Flossie Cameron, of Toronto, is a guest of Miss Pearl Nattrass.

Mr. Bert Eagleson, of New York City, is visiting his relatives in Monaghan. Bert was in Millbrook on Monday renewing old acquaintances, among them being some of the old lacrosse boys who fought many a battle some 25 years ago. Bert is making good in the metropolis where he is cutter in one of the largest shoe factories there.

Mrs. Thos. Gillott has received a letter from Mrs. Chas. Gillott, stating that her mother, Mrs. Alex. Strain, of Pierson, Man., was not expected to live.

Rev. Mr. Kenny, formerly of Millbrook, has accepted a call from Cobourg Methodists to become their pastor after the next Conference.

Mr. Robert Jones, of Walla Walla, Wash., has returned after visiting his brother, Mr. Thomas Jones, and other friends on Zion Line. Mr. Jone lived with Mr. H. Hubbeard for about five years, and he was highly respected, being a very fine young man. He has had a very fine position as overseer of a large orchard near Walla Walla. Come again, Bob.

Messrs. J. I. Bentley, A. J. Henderson, J. W. Hamilton and Doc. Morden motored to Picton and the Fair.

CELEBRATION OF GOLDEN WEDDING BY CAVAN COUPLE

Fifty years married is the happy lot of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Carr, of Cavan, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Monday, September 28th. The ceremony was witnessed by the family and the immediate relatives and friends, and was unique in many respects.

On Sept. 27th, 1864, Abraham Carr was united in marriage to Miss Elenor Armstrong, of Cavanville, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Mr. Peck, of Lifford, and then, as now, the lady and gentlemen were held in the highest esteem by their many friends. They were well known throughout the entire countryside, which was not so thickly settled as today, and they are at the present time enjoying the very best of health and are living a quiet, retired life in Cavan.

On the occasion of the marriage a sister of the bride acted as bridesmaid, and the same lady acted in the same capacity again on Monday, 28th inst., in the person of Mrs. Jos. Reynolds, of Lindsay. The groomsman at the first marriage was the late Christopher Armstrong, Mr. Jos. Reynolds acting as groomsman on the anniversary event.

The anniversary of their fifty years of happy married life was fittingly celebrated. Rev. Mr. Clarry, of Peterboro, a former pastor, being present to officiate at the ceremony, at the conclusion of which all partook of a sumptuous repast. The table was prettily decorated and heavily laden with good things, which all proceeded to do justice to. Short speeches and appropriate toasts were made, the various speakers eulogizing on the many good points in the characters of the honored couple, and wishing them many more years of happy married life.

During the remainder of the evening games of various kinds were indulged in and recitations and musical selections enjoyed.

Family Present.

Among those in attendance were the following members of the family: Messrs. Robert Carr, of Peterboro, and Creighton Carr, of Cavan, sons. Daughters: Mrs. J. Keegan, Mrs. W. Pritchard and Mrs. L. Parnell, of Cavan. Brothers: Robt. Armstrong, of St. Catharines, and James and William Armstrong, of Janetville. Sisters: Mrs. Jos. Reynolds, of Lindsay. Mrs. D. Hunter, of Cavan, a sister of Mr. Carr, was also present, as well as a number of friends and distant relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Carr received a number of beautiful presents, which were of the costly and expensive kind.

ADELE BLOOD WOULD PROVIDE NEW PLAYHOUSE

Sees Great Possibilities for National American Theatre

Adele Blood, the actress, claims she can establish a National American Theatre with $10,000 or less. She also states that she will make an attempt to do so within a year.

This information comes through a statement from her. She is at present at her country house in Great Neck, Long Island, preparing for a starring tour in the new play, "Milady's Boudoir," by J. C. Drum, under the management of I. W. Hope. Her contract with Mr. Hope has a season to run and at its conclusion, Miss Blood states, she will take up the National Theatre project. Mr. Hope will be interested with her in the affair. Miss Blood writes:

"Who am I—" she asks, and answers modestly, "I am nobody. But we shall see," she continues, "if the new energies of a nobody cannot accomplish what the stagnant ideas of a group of somebodies failed to realize recently in New York City. In one's personal affairs, I believe in Humility; but where a great idea is to be realized I believe in the ultimate aggressiveness. Therefore I am going to speak my mind out, and that without equivocation.

"A National Theatre in America, one representative of the whole country, will be born of the soil and not of the dollar mark. If ever a great public institution will develop from the sweat of the brow and not from the lining of the pocket, it will be a national theatre. The main reason for the failure of the gilded New Theatre in New York City recently was too much money. With a brigade of check books and a coterie of half-baked theatrical namby-pambies they reminded me of the now ancient story of the bankrupt. A friends tried to sympathize with him and he replied:

" 'Thank you for your kind words, but wasn't it a magnificent failure?' "

"In New York City they built a stately, classic theatre and after announcing that it was intended for a National Theatre proceeded to fill it with foreign and undomesticated plays. They did not have a single practical, dried out and seasoned theatrical man within earshot of the machinery.

"What was the result? They produced in months of endeavor only one thorough success, the foreign play, 'The Bluebird,' and a very mediocre offering of native origin, 'The Nigger.' I doubt if even the latter American play would have been produced had not the author been socially persona grata with the directorship.

"In their swan song, when the attempt was abandoned and admitted to be a failure, the directors pleaded in substance: 'We have read over a thousand plays by new American authors and have found none worthy of production.'

"What a test of one's patience—men deciding the value of plays from a bare reading of the manuscript. No wonder a loud laugh arose in the real theatrical section of the community. Charles Frohman has said that the principal member of the cast of a play is the audience. It is an epigramatic truth which will live after him. There isn't a man living who can foretell the fate of a play from its manuscript, or for that matter any one of its values as a play. It isn't like being a tea tester. Any man who can judge a play from the manuscript and save the big managers the enormous expense of production can become a millionaire in five years. But it's not in the dream book.

"Already in New York theatres three plays by unknown authors have scored the biggest successes of years and the season is only a few weeks old. Not one of them aspires to literary merit, but they are written in the blank verse which is measured by the feet of the toiler. They are the plays of the soil, plays of the heart, plays of the people.

"So I am going to open a repertoire theatre just as soon as my other obligations will permit, and I will make a supreme effort to develop it into a national institution. It may take years but I will guarantee a healthy natural foundation, one which properly started will build itself into a dignified success. I am going to take $10,000, either my own earnings or money loaned by a friend, and either lay down the ground plot of a national theatre, or make a more reasonable and satisfying failure than the New York millionaires did with three million dollars.

"This is simply the method of procedure: I will hire a hall. I'll take a theatre if I can get one, but a hall will do. Shakespeare had candles for footlights. The smaller the beginning the more I will like it. I will organize a utility repertoire company and produce thirty plays by unknown American authors in thirty weeks. That's all.

"The beginning will be humble. I can get half a million dollars for the venture tomorrow. I don't want it and will have no need for it. I don't want an endowment. There isn't a single endowed thing in this country today which has any practical value for the people at large. Humanity in a gilded cage—pah—the man who gives his millions always ties a string to them.

"The American stage is in a bad way," concluded Miss Blood, "what the moving picture hasn't done to it, dry rot has. The old fossil is sitting on the exhaust and won't let the new fellow with ideas bob his head out."

Quidnick-Windham Mfg. Co. mills at Willimantic, Conn., and Quidnick, R.I., were placed in hands of receiver. Between 800 and 900 operatives are affcted.

OPENING RALLY WAS SUCCESSFUL

Large Gathering of Young Women at Y.W.C.A

The Y.W.C.A. was the scene last evening of much activity and enthusiasm. It was the opening rally, outlining the fall and winter work of the association; it was very largely attended and taken advantage of by the young women of the city.

Miss M. Dickson, who presided, gave a cordial welcome to all those present, and outlined the work of the association. Rev. Jas. Rollins had charge of the devotional exercises. Splendid reports of the Muskoka conference were read by Miss Cameron and Miss Denne, and these proved very instructive and entertaining.

Miss A. Peacock, general secretary, then presented her report, setting forth the many advantages to be gained by a young woman or a girl becoming a member. The general secretary outlined the founding of the association and how it had steadily grown until now it had a membership of 18,600 in Canada alone, with branches in 27 cities. She explained the educational and religious work of the association in a very comprehensive way. In part, it helps all young women to realize their fullest development, including physical, intellectual and spiritual, that they may enjoy abundant Christian life.

Miss Peacock also spoke on the great opportunity that the young women of Peterborough could obtain through becoming members.

During the evening Miss Palmer gave a violin solo, accompanied by Miss Gwen Smith. After the business was over, the gathering was entertained to a social hour.

LITTLE CHANGE ALONG THE BATTLE FRONTS

Situation for Gen. Von Kluk is Desperate

Had All Reinforcements Which Can be Spared and Yet He Finds Himself Outnumbered

FURTHER SIGNS OF DEMORALIZATION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 5.—The Daily Mail's correspondents in France report fighting in and around Douai, 18 miles south of Lille, and consider that if the French have reached Douai in force, the situation of Von Kluk must be desperate.

General Von Kluk, the correspondents say, had all the reinforcements which can be spared him, and yet finds himself outnumbered at every point.

There are many indications from German prisoners, from French officers and from members of the British transport service, the combined testimony of whom it is difficult to disbelieve, that the German army is becoming demoralized.

The timidity of German outposts, who surrender when surprised, is strong evidence of their demoralization.

BRITISH PLAYED FOOTBALL

French Soldiers Are Greatly Surprised at Game Between Battles.

FROM THE BATTLEFRONT, Oct. 5.—(Via Paris.) — After the determined attacks and counter-attacks of the past few days, there has been more or less calm along the western front since Saturday afternoon, except on the most extreme wing near Arras, where the fighting has continued incessantly.

The French soldiers were greatly surprised Saturday to see their British comrades after the long spell in the trenches retire to some distance in the rear and inflate several footballs and begin lively games. Some of the British batallions had lost a large proportion of their numbers in the severe battles of the last week, but the zest of the men for the sport was unabated. Two battalions engaged in a regular match, on the result of which some money changed hands. The players stripped off their tunics and caps, but retained their footgear, which was covered with thick layers of clay from the trenches.

Yesterday morning most of the units not actually advanced on the firing line attended open air religious service conducted by the army chaplains.

Towns Damaged by Earthquake

Smyrna, Oct. 5.—The towns of Isbarta, about 25,000 population, and Burdur, about 12,000, in the province of Konia, were severely damaged by an earthquake Saturday night. The loss of life is very heavy.

The towns are centres for the carpet industry.

Cannonading on Land and Sea in Vicinity of Tsing Tau Continues — Japs Shell Gunboat

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Tokio, Oct. 5.—It is officially announced that German infantry at Tsing Tau, delivered a surprise night attack against the Japanese but were repulsed. The Germans had forty-eight killed and the Japanese five killed and eight wounded.

Cannonading on land and sea in the vicinity of Tsing Tau continues. Four Japanese shells hit the German gunboat [illegible] which retired to the inner harbor after exchange of shots.

LOUIS HOUEDRY HAS HEARD CANNON'S ROAR AND HAS SEEN RESULTS ON THE BATTLEFIELD

"No time for business; too busy with powder," writes Louis Houedry, on a postcard received by Mr. Geo. Mather, Charlotte street, this morning. Mr. Houedry, whose family resides on Lock street, left Peterborough in answer to the call for French reservists.

"Terrible sights are to be seen on the battlefield," the message continues. "I was sent back to my depot, guarding 500 prisoners and 875 wounded. Where I will go next, I cannot say, but I do hope it will finish soon, as the sights are sometimes enough to set one crazy.

"I hope the ones I left behind are as well looked after as are the English and Canadians in France.

"Au revoir, good friend. Shake Ben hard for me.

Your friend,
L. HOUEDRY,

5 Rue du Champ de Mars, Rennes.

"Ben," to whom the writer refers, is a foreman for Mr. Mather, under whom Houedry worked for some time.

KING A TRAITOR

Nephew of Roumanian Premier Denounces His Monarch

LONDON, Oct. 5.—"From the commencement of this European conflict the Roumanian people have been hostile to Germany and Austria. This hostility is pushing the people to drastic action—the cry for greater Roumania and the liberation of our brothers in Transylvania. Undoubtedly the situation has placed King Charles in a dilemma, for he already has made his choice between his duty to a free people and his duty as a Hohenzollern.

KING CHARLES OF ROUMANIA.

"This policy of King Charles will give him in history the role of a traitor to the interests of his country, although he is a hero in his staunchness to the Hohenzollern and Hapsburg traditions."

This amazing statement has been given to the public by Victor Jonnesco, nephew of the Prime Minister of Roumania and at present secretary of the Roumanian legation in Paris.

AEROPLANE UNDER FIRE

Bombardment With Shrapnel Leaves British Airman Unscathed

OVER GERMAN LINES

LONDON, Oct. 5.—A despatch to The Morning Post from its Antwerp correspondent says: I witnessed on Friday from the outside of Lierre the most interesting aerial engagement, if engagement is the proper word for a flight under heavy shell fire. A little after four o'clock a British naval biplane rose out of Antwerp and headed for the German lines between Willebroek and Howndonek. These machines fly with almost incredible swiftness. This one passed a fast motor-car going in the same direction as easily as a swallow passes a sparrow.

As soon the the British aeroplane got over the German lines it came under the fire of German guns, especially designed to attack aviators. Two of these guns engaged the aviator. They fired first some ranging shells, which on bursting left a thick ball of black smoke. These shells apparently were fired with a difference in elevation of 500 feet, and were designed to ascertain the elevation of the aeroplane, but the aeroplane seemed to shape its course so as to avoid passing near the smoke balls, which were in any case at a greater height than itself.

The German guns then began with shrapnel fire, as if satisfied with the information given by the ranging shells. Twelve shells were fired, all at a greater height than the areoplane, as if the design were to scatter the balls on it from above. Changing its course occasionally the aeroplane flew about, completed its work and winged its way back to the Belgian lines. Its passage in safety under the bursting shrapnel was one of the most exciting warfare incidents imaginable.

FIRST PRODUCTION OF POWER BY THE HYDRO

Ontario Commission Commences New Era in Its History To-morrow.

TORONTO, Oct. 5. — To-morrow will be recorded as a big day in the history of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, for it will mark the first venture into the actual production of power by a Government commission in the province. Sir Adam Beck will officially open the power plant and developing station at Wausdell Falls, and touch a button that will send light and power flashing into the first three of a string of municipalities in the surrounding district. On the same day inaugural ceremonies in connecion with the new power facilities will be conducted by him in Cannington, Beaverton and Stouffville, the three towns which will begin at once to benefit by the commission program.

Arrangements are being made for mass meetings in the different municipalities in the new power zone, and Sir Adam will deliver addresses on Tuesday evening.

THE BOY SHOULD LEAVE THE FARM.

THE FOLLOWING story appeared in the Guelph Herald, which should occasion serious thought by both town and city folk :

> "The local manager of an automobile branch was going to Drayton fair, and when about eight miles from his destination he overtook a young man about 18 years of age, trudging along the roadside, with a small paper parcel in his hand. The lad was dressed—well, as many farm lads are. He asked if he might get a lift, and upon being seated was asked his destination. He replied that he was going to Drayton fair, and, being asked if the distance was not rather great, the lad unburdened himself. He declared he was one of a family of five boys, his other brothers being at home working. His father, he said, owned 400 acres of land, and they all had to work from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. The lad had never been to Guelph, had for years looked longingly to seeing the Toronto Exhibition, but was disappointed again this year. He then claimed the right to attend the fair at Drayton. "Well, but why didn't you get the loan of one of your father's horses?" he was asked. "I was told that if I wanted to get to Drayton I could walk," he replied, quite naturally, as if such things were a matter of course. "So you're going to have a good time, eh?" "Yes, I hope so," was the bright reply of ever-hopeful youth. "Got lots of spending money to enjoy yourself?" "Well," was the reply, looking at the small parcel he carried, "I have a dozen eggs here which I'm going to sell at Drayton; that ought to get me through somehow!"

Note that this story is true ; it was an actual occurrence in the Province of Ontario. It was not taken from Grimm's Fairy Tales. It is not a case of a wicked relative oppressing a helpless boy, who is freed by a fairy godmother and made the possessor of riches, and a castle. It's a simple tale that happens every day in Ontario. Farmers like these do not know how to bring up their children. They have a false idea of their requirements, their economic worth, their educational necessities. Some farmers think the boy must be made to work all the time, paid as little as possible, and given as few pleasures as possible. The boy has no outlet for his imagination and play instincts. He helps to amass a small fortune, which the father leaves to a family that does not know how to use it. Money is the sole object of such an existence. Do you blame the boy for leaving the farm in such cases as this? The boy should leave the farm. Such a life is not worth living. If a man can get nothing out of life but so many coins or bank bills, he is already ninety per cent. dead. It is really to avoid spiritual and moral contamination that the boy leaves the farm, and often to fall a victim to the evils of city life. A farm should be the most pleasant abode in the world, yet many make it the most repulsive. Farm life is alright—it's the senseless use that some make of it that spoils farm life and drives the young people to other activities.

APPLES SHOULD BE IN GREATER USE.

ONE EFFECT of the war has been to show that an excellent Canadian food product has not been consumed in this country to any great extent. Apples are a very general product of Canada, their quality is good and their variety is large. No doubt the excellence of this fruit has been the chief reason for its great demand in Europe, and its consequent shipment to that continent has caused a lack of it in this country. Now that trans-Atlantic trade is interrupted, large quantities of this fruit are on our hands, and the people are ignorant of many of its adaptations.

The fruit is unusually plentiful and cheap this year, and every cellar in Canada should store at least one barrel of an economical foodstuff which may be treated in so many pleasing ways. The department of trade and commerce at Ottawa will advertise during the next few weeks the value of the Canadian apple as a food product.

In a well-arranged booklet the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, describes the wide range of dishes that can be made with apples as a foundation. The booklet contains 209 recipes. Especially when the apples are cheap, as they are this autumn, and the cost of many staples is high, every Canadian housekeeper should have one of these booklets. By its aid and a little care novel and appetizing dishes can be continuously put on tables that rarely see apples. The making of apple-butter, formerly so popular in the country, could be revived with great benefit both to the makers and to the city housekeepers seeking to keep down butter or jam costs, or to provide a change. Of particular use to those upon whom the necessity of economy presses will be the Government booklet. Those who share the free apples being distributed in the cities can derive particular advantages from it. In London, High School and Public School pupils and business men have combined in arranging to pick and transport to the city large supplies of waste apples. Not only should this creditable co-operation be imitated in other communities, but an effort should be made locally to arrange for the working up of a general interest in the subject-matter of the booklet. The cultivation of apple-consuming would thereby reach thoroughly throughout the communities.

It should be very much in local demand this year, owing to the scarcity of some products and the enhanced prices of others. At the same time people should not forget that in consuming apples they are helping home production, and home or internal trade is always the safest and most profitable to the country in the long run.

NEW INDUSTRIES NEED PROTECTION.

AT A MEETING of the Eastern Townships Boards of Trade, the general trade conditions of that region were reported excellent. With the exception of hay, all crops were good, and business generally showed an improvement over last year, save in a few manufacturing concerns. In the course of his address the president said :

> "I believe it is highly important that our tariff should be so adjusted that manufacturers will be assured for a number of years of sufficient protection to secure our market for them, that they may be encouraged to make the large necessary outlays on patterns, tools and plant to take care of this prospective new business. Many manufacturing establishments have been obliged to reduce their output during the recent depression. but the shelves of the retail merchants are by no means overstocked, and will need replenishing at a very early date."

There is every reason for confidence, so far as trade is concerned. If new industries are to be started with the object of producing goods that formerly came from Germany, certainly they must be protected. Free trade would be fatal to any efforts in this line. At the same time conditions in Canada favor protection. Wages are high, compared with European scales, so that the price of new products can be such as to assure their sale in this country.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE POPULATION of Guelph is this year 16,749, showing an increase of 475 people. The total assessment is $11,023,643.

HON. DR. REAUME may be out of politics, but the house Dr. Reaume built on the slope of the Don isn't, and will not be for some time.—Toronto Star. Quite so, but how can the evil be helped now?

WHEN the war is over, it is hoped the people will know more definitely the significance of "turning movements," of "taking the offensive," of "strategic retreats" and several other war terms.

FROM the Department of Naval Service, Ottawa, comes a useful booklet, "Fish, and How to Cook It." It discusses fish as a food, and gives a large number of recipes which will be useful to the housewife. The total value of all kinds of fish and fish products taken by Canadian fishermen is about $35,000,000 annually. The booklet points out that fish is a comparatively cheap foodstuff. It is not used in Canada as extensively as it should be. We sell much fish that might be well employed on our own tables.

Modern Diplomacy, or How the War Started.

Said Austria, "You murderous Serb,
You the peace of all Europe disturb ;
Get down on your knees,
And apologize, please,
Or I'll kick you right off my front curb."

Said Servia, "Don't venture too far,
Or I'll call in my uncle, the Czar ;
He won't see me licked,
Nor insulted nor kicked,
So you'd better leave things as they are."

Said the Kaiser, "Push in that Serb's face,
It will teach him to stay in his place ;
If Russia says boo,
I'm in the game, too,
And right quickly we'll settle the case."

The Czar said, "My cousin the Kaiser,
Was always a good advertiser ;
He's determined to fight,
And insists he is right,
But soon he'll be older and wiser."

"For forty-four summers," said France,
"I've waited and watched for a chance
To wrest Alsace-Lorraine
From the Germans again,
And now is the time to advance."

Said Belgium, "When armies immense
Pour over my boundary fence,
I'll awake from my nap,
And put up a scrap,
They'll remember a hundred years hence."

Said John Bull, "This 'ere Kaiser's a slob,
And 'is word isn't worth 'arf a bob,
(If I let's Belgium suffer,
I'm a blank bloomin' duffer),
So' ere goes a crack at his nob."

Said Italy, "I think I'll stay out
Till I know what the row is about ;
It's a far better plan
Just to sell my banan',
Till the issue is plain beyond doubt."

Said our good Uncle Sam, "I swaow
I had better keep out of this raow,
For with Mormons and Niggers,
And Greasers, I figgers,
I have all I kin handle just now."

Nothing To Do.

(New York Sun.)

There seems to be nothing for the British navy to do but to patrol the North Sea and blockade the German coast, and be content to bottle up the German battle fleet, and thus control the seven seas, with the consequence that the enemy can get no food and supplies from abroad.

Napoleon Knew the Difficulty.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

It is said that the bombardment of Antwerp is a preliminary to the invasion of England. Napoleon is credited with saying that he knew half a dozen ways to get into England, but not one way to get out again.

A Satisfying Estimate.

DODGING DUTY

By Walt Mason

It is a shame that high class men for office will not stand in line; though asked, again and yet again, this duty all of them decline. The offices all go to skates, to patriots who want the mon; we want good men as candidates—alas, the good men will not run! We want good men with honest hearts, strong men abhorring shams and tricks, brought up in offices and marts, and not in stews of politics. And if, perchance, they ever rise, responsive to our eager calls, we'll batter them with hoots and bawls. We'll show that they are only big in self-esteem, their virtue slim ; we'll prove they stole a widow's pig, and swiped a soldier's wooden limb. We'll deal in fury and in sound, until, disgusted, they retire ; we'll hire cheap sleuths to rake around and dig their records from the mire. We'll quickly jolt them from the groove in which they spend their quiet lives ; with affidavits we will prove that every day they beat their wives. Why don't our good men save the realm, and bleed and die in proper style? The country needs them at the helm—we'll surely make it worth their while!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WHY SUCH RAGE ?

Editor Review :

Dear Sir,—Why does the Examiner rage at the brief remarks of its correspondent, "Snoggs" ? Surely a sore spot must have been touched to bring out that whole column of vituperative stuff. Mr. Snoggs suggests what he thinks is the matter when Christian ministers exult in preparations for war. Why should the Examiner get frantic?

Are not France, England and Germany "Christian countries? And did not these countries, with "ecclesiastical approval," prepare for what they now have? And is not this war the inevitable result of these ecclesiastically approved preparations ?

The Examiner reviles as "kickers, antagonizing decent public opinion," all who think militarist propaganda unbecoming to professed ministers of the Prince of Peace. Since when has the Examiner become qualified to say what is, or is not, "decent public opinion" ?

Perhaps the Examiner would be well-advised to "go easy" on the "able-bodied who have a good excuse for not being in the fighting ranks." There are a goodly number of military-trained patriots in that same fix just now, who are not of Mr. Snoggs' philosophical persuasion.

Yours truly,
A SUBSCRIBER.

PRINCESS ALICE MADE ESCAPE

Had to Run Ashore to Keep Off British Cruiser

SEATTLE, Wn., Oct. 5.—The Blue Funnel liner Talthybius, in port from the Orient, brings details of the pursuit of the German auxiliary cruiser Princess Alice, by the British auxiliary cruiser Empress of Russia, formerly a Canadian Pacific liner, off the Philippines early in September, as already cabled. The German vessel was bound for Tsingtau and was reported to carry $10,000,000 for the German officials there. She was sighted by the Empress and fled at once, pursued by the Britisher. The Empress carries four 6-inch guns and six 4.7-inch guns. The Alice had eight 6-inch guns. The Empress overhauled the German boat and a running fight followed. The German lost the top of her smoke-mast and had her mainmast cut off clean. The stern was torn away and several holes made in the hull. The Empress was unmarked.

The German ship to avoid capture or foundering headed for the Island of Cebu and ran on the beach. The British vessel did not follow inside the three-mile limit. The loss of life was not learned.

Telegraph Poles on Track.

GUELPH, Oct. 5.—An attempt was made Friday night by persons unknown to wreck a Grand Trunk passenger train between Brantford and Guelph. Opposite the siding at the lime kilns, three miles north of Hespeler, the passengers were almost thrown out of their seats by the sudden stopping of the train.

The crew ran back with lanterns, and it was discovered that three large telegraph poles had been placed across the tracks. The engineer did not see the poles in time to stop the train, and he ran into them at full speed. Two of them were broken to pieces, while the third was pushed to one side.

The engine was not derailed, and there was no one hurt.

Snow In Calgary.

CALGARY, Oct. 5.—It is snowing in Calgary, and with a strong wind, and the heavy clouds gathering, it looks as if this district would register a good fall within the next day or two. The temperature has dropped perceptibly and wintry weather prevails.

When pouring boiling water into an empty glass, put a spoon into the glass first. This will prevent it from cracking.

THE YAQUIS' REVENGE

By M. QUAD

Every American of us at the silver mines had turned out with the Mexican soldiery to help drive the Yaquis back to their hiding place in the mountains. It was a case of self preservation with us. When the Yaqui was on a raid he made no difference between the property or scalp of an American and a Mexican. He owned the land before Cortez appeared. The process of weeding him out is still going on.

And so when the news came in that the Yaquis had taken the warpath and killed or driven off the men at the Soltalo mine above us we turned out with the 300 soldiers sent up to meet the war party and drive it back.

For three days we fought the Yaquis before we got them on the retreat. It was not enough, however, that we had saved the big mines and 500 almost defenseless people. Orders came to the colonel to push on after the retreating Indians and hold them up if possible and exterminate them. We went with them to see the thing through and because they had need of our rifles and of our sharpshooting. Once among the mountains the soldiers could no longer move in a body. There was constant fighting, but the Indians were continually forced back. By and by they had reached the women and children and their stronghold, and the Mexican colonel rubbed his hands and laughed and said:

"We have got them penned up at last, and not one shall escape. It is the best show we have had for half a century to exterminate them."

The stronghold of the Indians was a series of rifts and caves in the face of the mountain. There was but one path leading to it. That wound over a number of ridges and then dipped down into a basin which had a circumference of about half a mile. The colonel's plan was to advance the whole force into this basin when night fell, and, taking cover behind the bowlders lying thickly beneath the caves, we should be ready at daylight to begin the work of extermination. While a portion of the troopers kept up a fire to prevent the Yaquis from leaving their caves another portion would collect fuel and smoke them to death. We were not averse to dealing the Indians a hard blow and one to be remembered, but we did not go in for the extermination of a thousand souls at once, more than half of whom were women and children.

"Gentlemen, you are not under my command," said the colonel as he rubbed his hands and smiled, "and you will therefore decide for yourselves. When darkness comes my command will march down into the basin. For fifteen years I have been hunting the Yaquis. For fifteen years I have been hoping for just this chance."

They could not charge us with cowardice, but when our decision not to support them in a massacre was made known there were smiles and expressions of contempt.

An hour after dark the soldiers left us and went marching in single file down into the basin. I do not believe the first man had yet descended into the basin when we suddenly caught sight of a signal fire to the right.

The Yaquis were not to be surprised. During the next hour the whole side of the mountain showed signals at intervals, and then there was an interval of three hours, during which not a light was to be seen. At midnight from the center of the mountain a signal fire suddenly blazed out. It did not last more than a minute and was followed by a noise none of us could make out. It was like the roaring of a gale in a narrow gorge of the mountains, and we had been listening to it for perhaps ten minutes when from the dark basin beneath us arose such a cry as few men ever heard.

"In the name of God, what can it be?" asked each man of his comrade, but no one could answer. Down there in the midnight blackness some terrible tragedy was being enacted, but we must wait for daylight to solve it. The roaring, rushing sound came to us after the scream died away, but more softly than at first. From that hour till dawn came there was no signaling, no noise, nothing to prove that there was life in the mountains beyond our little band. The peaks of the mountains stood out first. Then we followed the dawn down till our eyes rested on the caves. In front of them were hundreds of people, but they were standing quiet and peering down into the basin. In another minute daylight had crept down there, and we looked and cried aloud in horror. The bottom of the basin, as we saw it the evening ing before, had been covered with scrubs and grass. It was a basin still, but the bottom was hidden under ten, twenty, thirty feet of water. There was no outlet, and we could see the waters rushing and swirling round and round as if to find one. And borne on the rush were the bodies of the dead—of the 231 men who had left us a few hours before. Not one had escaped. High up on their side of the mountain the Yaquis had dammed a spring or rivulet and stored up the waters for just such an emergency. At midnight they had let the flood loose, and it had come tearing down at lightning speed to overwhelm the enemy caught like rats in a trap. As we turned away in our horror to make our way down the mountains the Yaquis raised their voices in one long shout of exultation and then were silent. They had reaped their vengeance and were satisfied to let us depart in peace.

The Polar Star.

As is well known to most readers, the north star marks the point in the skies toward which the axes (poles) of the earth point. But the poles have another motion called "precession" (much like the secondary motion of a spinning top), by which the ever changing poles describe a big circle in the sky, reaching from the present north star across to Vega. It requires over 25,000 years to complete that circle, and during that time numerous stars will in turn inherit the title of north star. Eleven thousand years hence the job will fall to Vega, and a most worthy holder of that most important position in the skies he will be. When that time comes Polaris will be almost forgotten.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Longevity of Seeds.

Experiments have been in progress since 1903 under the direction of the Dominion Seed Analyst, to determine the loss in vitality year by year of six of the commonest Canadian farm seeds, timothy, red clover, alsike clover, oats, and spring and fall wheat. The results of the test to date for the four first mentioned seeds appear in the Agricultural Gazette.

Twelve samples of timothy were taken in 1902 and thirteen samples in 1903. The average germination of the 25 samples one year after harvest was 95 per cent. Five years after, the average was 90 per cent. After that, however, a steady loss of vitality was shown, although at the end of ten years, an average germination of 54 per cent. was still shown.

The average germination of 24 samples of red clover one year after harvest was 97 per cent., dropped to 75 per cent. at the end of five years; 64 per cent. at seven years, while after ten years only 44 per cent. were capable of germination.

The average germination of 24 samples of alsike one year after harvest was 93 per cent., and ten years later 45 per cent., or a loss of 48 per cent. during that period.

It is interesting to note that contrary to general opinion, the timothy seed retained its vitality somewhat better than either red clover or alsike.

Martin Honors Irish and Scotch.

Mayor Martin of Montreal was so favorably impressed by the conduct of the British army at the war that the other day he ordered that an Irish flag be put up on the city hall in honor of Lord Kitchener, an Irishman, and that a Scottish standard in honor of the Royal Scots Greys (second dragoons), who bore themselves so gallantly at Mons, Belgium, be placed by the side of it.

When he was giving a city hall employe the order to put up the flags the mayor declared: "The British troops are doing fine work. I wish there were a million of them by the side of their French allies."

The interesting fact is that Kitchener is not an Irishman but an Englishman, born in Ireland. The Kitcheners are an old Leicestershire family. His mother is also English.

FIRELESS KETTLE.

A Convenience That Will Be Welcome In Hot Weather.

The principle of the fireless cooker kettle is the same as the well known fireless cooker except that the kettle does not come in a cabinet. It is made of aluminium and insulated with mica. On the base is a metal ring which prevents the kettle from warping when used for baking purposes. The top is arranged that heat and moisture cannot escape. An asbestos pad accompanies each kettle. On this the kettle is set after it has been allowed to boil about one-third of the time it would require to cook the inclosed food in the ordinary stove. There are four sizes of the kettles, of two, four, six and eight quart capacity, the two quart size being for cereals.

Care of Baby's Ears.

Never by any chance should a baby's ears be filled with soapsuds in the daily bathing; neither should the finger be inserted in the orifice to dig out the soap left.

The washcloth should be rinsed, one corner folded softly to make a sort of small mop, and inserted very gently, never far and never forced.

To use any sort of implement, like a hairpin or the point of a toothpick or, indeed, anything that can possibly enter too far, is to perhaps cause loss of hearing that seems unaccountable.

If a child complains of earache do not gouge into the ears to extract any hard deposit that may have accumulated, but drop a very little melted petroleum jelly—not hot, but melted—from a spoon, insert very lightly a bit of absorbent cotton and cleanse the ear.

Tactless Parents.

In the Woman's Home Companion a story filled with observations of child life comments as follows on the everlasting question that parents ask their children, "Have you washed your face for supper?" The magazine says:

"This is not a happy greeting, as you will realise more keenly if you are able to think back into your own childhood. Very few people can think back definitely, but those who can must remember cautious homecomings by back ways, careful avoidance of mothers and fathers for a few minutes, knowing that the first word that those beloved people would speak would be one of disapproval. What, with torn clothes and dirty hands and coming in late, the return of the child can be and very often is a very trying ordeal."

Drilling the Waitress.

One, if not the first, rule to be learned by the entertaining hostess is that it is better to spend a few hours in drilling a waitress into the routine of proper serving than to pass the hour or more at luncheon or dinner directing with unconcealed nods and whispers what to do next and how.

A hostess whose entertaining left nothing to be desired said she took the trouble when engaging a new waitress to have a table set and the process of serving courses gone through exactly as if guests were present. Thus the girl became entirely at ease, and everything went perfectly on such occasions.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 4.—There was a natural reaction Saturday after the slump of Friday, and the proof that, in spite of there being "little export trade," several million bushels of grain have left Atlantic ports in as many days. Winnipeg wheat opened ⅛c to ⅝c up, and there was an excellent demand for No. 1 northern, which sold at ¼c to ½c over the option. Receipts for No. 1 are steadily declining. Nos. 2 and 3 are not wanted, but No. 4 and lower were in fair demand.

The close showed wheat to have advanced 1¼c to 1⅝c.

Flax was weak and lower. Export houses admitted fair business after the close Friday, but declared bids out of line on the morning advance.

Receipts were 1169 cars, against 1258 last year, and 770 in sight for the day.

Cash: Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.06; No. 2 do., $1.03½; No. 3 do., 97½c; No. 4, 91½c; No. 5, 86½c; No. 6, 81½c; feed, 76½c.

HIS HEAVY CROSS.

It Was Only a Chalk Mark, But Was Too Cumbersome to Carry.

There is a story of an envious tailor current with the French peasantry. He fancied that his neighbor, who received a pension for the loss of an arm incurred while fighting for his country, was better off than himself. Both men went to pay their rent on the same day.

"That's a lucky man," said the tailor to the landlord. "He gets well paid for his arm."

"But who would be willing to part with an arm, even if he were paid for it" said the landlord.

"I would," declared the tailor.

"You!" cried the landlord, "Why, man, you wouldn't be willing to bear anything of the sort, no matter how much you were paid for it."

"I wish some one would try me."

"Now, see here," said the landlord, who had studied human nature, "I'll tell you what—if you'll wear even so much as a chalk mark on your back I'll remit your rent as long as you wear it on your coat so it can be seen, the condition being that you tell no one why it is there."

"Agreed," said the tailor eagerly. "That's an easy way to pay rent."

So the chalk mark in the form of a cross was made on the back of his coat, and the delighted tailor sallied forth upon the street.

Strangers and acquaintances hailed him to tell him of the mark on his back. Jokes were made at his expense, children laughed and pointed at him, and his wife annoyed him with questions and with conjugal familiarity told him he was a fool. The usually amiable man grew surly and morose. He shunned men, women and children and frequented back streets. Before the week was up the tailor found himself embroiled in a quarrel with his best friend, his wife had threatened to leave his house, and he considered himself miserable and ill used.

Finally one night he took off his coat and rubbed out the chalk mark and said: "There! I would not wear that cross on my back another week, no, not if I could have all the money there is in Paris!"

GERMANS REFUSED AN ARMISTICE AT ANTWERP

Attack on Belgian Stronghold Proves Disastrous For Invaders, Who Have Been Repulsed---German Force at Dutch Frontier Captures Lanaken---Belgians Have Destroyed Bridges Over Nethe.

LONDON, Oct. 5. — A despatch to the Central News from Antwerp, dated Sunday night, says:

"The Germans have been repulsed. They asked for a two-hour armistice to bury their dead, but the Belgians refused to comply.

"The Belgians have destroyed all the bridges over the River Nethe. The Germans attempted unsuccessfully to rebuild the bridges."

Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent in a despatch filed Sunday, says:

"The German troops to-day displayed greater activity around the Dutch frontier. They occupied Lanaken after a short bombardment."

An earlier despatch said: "The Germans have also been active in two widely-separated parts of Belgium. They visited Tournai on Saturday and announced that they were an advance guard of 10,000 men proceeding to Lille, while last night and this morning fighting was going on far to the east near Lanaken, northwest of Maestricht. One report said that Lanaken was on fire, but another declared that it was a nearby village that was burning. A number of fugitives have arrived at Maestricht, as well as some Belgian soldiers, who have been interned."

GHENT, Oct. 5. — The Germans made no forward movement all day Saturday. Southward of Antwerp there has been scarcely a shot fired near tho Antwerp forts or the Scheldt defences. Skirting Ghent on the loop line, I have seen many trains in operation. Early yesterday morning the Germans blew up the railway bridge near Grammont to prevent the allies from using that route to cut off the German retreat from northern France by bringing troops down to Enghien.

There has been heavy fighting east of Antwerp, the Germans yesterday having concentrated on the forts on that side, but it has been in favor of the defenders. One of the huge 17-inch guns of the Germans was located by a Belgian aeroplane and destroyed by concentrated Belgian artillery fire. Scouts proceeding as far southwards as Nienov report that they have seen no Germans whatever.

FIRST FOUNDATIONS OF RHEIMS CATHEDRAL WERE LAID IN 400

Rheims catherdia 800 years old—

It is difficult to say to what extent the German shells have demolished the cathedral at Rheims, but since the Germans showed little compunction for their vandalism, and since a battle is again raging in this vicinity, it is not improbable that the damage may be increased, and that the world of art may have to mourn as one of the mute tragedies of the war the complete destruction of one of the greatest works of genius that has been left upon the earth. No Canadian or American can appreciate what the loss means to the people of France. They, with the rest of the world that admires the grandeur and majesty of great architecture, have suffered an irreparable loss. But they have lost, too, as the British nation would lose if Westminster Abbey were to be destroyed and all its memorials given to the flames. The heart of religious France, of historic France, was not in Paris. It was in Rheims; and there can be not the slightest doubt that it was for this reason, and this reason alone, that the German vandals turned their guns on Rheims.

Ancient Rheims.

The City of Rheims is very ancient. It was flourishing when Gaul was being conquered by Caesar, and early became a centre of Christianity. It received its name from the "Remi" tribe of Gauls who inhabited the surrounding country. Its first experience of the conqueror was when it was rased by Attila, and in 506 it was captured by the Franks. In 720 it was captured by Charles Martel from Bishop Rigobert and it was in Rheims in 816 that Pope Stephen had his historic interview with Pepin, and attended the crowning of Louis the Debonnaire, Rheims having been made an Archbishop's See in 744. Ever since it has been the ecclesiastical capital of France, the Archbishop of Rheims being the Metropolitan Primate. With four exceptions all the Kings of France have been crowned at Rheims. Clovis, son of Childeric, King of the Franks, conquered the last Roman stronghold at Soissons, accepted Christianity, and was baptized at Rheims on Christmas Day, 496, and with few interruptions for thirteen hundred years the long and picturesque line of French kings received the crown at Rheims, the most notable spectacle of all being when Joan of Arc placed the crown on the head of Charles VII.

First Foundation in A.D. 400.

The first foundation of the Cathedral of Rheims was laid in the year 400 to commemorate the teachings of St. Remi. Four hundred and eighteen years later the foundations of a new church were laid on the same site, and the completed cathedral was consecrated in 862. This building was destroyed by fire in 1210, only the ancient crypt partly surviving. Here was reared in the course of the next thirty years the famous cathedral that has just been attacked. The architect was Robert de Coucy, and for this work alone he will be remembered as one of the greatest architects of all time. One of the most remarkable things about his work is that it was carried out exactly as planned. There were no alterations in the course of the thirty years it took in building, and when it was completed there was no intermixture of styles, no anachronism, no alleged improvements, additions or what not. The cathedral was the cathedral that he had prayed and dreamed.

The Work of the Sculptors.

Two cathedrals in France were larger than that at Rheims, the cathedral at Amiens and at the Chartres, but as Ruskin said, it would be impossible to say which was the lovelier petal of the cinque foil, whose heart was Notre Dame de Paris, the other cathedrals being those of Rouen and Bourges. Rheims Cathedral was 485 feet long, 101 feet wide, and 124 feet high. Whether the building itself or the sculptured figures with which it was gorgeously peopled were the greater wonder is a question that art authorities have discussed, but while the cathedral was practically completed in thirty years, the right tower was not finished until 1430, and for more than two hundred years sculptors worked lovingly at its ornamentation. Probably its most priceless treasure was the famous rose window, which dated in part to the thirteenth century, when the glass-maker's art was at its zenith. It was nearly 40 feet across and contained 24 sections. It was designed by Bernard de Soissons, and critics have pronounced upon it the single word, "Perfect."

Treasures of Rheims.

There were other treasures of Rheims, such as the tapestries, which hung all along the aisles. The church plate, too, which we suppose was saved, was of inestimable value, and comprised such pieces as a chalice of St. Remi of the eleventh century, a reliquary containing a thorn from the Holy Crown, the marble font in which Clovis was baptized, the chasuble of Louis XII. and the Sainte Ampoule, which contained the holy oil said to have been brought by a dove from Heaven for use at the conversion of Clovis. The windows on the cathedral are said to have only two equals, those of Chartres and those in the Cathedral of Burgos, Spain.—Mail and Empire.

NOT DRUGS
Food Did It.

After using laxative and cathartic medicines from childhood a case of chronic constipation yielded to the scientific food, Grape-Nuts, in a few days.

"From early childhood I suffered with such terrible constipation that I had to use laxatives continuously going from one drug to another and suffering more or less all the time.

"A prominent physician whom I consulted told me the muscles of the digestive organs were weakened and could not perform their work without help of some kind, so I have tried at different times about every laxative and cathartic known, but found no help that was at all permanent. I had finally become discouraged and had given my case up as hopeless when I began to use the pre-digested food, Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had not expected this food to help my trouble, to my great surprise Grape-Nuts digested easily from the first and in a few days I was convinced that this was just what my system needed.

"The bowels performed their functions regularly and I am now completely and permanently cured of this awful trouble.

"Truly the power of scientific food must be unlimited." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Trial 10 days of Grape-Nuts, when regular food does not seem to sustain the body, works wonders. "There's a Reason."

RUSSIANS WIN COMPLETE VICTORY IN AGUSTOWO

Big Engagement on Frontier of East Prussia Ends in a Triumph For the Russian Arms and Germans in Flight Have Abandoned Wounded, Trains, Guns and Ther Munitions of War.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 5.—The official communication from the general staff headquarters, issued last night, reads:

"The battle of Augustowo ended yesterday, Oct. 3, in a victory for the Russian arms. The German defeat is complete.

"The enemy is at this moment in a disordered retreat and in flight toward the East Prussian frontier. The valiant Russian troops are in close pursuit, the Germans abandoning in their desperate march trains, cannons and munitions, not having even time to gather up their wounded.

"It is already known that the battle of Augustowo, began on Sept. 29 with a bombardment by the German heavy artillery in the region of Sopotzkin (on the left bank of the River Niemen), followed by an offensive movement by the enemy against the same fortified town.

"At the same time, the Germans made repeated efforts to crush and dislocate the Russian forces near Druskeniki on the Niemen.

"On Sept. 26 the Germans also began an attack on the fortresses of Ossowets, but everywhere met with fierce resistence and were compelled to retreat. Not satisfied with counter attacks, our troops took the offensive vigorously and pursued the enemy. Notwithstanding the energetic resistance offered by the Germans, they could not check the onward rush of our troops, who captured the enemy's positions, one after another.

"Routed by this irresistible engagement, the Germans weakened and are at present in full retreat, they are leaving our territory in haste. At certain points this retreat is degenerating into a flight."

An official communique issued Saturday night said:

"Yesterday in the region of Augustowo the enemy developed an extremely obstinate defence in positions to the north of Lake Tligra. They made a desperate attack from Rachka and Borjiman, trying to seize the western exits from Augustowo forest. On the road to Ladzee and Shipliska the first German cavalry division attempted to stop the advance of Russian squadrons. A desperate fight proceeded until darkness set in. The German cavalry recoiled and fell back in disorder with terrible losses before the Russian charge, sweeping back in general flight their own infantry supports. The Russians have occupied Raigrod, Kalkaria and Mariampol. Minor encounters have occurred in the region of Kielce.

"In the Carpathians the Russians have descended into the valley of the Nat Iag. An Austrian detachment was defeated at Migulitse and lost their guns and maxims in the fighting.

The military critic of Russky Slowo says that the German army assembled in Silesia includes two Bavarian corps and that the army is commanded by the King of Bavaria.

"The Russians now have to deal with a total of six armies," he says. "Two of these in East Prussia constitute the left flank, two in West Poland form the centre and two others are concentrating on the right wing in West Galicia.

"The Polish peasants in Kalisz, Russian Poland, are carrying on a guerrilla warfare, in which the Germans and the peasants hunt each other on the forest with the aid of snares and entanglements. No mercy is shown on either side."

DEFEAT OF ENEMY AT ROYE HAS WON BATTLE FOR ALLIES

Tremendous Assault Has Failed Utterly and Movement of Allies Will Probably Hem in German Right—Allies Capture Trench After Trench in Vigorous Fighting of Saturday—Wing Near Belgium.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The victory of French arms at Roye, where the tremendous assault of the Germans—their major effort of the Aisne campaign—has been completely defeated, is declared to be the deciding point in the twenty-three day battle. A great operation has been launched to hem in the German right in such a way that it cannot reach new defences in Belgium. Great forces are being rapidly concentrated by the allies in an effort to drive a wedge through the forces commanding the railway from Lille to Belgium. This effort is expected to develop in the neighborhood of Arras, where strenuous fighting has already taken place.

In addition to the steady hammering of the allied forces against the entire German right wing, the efforts of the Franco-British are bent directly on the line of German communications. These and these only have enabled Von Kluk to put up his magnificent resistance. By attempting a series of flanking operations, the allies may have delayed the success of their arms, but have saved thousands of lives that would have been thrown away in frontal attacks on the strong German positions. In order to make these flanking operations effective at once, huge reinforcements have come up on the extreme northern end of the allied line, and it is thought that the East Indians landed at Marseilles a few days since are by this time on the fighting line. They may be the deciding factor.

But the Germans are by no means short-handed. It is even reported from some quarters that their manoeuvres are handicapped by the presence of unwieldly masses.

To the east, in the Woevre region, the French advance goes ahead unremittingly. They are reported in command of positions which seriously menace German communications through Luxemburg, even threatening their main supply depot at Prinsiville. It is felt that the steady and unsuccessful movement in that quarter indicates a weakness on the part of the exhausted German armies. The same factor has paralyzed operations on the centre of both armies.

The allied commanders are believed to be preparing for the greatest assault of the war near Arras, which will take the form of a frontal attack in tremendous force. On it hinges the result of the Aisne battle; the Germans have made a supreme effort at Roye and failed.

Germans Forced Back.

FROM THE BATTLEFRONT, Oct. 5.—Trench after trench of the German line fell into the possession of the allies on Saturday after most vigorous assaults, carried home with determination, combined with the newly-learned lesson of caution.

The Germans who had borne back the allies' western wing slightly retained their advanced positions near Roye until they became untenable. They then fell back to new lines which had been previously prepared.

The western wing of the allied armies was still farther extended yesterday and now reaches within 30 miles of the Belgian frontier, carrying the allies' overlapping movement in a northeasterly direction.

The German reinforcements on this end of the line are very strong. These troops probably were brought from bodies of German forces echeloned in the rear of their advanced entrenchments. Their courageous dashes to the allies' front did not meet with success, and the French and British were able to make them fall back on their deep trenches.

The sight of the allied infantry creeping across the open spaces in front of the trenches, in a brilliant sunshine which glittered on their weapons, was impressive. Hundreds of shells burst overhead in their rear without doing damage.

Everywhere the French and British soldiers seemed as though glued to the ground, but yet their widely extended lines progressed always forward. In only two or three instances did they encounter the spitting machine gun fire with its murderous hail of bullets, which opened on them when they surmounted slight eminences, before reaching the German trenches. They found few Germans there to meet their boynets, as the invaders had retired to another line only a few hundred yards back.

It is stated that the Germans also receded on the eastern wing, where for many days they have been going back continually. In that region of the great battlefield the famous French Alpine riflemen came in contact with the Germans and inflicted considerable loss.

In the centre there was comparative calm, although the artillery and infantry kept firing occasionally as though to remind their adversaries of their presence.

The aviators on each side have kept continual watch on the movements of the enemy, and sometimes have dropped shrapnel bombs, generally with small effect, as the troops are well sheltered in their burrows.

SERMON ON THE HOLY ROSARY BY REV. FATHER FITZPATRICK

Tthe month of October is set aside by the Catholic Church as a month during which devotion to our Lady of the Holy Rosary is especially fostered. Yesterday, the first Sunday of the month and Feast of the Holy Rosary, was fittingly celebrated at the Church of the Sacred Heart.

At seven o'clock in the morning the members of the Sacred Heart Total Abstinence Society and T.A.S. Cadets assembled on the ground adjoining the school of the Sacred Heart and marched in procession to the church where they attended seven-thirty mass clebrated by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, chaplain of the Society. The men and boys received Holy Communion in a body and renewed their pledges. Rev. Father O'Brien commended the society on the excellent turnout and urged them to further the cause of temperance. He made special reference to the large number of boys who were present, remarking how the boys of today by shunning the bar-room and intoxicating liquor would be laying the foundation for a temperance community in years to come. At the meeting of the society in the afternoon several committees were formed whose duties will be to canvass various sections of the parish and secure new members.

Vespers in the evening, sung by Rev. J. V. McAuley, was marked by an eloquent sermon by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick of Ennismore on The Holy Rosary. His text was from the Gospel of St. Luke, chapter I, verse 28, "Hail, full of grace, the Lord is with thee, blessed art thou amongst women." The speaker dwelt on the various prayers that constitute the Rosary or as it is better known, the beads. He went to the origin of each prayer, making special reference to the main prayer, namely, the Hail Mary, which is founded on the words of the text. After the prayers he dwelt on the mysteries meditated on while the beads are being said. They are, the five joyful mysteries, the five sorrowful mysteries, and the five glorious mysteries.

Father Fitzpatrick urged the large congregation to practice devotion to the Blessed Virgin especially during the month of October and thereby be honoring God for Jesus Christ was a true son and is honored when His mother, the Blessed Virgin Mary, is honored.

57th Volunteers Are in Fine Spirits Writes Major Bennett

A letter dated Friday, October 2nd, has been received from Major Bennett. It was written on board a transport, conveying the 57th Regiment to England. They were waiting in Gaspe basin, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, south of the island of Anticosti.

Major Bennett states that the boys are enjoying life immensely. They have games on deck every day. They have all the comforts of home, even to bath tubs where the boys can take their usual morning dip. They were waiting for the rest of the transports. The fleet comprised about 19 ships and 11 cruisers to guard them on the way over. Major Bennett reports that the boys are taking on weight and some of them have had to have their clothes enlarged. Every man has a bunk of his own and everything is very comfortable.

PORT HOPE BOYS WON RUGBY GAME

It Was Hard Going in the Hot Sun

A rubgy team from the T.C.S. of Port Hope came to the city on Saturday and took the representatives of the P.C.I. into camp at Riverside Park to the extent of 34-16. The game was very ragged, fast and hard work being impossible owing to the heat. At half time the score stood 22-0 in favor of the lake shore aggregation.

CANADIAN ARMY AN EXAMPLE OF UNITY

People at Home Should Also Strive to be United

A large congregation was present in Charlotte Street Methodist church last evening. The service was of a patriotic nature. Miss Richardson sang "O Canada," and the text, taken from Joshua, was made applicable to the Canadian contingent. Mr. Wilson used the Canadian army corps as an example of unity, not only within itself of the Empire as well. He said those who remain at home should strive to be as united and not divided by the pursuit of mere gain and other selfish ends. People should realize that they are part of one great brotherhood, and it is as necessary that citizens do their part well as it is for the soldiers in the field.

FIRST ANNUAL TEA DREW LARGE CROWD TO ORANGE HALL

The first annual tea and concert of L.O.L. No. 2440, held in their hall, Brownton, North Monaghan, on Thursday, Oct. 1st, was a great success. The hall was filled to the doors with members and friends. Supper was served from 6 till 8.30 after which a splendid program was given. Bro. Geo. McCartney, grand organizer, filled the chair in an able manner. The band of L.O.L. No. 50 gave several selections which were greatly appreciated. The entertainment was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem, Rule Britannia and God Save the King.

MANY FRIENDS AT FUNERAL OF LATE MRS. MATCHETT

The funeral of the late Mrs. R. M. Matchett was held yesterday afternoon from the family residence, 384 Mark St., to the Little Lake Cemetery.

The funeral which was a large one, testified to the high esteem in which Mrs. Matchett was held. The services at the house and grave were conducted by the Rev. F. A. Conners, of Park Street Baptist Church.

The bearers were the deceased's three sons, Messrs. M. W., Stanley and Oscar S. Matchett and three nephews, Messrs. George, Willie and James Savigny.

OBITUARY

MRS. GEORGE MILBURN.

The death occurred at five o'clock this morning of Mrs. George Milburn, at the family residence, on the Chemong Road. The late Mrs. Milburn who was born in Ennismore 48 years ago had been ill for two weeks, with an ailment of the heart.

Residents of the city and vicinity will be very sorry to learn of her death, as the deceased had endeared herself to a wide circle of friends. A Methodist in religion, the late Mrs. Milburn, was a member of Charlotte Street Methodist Church.

Her husband and three children, Beatrice, Marion and Joseph Allan are left to mourn her loss besides her aged mother.

The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon from the family residence to Little Lake Cemetery. Service at the house at two o'clock.

JOHN SMYTHE.

The death of Mr. John Smythe, of Cavan, took place yesterday. He had lived in Cavan for the greater part of his life, and was highly respected and esteemed by everyone who knew him. He was 76 years of age.

Left to mourn his loss is one brother, Rev. William Smythe, of Morrisburg.

The funeral will leave the residence of Mrs. David Smythe, lot 22, con. 8, Cavan, on Tuesday, Oct. 6, at 2.30 p.m. Service at the house at 2 o'clock. Interment takes place at Fraserville cemetery.

JOSEPH CLARKE.

John Clarke, an inmate at the house of Providence passed away last evening aged 70 years.

The funeral was held this morning to St. Peter's Cathedral and Cemetery.

CUTTING OFF VON KLUK

Huge Door is Being Shut to Bar German Wing's Retreat.

LONDON, Oct. 5. — The Daily News has the following from its correspondent, H. M. Tomlinson, dated in France, Saturday, Oct. 3: The violent and repeated attacks of the Prussians against the French line between Craonne and the Argonne were intended to mask a great and rapid German movement, which, aided by reinforcements from Germany, through Belgium, was meant to outflank the allies primarily, and, in any case, to secure the main German lines of communication and a broad road home. But the French were quicker; their wonderful railways prepared a shocking surprise for Von Kluk. The impregnable British position by Soissons was the hinge of this huge door, which was being shut against the exit of the German army, vainly at Noyen and at Roye the Germans have thrown their strength against this closing of the barrier, and they have been thrown back.

I cannot say that the German line through Valenciennes, Cambrai and St. Quintin has yet been cut, but if an official communication now announced it, it would not surprise me.

TURCOS CLIMBED TREES

Fought Hand to Hand With Imperial Guard

LONDON, Oct. 5.—A despatch to The Evening News, from Copenhagen, reports that the correspondent of The Berliner Tageblatt, who witnessed the battle at Verdun, on Sept. 24, when Prince Oscar led the Imperial Guard, says: Though the Germans fought like lions, the Turcos climbed trees like monkeys, hiding in the leaves. The Germans and Turcos fought and wrestled in a terrible hand-to-hand struggle, and many German officers fell dead around the prince, who thereafter had the heart attack already described.

He was taken to the hospital at Metz in a rather serious condition. Arrived there he began to regain strength, and when told that the Kaiser had conferred the Iron Cross on him he brightened up visibly.

The decoration was pinned on him by Gen. Von Strantz, who received it in 1890.

FOUR CLASSES, LIBERAL PRIZES FOR PLOWING

At a meeting of the directors of the Peterborough County Plowmen's association held in the office of Farm and Dairy on Saturday afternoon, final arrangements were completed for the plowing match for the championship of the county of Peterborough, which it is proposed to hold on Wednesday, October 28. The farm on which the match will be held has not been definitely decided upon, but will be selected within the course of the next few days.

The committee has decided to have four classes and to offer liberal prizes. The first class will be open to all and will be held in sod. The second class will be open to all and will be held in stubble. The third class will be open to boys under 21 and will be held in sod. The fourth class will be open to boys under 18 and will be held in stubble. Any kind of single furrow plow will be allowed to be used. Four prizes will be offered in each class.

A committee composed of ex-Warden Garbutt and H. B. Cowan, of Farm and Dairy, who had been appointed to see what prize list could be arranged, reported on Saturday that practically all the prizes had been secured. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., has donated a cup worth $50 to the Peterboro county council for permanent competition. This will be offered as the first prize in the first class. The party winning it will have his name engraved on the cup and can hold it for one year, when it will be returned to the county council. With the cup each year will be given a bronze medal, which will become the permanent property of the party winning it. In this way the names of the champion plowmen from year to year will be recorded for all time on this cup, which, when not in the hands of the competitors, will be kept in the county council building. The second prize in this class will amount to $20 in cash and has been donated by Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P. The third prize in this class will be $15 in cash and has been donated by Mr. F. D. Kerr.

First prize in the men's class in stubble will be $16 in cash and has been donated by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A. The second prize will be $12 in cash and has been donated by the Peter Hamilton Co. The first prize for the boys' class in sod will be $16 and has been donated by Mr. E. A. Peck, ex-M.L.A. The first prize in the boys' class in stubble will be $15, and has been given by Mr. G. N. Gordon. The second and third prize in this class of $12 and $8, respectively, have been given by Farm and Dairy, and the fourth prize of $5 by Mr. Vincent Eastwood. The other prizes will be announced later, as also will the rules governing the match. Other contributors to the prize list include Mr. R. J. Soden, Mr. Travers of the Bank of Montreal, and Mr. Pennefather of the Union Bank.

As it is over twenty years since there has been a plowing match in Peterborough county, it is believed that great interest will be taken in this match. Winners in the different classes will be eligible to compete in the provincial plowing match, which will be held early in November, probably near Toronto.

TURKISH WOMEN.

They Are Gradually Obtaining Their Emancipation.

It is generally thought that Turkish women are far behind their Western sisters in intelligent and independent thinking.

This, however, is not the case, for during the last few years, the Turk's womenfolk have made great progress in learning. In fact, the educated Turkish women, the writer of the article continues, is in many ways far ahead of our Western sisters, for she is generally a linguist, and while we allow our daughters to spend most of their time in sport, the Turkish girl is kept as a rule more strictly to her studies, and as a result she can discuss politics and most other subjects of general interest with an ease that would astonish the average English girl.

It is obvious, therefore, that the Turkish woman should assert herself and emerge from her seclusion—not by discarding the "Charchaff," but by seriously taking up some work that will either help her financially or give her some more wide and general interest than she can possibly find if she remains at home hiding her talents behind the "kafess."

Europeans are too apt to imagine says a Turkish correspondent, that Turkish woman as some one clad in diaphanous draperies and completely shut off from the world. It is for the Turkish woman to prove that she is, if anything, more capable and able to take her part in life than many of her European sisters.

There are many large companies and institutions in Constantinople that would be only too willing to employ women clerks could they but find good and accurate workers. Why, therefore, should not Turkish girls apply for such employment, especially as several are already employed in the new telephone company?

The Turkish woman has again an important part to play in her country's history (she did great things in ancient times) I am quite convinced, and I believe that she can only begin to play that part by associating herself more closely with the business and public side of life, and by doing so she will not only help herself, but her country also in a very real and efficient manner.

I think I am right in saying that there are many Turkish women today who would like to take up some serious occupation, either from pecuniary motive or merely as a matter of interest outside the home life. For obvious reasons this was impossible in the past, but now, with the constitution and its happy relaxation of many of the old restrictions that so handicapped the Turkish woman, things have changed somewhat, and the time is right for her to take a part in the outside world.

Owls' Queer Home.

A pair of solemn little brown owls have made their home in a strange place on the farm of a certain English fruit grower. They have laid their eggs in the furnace of a movable boiler used for washing beehives. The fire has not been lighted recently, but the boiler is in daily use, and when the owls are "at home" they do not mind this at all. They enter and leave their home by means of the small iron chimney attached to the copper.

Nature lovers are intensely interested in this species of owl because it is not native to England. It originally was brought from Spain. The little owl flies by day as well as by night.

Headache Cure.

For summer headaches there is nothing better than an aromatic sponge. Any good cologne or toilet water can be employed for this, though Florida water, bay rum and lavender water are perhaps the most effective.

Fill a basin with very hot water. Add cologne until the vapor of steam arising from the mixture is pungent; then with a bit of old, soft table linen dipped into the water bathe the face gently, patting it rather than rubbing it.

Use a rotary motion on forehead and temples and when the face feels soothed reheat the water or add more, dip the cloth into it, wring out a little and allow the dripping cloth to rest at base of brain and behind the ears.

Then lie with body relaxed and eyes closed for at least fifteen minutes.

Baseball's Two Greatest Infields

The "$100,000" Quartet of Mack Doesn't Shade the Braves Much Says Fullerton

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON

	1b.	2b.	3b.	ss.
Athletics	.681	683	679	665
Boston	.674	680	657	682

Comparison of the infields of the Boston Braves and the world's champion Athletics is likely to result in another surprise to the wise ones of the game.

Again, as in the outfield, we discover the Athletics the stronger, much stronger in offense, a little stronger in defense, a trifle better on the bases, but in no case strong enough to claim to out class Stallings' men.

The strength of the two teams appears to be distributed so that they do not come in contrast as strongly as most teams do. Both are strong at second and short, the difference at first is not overwhelming, but the Athletics show the most pronounced superiority at third. A study of the third base situation does not make it hopeless for Boston.

To be inferior in defense in the position where the fewest chances happen is fortunate.

Yet, considered from every standpoint—attack, defense, batting, running, throwing, fielding, and inside work, Boston's infield shows an average of .673 against the Athletic's .677.

This advantage is not enough to make the Athletics the odds on favorites they are in the series — although their attacking force—in the initial attack and in driving in runs, is overwhelming and must be offset either by Boston's defensive work around second base or by pitching.

Let us study them man for man. McInnis is today the ranking first baseman of the country. He is strong in every department of the game, a desperate determined, nervy player. This is his one fault and his greatest danger in such a series. If hard pressed McInnis is likely to break through sheer over anxiety to do things. He is not quite tall enough for the ideal first baseman. but he overcomes that by sheer brilliancy and determination.

Schmidt reminds me more of Frank Chance, during Chance's earlier career, than any first baseman I ever have seen. He has the same fault—slowness in finding the bag and turning to take throws. Remember Maranville and Evers are about as rapid in getting the ball away once it touches their hands as any two men ever were. All season since he developed into Stallings' life saving first baseman Schmidt has been getting turned around just in time to catch the ball and save himself from being hit in the face.

Comparison of Eddie Collins and Johnny Evers is superfluous. They are the two greatest second basemen in the world. Just now Collins is near his best form and Evers has had a remarkable season and is finishing strong.

Maranville is one of the marvels of the age and it is no discredit to Jack Barry to be classed slightly below him. The Rabbit has speed, nerve, brilliancy and hitting power. Do not think I underestimate Barry. I believe he is one of the most underestimated players in the country.

But, admire him as we may, we must detract several points from Barry's average. He has not been going quite so fast this year as he is commencing to show the result of years of hard wear and tear around second base.

We have to study in considering short and second, not only the individuals themselves, but how they work together. Collins and Barry have worked together for years and each knows every move the other will make. They are like cogs in a machine and each adds to the value of the other.

Their exhibition of lightning work in the last two games of the world's series last fall was a revelation that convinced even the most doubtful of the New York fans that the Giants were being beaten by a superior club. In spite of their rapidity, it would take more rapid timing than any watch existing could do to declare they work faster than do Evers and Maranville.

Baker is not fast, does not cover as much ground as either Smith or Deal, but depends upon solid blocking of hard drives to make up for his lack of footwork. He is rather awkward around third, especially in touching runners and he has a habit of blocking with one leg that is dangerous to himself and to the runner.

Summing up—we find the Athletics the better infield for all purposes, harder to stop and more likely to produce a bunch of runs should the opposing pitcher waver even for an instant.

Watch this pair of speed artists in the world series. Maranville, the Braves' lightning shortstop, and McInnis, of the Athletics, the quickest first baseman in the country.

COMMENT

As You Like It

Dick Sheehy was on the line-up of 'Varsity on Saturday and helped to defeat the Old Boys, 23-20.

Frank Heffernan contributed two 30-yard runs for the T. R. and A. A. against the Tigers Saturday; nevertheless, the Jungle Kings won, 22-2.

Umpire Klem established what is believed to be a record in baseball history Thursday, at the game between the Boston and the New York National league teams. In the seventh inning, while the Giants were at bat, Klem took exception to what he regarded as unusually loud talking on the New York bench. He ordered the players to lower their voices.

Deciding presently that he had not been obeyed, Klem directed that the bench be cleared of everybody except Acting Manager Mike Donlin and the bat boy. Christy Mathewson headed the banished players, and they marched single file, hands on one another's shoulders, across the field to the club-house, imitating in their progress the so-called lockstep required of convicts in some prisons.

Charles Albert Bender, son of the Chippewa, will undoubtedly be called upon by Connie Mack for service in the first game of the world's series with the Boston Braves.

Bender is the man Mack declares has "never failed him in a pinch." Bender is the man Mack has been grooming for his series, and Bender in his work of this year seems to be the man for Mack to depend upon.

When Mack was in Detroit a week or so ago, he said:

"The Athletics haven't won the American league pennant—yet; but if we do get into that series, Bender will be my pitching dependency. That's sure."

The Athletics cinched their hold on the flag in St. Louis on Sunday—and Bender was the man who sent them across. The Indian shut out Rickey's men on four scattered hits, and at no time was there any question as to the winner of the game.

The big series will open on Friday, October 9. Bender will be used in that game. Saturday Plank will be just about ready, and on Monday Bender will be in shape to go back against Stallings' men.

In a pitching sense the Braves will have the advantage over the Athletics, in that they will have three dependable men in James, Rudolph and Tyler. Mack will have to build his main hopes around his two veterans. But then, Mack has such a tremendous advantage in batting strength that there is a very good chance that he is not worrying over the pitching edge of Stallings.

Bender has shown more consistency in his work this season than in several years. He has pitched well in practically every game he has entered, and he holds the 1914 major league record of 15 consecutive victories. Bender is also in better health this year than in any other season when the Mackmen won the American league pennant, and he should be able to carry through the brunt of the work.

Taking No Chances.

"We are going to have a golden wedding next year."

"Why, you haven't been married fifty years!"

"I know it, but we might not stay married that long."

Not Specific.

"I am an optimist."

"Why?"

"Well, it is a cheerful thing to be."

"But you might be an idiot for the same reason."

STATISTICS FROM CANUCK LEAGUE

Trout the Real Leader With the Bat

The official statistics of the Canadian Baseball league have just been given out by President J. P. Fitzgerald. A feature was the hitting and fielding of Jack Mitchell, of Ottawa, who stood third with the bat and led all the shortstops in fielding, accepting 171 chances and making only 16 errors for a percentage of .949.

The official standing of the league gives Ottawa the championship, with five points over London:

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Ottawa	76	45	.628
London	71	43	.623
Erie	64	57	.529
Toronto	55	55	.500
St. Thomas	48	60	.444
Peterborough	49	62	.441
Hamilton	47	66	.416
Brantford	46	68	.404

The Heavy Hitters.

Eunich of Hamilton, with an average of .363, tops the list of batters, but he played in only 19 games. Trout of Toronto is the real leader with the bat. In 100 games he hit for a percentage of .349. Mitchell of Ottawa is next with .343 for 59 games. The others in the select class are: Sandusky, Brantford, .343; Haris, Erie, .330; Bierbauer, London, .329; Loud, Toronto, .324; Furressdon, St. Thomas, .324; Lamy, London, .320; Neale, London, .320; Mullin, London, .314; Nill, Ottawa, .310; Snell, Toronto, .310; Bullock, Ottawa, 308; Schaeffer, Erie, .304; Carney, Erie, .302; Welsh, Peterborough, .302; Rogers, Ottawa, .302; Kustus, St. Thomas, .302; Cooper, Erie, .301.

Home Runs.

"Rube" Deneau of Brantford had 7 home runs; Frank Shaughnessy, Ottawa, 6; Dudley, Brantford, 6; Rogers, Ottawa; Ivers, Hamilton, and Dolan, Ottawa, 5 each.

Haris of Erie led the league in stolen bases, 47; Bierbauer, London, 43; Linneborn, London, 42; Kopp, St. Thomas, 40; Shaughnessy, Ottawa, 37.

Pitchers' Records.

The 12 leading pitchers in the league were:

COL. HUGHES BACK

He Will go on Recruiting Reinforcements

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—Col. Hughes arrived back in Ottawa yesterday and took over the administration of his Department again, Sir Robert Borden having been acting Minister of Militia for the past two weeks. A long session of the Militia Council was held yesterday to deal with a mass of accumulated business.

Col. Hughes confirmed the reported appointment of Gen. Alderson to command the Canadian contingent and said the choice was a good one.

Asked as to whether he was going to England, he replied that he might go, if he could find time for the trip, but he had made no definite arrangements and was not sure that he could spare the time. He had gone with the troops ships as far as he could without going right across.

Col. Hughes added that the organization of the French-Canadian brigade would be commenced forthwith and troops would be enlisted at various Canadian centres to reinforce the contingent which has just sailed.

Woodeny.

"George, you may boast as much as you like about your mother's cooking, but that last piece of cake she gave me tasted like wood. She didn't use any recipe for that, did she?"

"No; mother always made her cake out of her own head."

Sport Ahead.

"Ma, the old cat has nine kittens."

"Mercy me! We have to have them drowned right away."

"Ma."

"What?"

"Can I invite a lot of boys to the drowning party?"

Quite Particular.

"Where are you going?"

"Over to Plateville."

"I hear that is an exclusive town."

"Exclusive? You can't break into jail there without references."

Fortune was ever fickle. That is why some of us hope to stand a chance.

HISTORICAL TREASURES

In the Archives building at Ottawa there are many reminders of former deeds of bravery that illumine the annals of Canada. The plan of Montcalm, also a great man, although the enemy of the British, found in his tent after his death on the Plains of Abraham. Also letters of this brave soldier, written shortly before the decisive battle took place.

The original plan of the battle of the Plains of Abraham, which was sent to Pitt after the fighting, is there, too. And so also is the plan of Louisburg in 1758.

And there is a letter written by Gen. Wolfe, dated Aug. 16, 1759. It deals with military matters and commissions of soldiers. There are several of Wolfe's signatures in the Dominion Archives, and a flag which was taken from the field after the terrible battle.

One cannot look upon these things and remain indifferent to the great historical victories which made Canada a British possession. If these sacred testimonies do not make a patriot of a schoolboy, it is very doubtful if any historical text ever will. One almost imagines one is living in the turbulent times when brave men sacrificed their lives as willingly as we sacrifice our consciences to-day, except for the great silence which seems to hang over the Archives, like an everlasting benediction.

But not all the things in the Dominion Archives speak of war and suffering, although one might say that it would be difficult to see anything of the seventeenth or eighteenth century period which did not suggest persistent uproar.

There is a great poster, dated at Quebec in 1790. It tells of frivolity and amusement, of laughter and banished care, of light-heartedness and freedom from worry. It is the announcement of a circus which came to town. It is a grateful touch. For we can see that, even in the midst of such troublesome times, the people had time for an hour or two of idleness.

The seal of Louis XIV. is there, dated 1658. And several flags which waved over Quebec in 1775. They could tell of turmoil. And there is the proclamation which gave Gen. Brock control over the troops in Upper Canada. Alas, that such control should have ended so tragically.

Queen Anne is represented in the Archives. Just a slight reminder lest we forget. A map of North America hangs there, which was originally dedicated to her.

And, speaking of maps, the one which is perhaps of greatest interest is the copy of one made by a Spaniard called La Cosa, in 1500. The original is in Madrid, but one may get a good idea of it from the copy which was made about the same time.

It would be impossible to give any kind of accurate list of the many beautiful engravings in the Archives. In fact it would be impossible to give an adequate account of anything there. One must see them. One cannot tell of the fine old flags which were used in Brock's last battle, neither can one write of the sash which was given to Brock by the Indian Chief Tecumseh. These things carry with them such memories of valor and glory that they must be seen. It seems that the people of Ottawa should set aside some day in the month to go and look at them, just so that their sense of loyalty may not become indifferent.

There are some very fine drawings by Sir Edward Head, made in 1858. And an excellent steel engraving of Lady Durham from the painting by Sir Thomas Lawrence. These are some drawings made by one of Wolfe's aide-de-camps, Capt. Smythe. More recent ones show a military steeplechase at Little London, in 1853; also the rantings of Niagara in 1804.

A P. E. Island Knight.

The second native of Prince Edward Island to receive knighthood is a man who can look back upon a long life devoted entirely to the interests of his native province. Sir William Wilfred Sullivan is a rare example of a distinguished Canadian who never needed to budge from his own bailiwick to become eminent. He was born on a farm, as most P. E. Islanders of any prominence have been. That was at New London in 1843. His early education was entirely local, at the Central Academy and St. Dunstan's College in Charlottetown. His first ambition was to be become an editor. He accomplished this when, as a young man, he worked himself up from local reporting to the joint editorship of the Charlottetown Herald. He was writing editorials when the first Confederation Conference was held in that town in 1865. He was also studying law—the beginning of his second ambition. The year that Confederation became a fact the young editor, age 24, was called to the bar. His greatest case in these early years was as counsel for the local Government before the Land Commissioners' Court under the Land Purchase Act of 1875. Twice he was made a Q.C.—by his own Government in 1876, and in 1879 by the Marquis of Lorne. That year he entered politics; without any previous parliamentary experience, becoming both Attorney-General and Premier. In 1889 he quit this stage of his career to become chief justice of the province and local judge in Admiralty. In June, 1914, he was made a Knight Bachelor by King George.—Canadian Courier.

FOR PLOWING CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE COUNTY

First Match for Burnham Trophy to be Held This Fall

A few years ago Mr. Burnham, M.P., offered to the county a handsome trophy for competition at county ploughing matches. This form of competition is general throughout all the best parts of the province, and there is also an annual provincial championship meeting held at Toronto, at which all the county plowing matches. This the provincial championship. Good plowing is said to be the basis of all good farming, and certainly in the best parts of Ontario this maxim is believed in. The offer of the federal member has now been accepted, and the first championship match for the county of Peterborough for the new cup will be held this autumn. There are some fine plowmen in this county, men with provincial records, and they have interested themselves in the matter. The trophy is perpetual and will not be a gift to any competitor. It is given by deed of gift, formally drawn up, to the county council, which has agreed to accept it and take charge of it for all time.

The conditions are that it shall always remain the property of the council, which, however, will, if desired, give it into the custody of the winner until it is won again. The name of the winner will be engraved upon it, and in order that he may have a lasting testimonial to his skill the donor gives in addition a bronze medal suitably engraved. The cup, which is a splendid specimen of silverware, will serve as a perpetual memorial of the good plowing done by the farmers of Peterborough county and as a lasting record of those whose names are to be engraved upon it. County councils do not pass away. They remain.

The cup will remain also, and is a worthy trophy for such a record and so good a cause. The matter has been taken up with a due regard for its importance, and it is confidently expected that the champion plowman for the county of Peterborough will be a competitor in the great annual gathering for provincial plowing honors at Toronto.

The names of those who interviewed the member and have finally set the plow going are: J. H. Garbutt, reeve of Smith; Joshua Smithson, of Otonabee, a plowman of provincial record, and H. B. Cowan, of Farm and Dairy. The trophy will be on exhibition in a few days.

REV. H. T. CROSSELY SPEAKS TO LARGE CONGREGATIONS

Service Every Night This Week at St. James' Church

Under the happiest of auspices, Rev. H. T. Crossley, the well-known evangelist, began special services in the St. James' Methodist Church on Sunday. There was splendid weather, good crowds, and inspiring service. At the morning meeting he appealed to the church members to win at least one for Christ; through unity and working together, by consecration rather than by display of great talent, this may be attained. At Roseneath where he had just closed a campaign there were won for Christ: 96 men and 93 women. What might not be done in Peterboro, if every church member became alive for Jesus Christ? These services become a challenge to our Faith and Consecration. Success is assured if only devotion, consecration and well directed intelligent use is made of the Word of God. In the afternoon session of the S.S. he spoke to the boys and girls about a String of Pearls, five in number: Pardon, Peace, Purity, Pleasure, Paradise. All these may be had through Christ the Way of life. At the evening service a crowded church met his gaze. He put them all at ease as he urged them to be sociable and use their hands in saluting those they met whether stranger or acquaintance. Then he proceeded to elucidate his theme: Four men we meet in Peterboro, and mentioned in Scripture Psalm 1:1. Moralist, the Scornful, the Sinner, the Christian. Only the latter type is happy.

Shapely Finger Nails.

To keep the finger nails a good shape file them every day rather than cut them once or twice a week. Before filing the hands should be thoroughly washed with soft water and good soap. The file should be used lightly from the sides to the middle.

Don't trim the nails to a point; it is ugly. A rounded form is far prettier. A little good cold cream or olive oil should be rubbed into the nails before filing if they are inclined to be brittle. It will prevent them from splitting.

Many a morning headache is due to a nightcap that didn't fit.

IMPORTANT ATTACK BY THE ENEMY FAILS

Paris, Oct. 6, C.P.---The afternoon official communication says the allies' front on the left wing is extending more and more widely. In the vicinity of Arras and on the right bank of the Somme river the situation shows little change. The important attack by the enemy near Lassigny failed. The allies have made advances north of Soissons and in the vicinity of Berry-Au-Bac. Large masses of German cavalry have been reported in the vicinity of Lille. German attacks on the Belgian lines at Antwerp have failed.

Arrested as Spy on Failure to Explain

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Montreal, Oct. 6.—Samuel Redford, a member of a vaudeville act to perform at a local theatre, was arrested as a spy yesterday at Rouse's Point, while en route from New York to Montreal, and is detained here.

The only explanation forthcoming for Redford's detention was the fact that when asked to prove he was travelling to Montreal to perform, he was unable to do so.

Redford was later released. It was stated at the immigration office that this actor was arrested because his trunk was found to be filled with bombs and material for disguises. These suspected articles were found to be used in his act.

CENSORSHIP TIGHTENS ON EASTERN OPERATIONS

MUCH DEPENDS UPON EFFORTS OF RUSSIANS

Great Victory Will Compel Germans to Divert Some of Their Western Armies in That Direction and Flanking Movements of the Allies Will Become Crushing Attacks Which Will Crumble up the German Lines

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 6.—So far as London is concerned, for the past twelve hours, news has been contraband of war. When the embargo is lifted, the public expects tidings of great moment, and there is a distinct tendency of optimism as to the nature of the revelations.

The French ministry of war, in explaining the necessity for official communications being laconic, states that it is useless to be more explicit if battles in the valleys of the Aisne and Somme are not finished. The authorities know that the conflict will be tedious and prolonged before a decisive result is obtained.

Even the relief afforded by news of great activity in the East, sent out yesterday, has ceased to-day, and an iron enclosure of censorship has spread to the region where throughout the war the news of military operations have been more accessible than in any other theatre of warfare.

Victory for one side or the other along the Russian frontier is of supreme importance, and the tremendous battle impending there may mark the climax of the war. If the Russians win a great victory in the East, it will compel the Germans to divert some of their western armies in that direction, and the flanking movements of the allies will become crushing attacks which will crumple up the depleted German lines.

On the other hand, if the Russians are victims of a severe reverse, some of the veteran German corps will be released for service in the west, and the Germans may pierce the numerically inferior allied line. Whichever side can extend its line furthest without weaking its front, ought to win the battle of the Aisne. Hence the crucial importance of the expected battle on the Russian border.

Recruiting Stations in All Parts of Quebec

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Montreal, Oct. 6.—It seems accepted in military circles here that Col. Frederick Gaudet, formerly superintendent of the Quebec arsenal, will be offered the chief command of the Royal Canadian regiment, as the French-Canadian force now being raised for overseas duty will be called.

Organizers have arranged to open recruiting stations all over the province, while the main training will be done in Canada at St. Johns, Que. After preliminary work, the regiment will be sent to an English training camp.

OFFER MADE FOR PETERBORO POWER COMPANY'S LINES OUTSIDE CITY LIMITS

Utilities Commission Will Also try to do Business With Otonabee Power Co.—Present Rates to Stand Till Meters Are Installed

A meeting of the utilities commission was held this morning at which P. G. Jeffery, engineer of the Hydro-Electric commission of Ontario, was present. It was resolved to offer the Peterborough Light and Power Co. $4,450.55 for that part of their distributing system which lies outside the city limits, on the basis of their inventory of May 1. 1914, and any extensions or variations to be paid for on the same basis.

The Otonabee Power Co. is still doing business, although the franchise of the company was not renewed last January. As the commission is not capable of supplying that company's customers with power, it will be allowed to do business. The secretary, however, will write the Otonabee Power Co. and ascertain if they will sell their lines in the city, which are not duplicated by the commission's lines. If the company will not sell at a reasonable price, the commission will find it necessary to construct lines.

A letter was read from the Hydro-Electric commission approving the local commission charging the customers the rates used by the Peterborough Light and Power Co. until the meters are installed.

Manager Howse was authorised to purchase the C.G.E. and Westinghouse meters being taken out at Walkerville. These will be secured for about half price. Of the some 1,500 meters to be used in this city about 700 will be purchased from Walkerville.

MOST ENCOURAGING NEWS RECEIVED AT BORDEAUX

Slackening of German Attacks Indicate to French Observers Kaiser Has Been Forced to Draw Off Troops to Relieve Right Wing in France

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Bordeaux, Oct. 6. — News described as "most encouraging" has been received here to-day from Antwerp. German attacks on this place seem to be slackening in intensity. German troops reported to be near Lille, indicate, in the opinion of French observers, that Germany has been forced to draw off forces from Antwerp to relieve the German right wing in France.

It is announced here upon credible authority that Winston Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty, is now in Antwerp, consulting with the Belgian general staff.

BERLIN PAPER ADMITS VOGES' SITUATION IS FAR FROM ROSY STRAIN ALMOST UNENDURABLE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 6.—The Daily News' correspondent at Copenhagen telegraphs that Berlin papers admit that the situation is desperate. The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says the Germans are facing a difficult strategic situation in the Vosges, where officers and men have been fighting in water-filled trenches for 37 days, unable to retire from the fighting line for rest and unable to see the French artillery.

The strain is almost unendurable and bad weather is causing much sickness.

THE BRITISH AT ANTWERP

Fighting Shoulder to Shoulder With Belgians in Trenches

LONDON, Oct. 6.—British troops are assisting in the defence of Antwerp. Yesterday they fought shoulder to shoulder with the Belgians in the trenches along the north bank of the River Nethe.

The Daily Mail received from its correspondent confirmation of reports that a British force has reached the city and is actively co-operating in its defence. The correspondent of The Morning Post in Antwerp sends the following:

"The Belgian field artillery is co-operating effectually with our heavy artilelry. Our infantry is entrenched on the near bank of the Nethe, opposite the main German forces. Two German attempts to cross the river have been smothered by our artillery."

AN ELECTION IS ASSURED

Hon. Mr. Macdiarmid Will not Get Acclamation

TORONTO, Oct. 6—Hon. Finlay G. Macdiarmid, the new Provincial Minister of Public Works, will go before his constituents for endorsation on Oct. 28. The nomination meeting has been arranged for the 21st instant and the writs are now being issued by the Government.

It is not expected that much of a contest, if any, will take place in his riding of West Elgin as the majorities which returned Mr. Macdiarmid of late years have been very substantial.

Premier Hearst intimated last evening that other contests are not likely for some time. He said he had not been able thus far to consider the situation in the riding of Dundas, vacated through the death of Sir James Whitney.

Foe's Bluff At Alsace

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 6.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Belfort, France, says that, despite Germany's bluff that she is still holding Alsace, the French are there in such force that the Germans dare not attack them, and the French army might, if it chose, march unopposed right to the Rhine.

CASES AGAINST MILK VENDORS ARE DISMISSED

Little Difference Between Samples and Standard in By-law

Port Hope. Oct. 6. — The case against the milk vendors for selling milk below the standard as set forth in the by-law came up before Magistrate White and was dismissed.

Dr. Dickinson told of 16 of Mr. Pratt's samples being below the standard. He was satisfied that the milk was neither watered nor skimmed. It was clean and wholesome and fit for human consumption. One sample of the number was dirty. Taking Mr. Pratt's samples on a whole the average test was above the standard and the Doctor thought this was the meaning of the by-law. For this reason he did not bring on the prosecutions until ordered by the Board of Health.

Mr. R. S. Duncan, of the Department of Agriculture, in referring to the doctor's statement about the averages stated that the average tests or certain herds might be 3.50 for the year, but in certain months of the year the tests would be below 3.50.

The Government tests on record are as follows— 1907, 3.48 for 17,723 tests; 1908, 3.46 for 14,553 tests; 1909, 3.49 for 12,357 tests.

Magistrate White pointed out that in the case against Mr. Pratt, the deviations from the standard were very slight. The milk was neither watered nor skimmed and this was a very good testimonial to the vendor. Taking everything in consideration His Worship dismissed the case.

The evidence in the other cases was similar and all were dismissed.

SUBMARINE IS STOLEN

War Craft Built for Russia Disappears From Italian Yards

ROME, Oct. 6.—The shipbuilding firm of Sangiorgio Shezia has informed the Italian Government that one of its engineers, accompanied by 15 workmen has seized a submarine being constructed for Russian and disappeared leaving a note saying they desire to fight in Russia's behalf.

The Government has sent a torpedo boat in chase of the submarine, but the pursuit has so far been ineffectual.

The submarine lacks stores. It has a tonnage of 300, and a speed maximum of 13 knots an hour.

Despite the secrecy which was attempted it has become known that the submarine disappeared Sunday afternoon, on the pretext that it was leaving to conduct wireless experiments. It cost about $75,000.

The task of conducting an official inquiry has been intrusted to Vice-Admiral Nicastro.

Gus White Buys "Patriotic" Horse

One feature of the Bobcaygeon fair was the sale of seven Hackney ponies by Mossom Boyd Co., the proceeds of the sale going to the Patriotic Fund. President Bottum, of the Soldiers' Aid society, explained the object, and Mr. Thos. Cashore, of Fenelon Falls, auctioned them off, the two first selling for $125 each and going to Mr. Gus White, of Peterborough, and to Mrs. Simpson, of Bobcaygeon. All told the seven sold for about $650.

HEROIC WORK IS DONE BY INDIAN TROOPS IN BRITISH EAST AFRICA

War Office Announces Numerous Engagements Against German Forces Which Sought to Enter Protectorate and Cut Uganda Railway.

Enemy Abandon Towns Before Advance of British Force.

LONDON, Oct. 6. — Successes of British forces in Africa over Germans are told in an official announcement made yesterday afternoon by the War Office. The announcement is as follows:

"During September a number of engagements took place on the Anglo-German boundary of the East African Protectorate. The activity has been due to the efforts of the Germans to raid the British territory and to cut the Uganda Railway. With the exception of one important frontier station by a small party of the enemy, the entry of which it was inexpedient to oppose, all the attempts at invasion by the Germans have been repulsed.

"The normal garrisons of the East African Uganda Protectorate have been strengthened by powerful bodies of Indian troops and by mounted and unmounted volunteers, raised locally.

"One of the earliest moves of the enemy was an attempt to blow up the Uganda Railway at Maungu. The invading party was broken up before it did any damage. Their dynamite was captured after a hot engagement.

"An engagement occurred on Sept. 6, at Tsavo, in which the enemy was severely handled and eventually repulsed. The Indian troops showed conspicuous bravery.

"A second German force of 400, including 50 Europeans, occupied Kisii on Sept. 11. A British column engaged the Germans the next day, but was compelled to retire.

"Germans abandoned Kisii on Sept. 13, and retired to Karungu, which they later evacuated.

"Activities were recommenced in the Tsavo region on Sept. 20. The Germans attacked at dawn, but were beaten after two hours exchange of rifle fire. The conduct of the King's African Rifles was splendid.

"The Germans attacked the British outposts at Majoreni on Sept. 23 and were repulsed. Further fighting occurred on Sept. 25.

"In engagements near Magadi and at Mzima on Sept. 28 the enemy was repulsed with heavy loss."

ROBERT JACKSON FALLS INTO RIVER NEAR LOCKS

Took Weak Spell and it Was Fortunate That Help Was Near at Hand

A narrow escape from death was recorded at the locks yesterday afternoon, about 3 o'clock. Robert Jackson, an elderly man employed as assistant lockmaster, and William Collins, the lockmaster, were working along the boom in a small boat. Without warning, Jackson toppled over into the water, and it was with great difficulty that Mr. Collins got him out.

He succeeded in pulling the man up on the boom, and several other men who were close by came to his assistance, and Jackson was lifted into the punt and conveyed to his home. Dr. Carmichael was summoned, but before he arrived Jackson had regained consciousness. Dr. Carmichael informed the Review today that as Jackson had fainted before he fell, no water entered his lungs. This fact perhaps saved his life.

ST. CATHARINES GROWS.

St. Catharines, Oct. 6.—The assessors made the returns yesterday and the figures showed a very gratifying increase, both in assessment and population. The assessment is $12,480,185, an increase of $1,568,545. The population is now 17,296, an increase of 1,270 over last year.

AVIATOR CAPTURED.

Paris, Oct. 6.—The Petit Journal states that Maurice Chevillard, the French aviator, who was an expert in looping the loop the other [illegible] stunts, and who was serving with the aviation corps of the army, has been captured by the Germans.

POOR POLITICS.

THE IDIOTIC EFFORTS of the Grit press to find some fault with the selection of Mr. Hearst as Prime Minister of Ontario speak well for the choice. There is not a blemish of any kind upon his record, personal or political. Rather than wait for the new Premier to announce his policy, which Liberals may be expected to criticize, they endeavour to make political capital out of the manner of his apointment. This haste to say something when there is nothing to be said exhibits a despicable party spirit that applies to a recent utterance of our local contemporary. We have taken our position as opposed to Federal cabinet ministers dominating Ontario politics, but that does not mean that Ontario politicians are not to consult Dominion ministers. Suppose the Hon. Frank Cochrane was consulted. There is nothing wrong about that. Mr. Rowell went down to Ottawa just before the Provincial election and saw Sir Wilfrid Laurier. That was quite legitimate, and it was quite in order also for Conservatives in Ontario to consult Mr. Cochrane. The occasion was one of peculiar difficulties, and whether Mr. Cochrane was ever consulted at all or not, a most trying situation was met ably and without friction. The Liberal press was quite well aware of the difficulties confronting the Conservatives in the choice of a new leader. Naturally they hoped that the man chosen would be one likely to weaken the party, one whom they could criticize extensively. When the result was known, it left the Grits nonplussed. A strong, and, above all, a thoroughly clean man, was chosen. Mr. Hearst has none even of the minor vices. He neither drinks nor smokes. He has a high reputation as a self-respecting gentleman, and surely that is what we need. We are willing to allow the Liberal press some latitude. They need it. But silly charges, such as they make, while showing how desperately hard up they are for something to say adversely of the new leader, are poor politics and worse morals.

GOLD AND BILLIONS.

THE ORILLIA PACKET, not knowing the facts, questions our statement regarding gold and the gold production of the world. Perhaps our Orillia friend makes assertions without foundation—we don't. The following paragraph, while displaying a natural ignorance, covertly says we had no authority for our statement.

> "The Journal of Commerce puts the world's holding of gold at between eight and nine billions of dollars; but this the Peterborough Review says is a mistake, the correct figures being about seventeen billions. The familiarity of some newspaper men with gold and billions is more or less of a puzzle to the rest of us, and has a suspicious air of affectation."

Since we wrote our little correction of the Montreal Journal of Commerce we have refreshed our remembrancer. Our authority for the statement was a professor of political economy in an Ontario university. For the benefit of our Orillia skeptic, we may say that three or four years ago the amount of gold in use in the world was placed at $16,000,000,000; that the annual production was $400,000,000, of which the famous Rand mines in South Africa supplied $300,000,000, or more in a single year than the total production of the world eighteen years ago. The production of gold has of late years greatly increased through discoveries in the Yukon, in Russia, in the United States, Australia, South Africa, and recently in Ontario. The master of the currency in the United States is of the opinion that the enormous increase in gold production is the main cause for the general rise in prices. As a matter of fact, it is one great cause, but the Boer war, costing $800,000,000, and the Russo-Jap war, costing $3,000,000,000, were also important factors in raising prices. If the Orillia scribe still persists in throwing cold water on the figures, we can furnish him with a few references that would be educative and highly illuminating.

TACTICS IN ADVERTISING.

ADVERTISING is being done more and more on a scientific basis. Those who spend money in publicity are inquiring into the science of advertising, and the following editorial in the Toronto Mail and Empire shows how research has resulted in certain policies or tactics being adopted which control the advertising propaganda of great commercial houses:

The charges en masse to which the Germans resort in the war are the fruit of scientific calculation. The Germans have a philosophic belief in the effectiveness of weight, of launching aggressive movements with carefully conserved and collected momentum. In effect, they are using the same principle as the business men and others do when trade is dull, stimulate it by massive advertising attacks upon the minds of the public. There is a difference, of course, for while German assaults en masse are vigorously and determinedly opposed by forces equally powerful, the advertising assaults upon public attention are conducted upon an unresisting object. What advertising has to overcome is inertia, or lack of information, or perhaps indisposition to do business. The negative resistance of such conditions of mind is much more susceptible to strongly-pushed attacks. Under circumstances at all favorable, these can seldom fail of being effective.

One of the German professors in the United States who has been making himself rather notorious as a pro-German, Prof. Munsterburg, recently wrote a book on "Psychology and Business Efficiency." In it he dealt particularly with the psychological qualities of advertising. One of his objects of analysis was "memory-value." Of this he wrote:

> "The pure memory value is especially important, as, according to a well-known psychological law, the pleasure in mere recognition readily attaches itself to the recognized object. The customer who has the choice among various makes and brands in the store may not have any idea how far superior one is to the other, but the mere fact that one among them bears a name which has repeatedly approached his consciousness through advertisements, is sufficient to arouse a certain warm feeling of acquaintance, and by a transposition of feeling this pleasurable tone accentuates the attractiveness of that make and leads to its selection. This indirect help is economically no less important than the direct source."

Another thing Prof. Munsterburg found out, by experimenting with specially compiled books of advertising, was that the memory-value of a full-page advertisement is considerably greater, in proportion, than that of a half or quarter page. An eighth-page has about one-twentieth the psychological value of a full page. He likewise found out by experimenting that repetition has a stronger memory-value than mere size in display. He says:

> "A business man who brings out a full-page advertisement once in a paper which has 100,000 readers, would leave the desired memory impression in a larger number of individuals than if he were to print a quarter-page advertisement in four different papers in four cities, each paper having 100,000 readers. But if he uses the same paper in one town, he would produce a much greater effect by printing a quarter-page four times than by using a full-page advertisement only once."

These principles seem to be fairly well understood by the larger advertisers, but their scientific side is interesting. In the present slackening of business caused by the war, the commercial fraternity would find it to their advantage to apply to their advertising the military principle of massed attacks.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WE UNDERSTAND that the Canadian Club of Peterborough will make an effort to secure the delivery of the course of lectures on the war offered by the University of Toronto. If the local organization cannot manage the whole course, as many as possible will be arranged for. This is a commendable object, and we trust the citizens of this city will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear trained men speak on the war. The work is part of the extension service of the University of Toronto, and is for the general advantage of the people.

THE FIRST ACT of the Ontario Government under the leadership of the Hon. W. H. Hearst was to vote $15,000 for the relief of Belgium. The Dominion Government has given $50,000, and Quebec $15,000.

MR. HENRI BOURASSA has resigned from the Canadian Club of Montreal. Mr. Bourassa rose to the occasion and has done what was expected of him. Judging by a recent meeting of the club in Montreal, if Mr. Bourassa had not done so he would have been fired.

IF THE CENSORS don't let the newspapers have more real news of the European war, it may be necessary for them to give front pages again to Mexico. Mr. Villa is doing his best to occupy them.

Manufacturers Thank the Press.

(Industrial Canada.)

The manufacturers of Canada are deeply grateful to the press for the patriotic attitude toward Canadian-made goods. It would be easy to fill the present issue of "Industrial Canada" with articles and editorials from Canadian newspapers urging consumers to buy Canadian manufactures during the war.

Politics and economic controversies are alike forgotten and newspapers and journals of various shades of opinion unite on the necessity of retaining Canadian money in the country, and of keeping Canadian industrial employees busy. They agree that such action will benefit the whole country. Such unanimous and powerful support is indeed encouraging to Canadian manufacturers.

Trading With the Enemy.

(Monetary Times.)

Do not trade with the enemy. Business done by us with Germany or Austria sends our money to those countries. There it helps to buy arms and ammunition to use against the British army and the overseas contingents. Besides which, it is illegal to do business with the enemies of the British Empire. The attention of the Department of Trade at Ottawa has been directed to circular letters sent out from New York and other cities outside of Canada in the interests of German firms, either through brokers or receivers. The purpose of these circulars is to continue in this indirect way business which has been broken off on account of the war, and is a clear violation of the proclamation which prohibits trade between Canada and the people of the enemy countries. The British Empire is at war with certain countries, and war, to be consistent and effectual, must run along certain trade lines as well as by military operations. Canadians should not be misled into affording help and comfort to producers of the enemy by this indirect channel. Canadian merchants run a great risk in having anything to do with such indirect business. At this particular time, says Sir George Foster, we must all be loyal in supporting first the makers and producers in Canada and the Empire, and thereafter those doing business in the countries of our allies. Parties receiving circulars such as noted above should send them to the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa.

SPENDING AND SAVING

By Walt Mason

Jim Simpson's drawn a princely wage for seven years or more; he's selling sassafras and sage at Dinky's doodad store. As salesman he is Number One, he has a fetching style, so Dinky pays him lots of mon, and he should have his pile. On Saturday he draws his wad (so big it springs his knees); alas, he scatters it abroad, as though it grew on trees. By Tuesday noon he's always broke, his gorgeous roll he's blown; and so he hunts up Sammy Smoke, and works him for a loan. This Sammy Smoke, a springald meek, is junior in the store; he pulls down thirteen plunks a week, and never handled more. He keeps close tab on every buck, each week he salts down five, and while the others cuss their luck he always seems to thrive. When Jim at last is out and down, as spenders always are, Sam Smoke will junket through the town in his own touring car. It isn't what a fellow earns that makes him poor or rich; it's what the gay high roller burns that dumps him in the ditch. Old age must come to all, you bet, unless we die too soon, and then what oodles of regret fill life's late afternoon, if we in poverty are sunk, our last resources spent; how we bewail the vanished plunk that easy came and went!

MEMBERS OF ONE FAMILY FIGHT ONE ANOTHER

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I have seen in your paper of Oct. 2nd on page twelve an article about a real cosmopolitan in Toronto. I will give you here another one about cosmopolitism. Nearly all the inhabitants of the province of Alsace-Lorraine have relatives fighting now in this war for Germany, France, Russia and Austria. For instance my father was born in France, he was marchal des logis in the French Hussars during the last Franco-Prussian war and lives now in Alsace where I was born. In this war he has to guard with a lot of other veteran French soldiers the railroad line from Strasburg to Paris for the German Government. They don't care for those old men—might goes for right in Germany, and the government pays them about five cents a day, payable every ten days. Those men belong to the so-called Landsturn of the second arriere-ban," that means in English, a general levy of the people, and includes men up to 75 years as far as they are able to do anything. I served a three-year's term in the 80th Prussian infantry regiment and belong now to the so-called "Landwehr of the scond arriere-ban." That includes all men up to 38 years.

My second brother belongs to the "Landwehr" also and is now with the Army Service corps on the Russian-German frontier. My youngest brother belongs to the "Landwehr of the first arriere-ban" and is fighting with the Imperial Guards on the Russian border. You can see here, how afraid the German Government is of the boys from Alsace-Lorraine. It would have been very easy for the Government to put them in a Prussian regiment in Alsace, but as those regiments are fighting against the French, they are afraid that all the boys from Alsace and Lorraine would surrender to the French (which is true). They send them all to the Russian border. Not one is on the French or Belgian border. Now my youngest brother has a brother-in-law in the 9th French Chasseurs, a regiment in Longwy and another one in the Hungarian Hussars. Then we have an uncle in Riga (Russia). His two sons belong to the Russian artillery, and are now on their way to Berlin. My wife's father belonged to the French Zouave regiment as sergeant-major during the last Franco-Prussian war, and has now also to guard the railroad line from Strasburg to Belfort (France). Her oldest brother is Lieutenant in the German coast artillery on the mouth of the Elbe in the North Sea. Her second brother belongs to the Imperial Guards as a reservist and is on the Russian border. Her youngest brother belongs to the crew of a mine-laying ship in Cuxhaven in the North Sea. Their uncle is Major in the 46th French Artillery in Chalons, and they have three cousins in the French army. One belongs to the 6th regiment of Genie, the other one to the 8th regiment of artillery in Nancy and the other one to the 4th Colonial infantry regiment in Toulon.

You can see what an awful mixture this is. Friends and relatives are fighting against each other. This is only one case, and I know some families where the father belongs to the French reservists and his sons belong to the regular Prussian army, and they have now to fight against each other.

Yours very truly,
EMILE BAUMER.

An Easy Matter.

The other day two good looking old ladies entered a prominent bank. One of them wanted a check cashed.

"But," said the cashier, "I don't know you. You'll have to get some one to identify you."

"My friend here will identify me," said the lady.

"But I don't know your friend," said the cashier.

"Well," said the lady, with a withering smile, "I'll introduce you."

Dolly—Well, you see, we went around and sold tickets to all our friends for the first performance, and—er—after that we had no friends."

THE DRY BATTERY.

Its Many Uses and the Numerous Processes in its Making.

That common little object, the dry cell, has played an important part in the advancement of scientific research. There are few articles manufactured that are used in so many ways as the dry battery, yet it is by no means a recent discovery.

The automobile, motorboat, wireless telegraphic apparatus, Christmas tree festoons, electric toys and trains, electric engines, local bell, telephone and annunciator systems, miniature lighting equipments, medical batteries and vibrators, electric alarm clocks, burglar alarms, automatic door openers, safe cracking devices and infernal machines in their many forms, devices for setting off dynamite explosions in excavations, the various testing outfits and electric clock service, to say nothing of the divers ways that it is used in scientific experiments, are a few of the most obvious of its applications.

In its manufacture there are about as many processes as are necessary in the making of a tungsten lamp, and the machinery process that makes it and compounds the ingredients that go into it is wonderfully interesting. So exact is the formula placed into each shell that when completed a battery will register up to a uniform amperage. The highest known amperage in the manufacture of a dry cell is twenty-six.

The exact origin of the dry battery is uncertain, many inventors having claimed the honor.—New York World.

Cheap Power.

Natural steam coming up through the ground is a cheap power for running an engine in the northern Tuscany mountains. Lakes of hot water in the vicinity of the steam holes contain much boracic acid, and a manufacturing company uses the natural steam to run machinery for extracting the valuable boracic acid from the lake water. The only difficulty in this pleasant state of affairs is that the steam itself is so highly charged with boracic acid that it would injure the blades of a turbine engine, so the steam is used to heat up an ordinary boiler, and the steam from the boiler is then used in the turbine. The steam is caused by volcanic action and comes up through blowholes at a considerable pressure.—Saturday Evening Post.

A LITTLE TRAGEDY OF THE PLAINS

The Woman Whose Day Had Passed.

By MARJORIE BODLE

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

They called it twenty miles from the Potter place to town—twenty miles of crisp, sun baked buffalo grass and monotonous, blinding sky.

The hot wind from the south had come with the Potters today on their drive to town, but it went faster than the two hopeless bays could pull the old wagon, and so the dust whirled up from the wheels and the horses' feet and settled grimly all over the Potters.

It made the two Potter boys and the two little Potter girls, sitting down in the wagon bed, half heartedly quarrelsome and Mr. Potter, on the high seat, the lines hanging limply in his hand, silent and glum.

Mrs. Potter stopped jogging the fretful baby and tried to shade its red little face with her dusty handkerchief.

A hot gust of wind caught at her black hat and jerked it unceremoniously on one side. With the baby hanging over one arm she set her hat back again.

She glanced at her husband, with the usual feminine question, "Is it on straight?" on her lips, but with a look at him, staring moodily ahead, his mouth set unencouragingly, she forbore.

The baby had almost cried its poor, hot, little self to sleep, and Mrs. Potter sat with her arms cramped and aching, her forehead puckered in a tired frown.

But at last the sight of a little, unpainted shack at the side of the road and a bright, salmon colored cottage a little farther on made the boys stop the systematic teasing of their sisters and crane their necks eagerly toward Allenville.

Mr. Potter swung the rawhide whip over the backs of the two horses. They lunged suddenly forward, jerking the baby fretfully awake, and trotted briskly on, spreading panic among the chickens scratching in the dusty road.

At the livery barn Mr. Potter pulled up.

"You'd better get out here, ma," he said, reaching for the much crumpled youngest.

Mrs. Potter climbed stiffly out over the wagon wheel and held up her arms. The little Potters clambered out, and the girls stood silent and close to their mother.

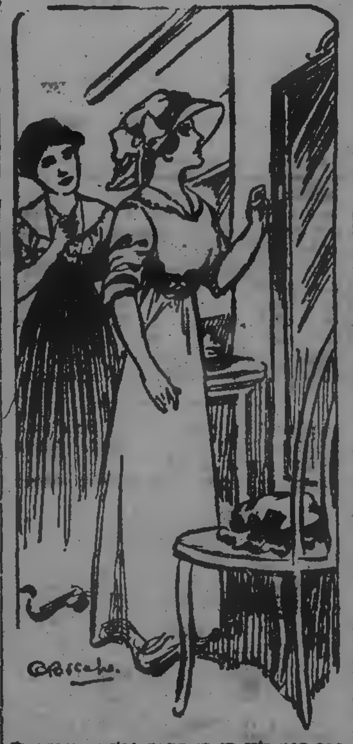
"Me and the boys 'll go over and get their things now. You go get you and the girls fixed up, ma, and then come over to Martin's. I'll load up the groceries there."

"All right, pa," his wife answered, tucking a hanging lock of hair behind her ear. "But I—I guess I'll have to have a little money."

"Will that do you, d'you think?"

Mr. Potter leisurely took a bill from his worn, reddish pocketbook and handed it to her, generously beneficent in his capacity as dispenser of funds.

"Yes, that'll be plenty, Will." And nervously: "Now, you hurry, pa. We



"I BELIEVE I'LL TAKE IT IF IT'S NOT TOO HIGH."

heels, she walked down the one sided Main street to a store where "Miss Ellis, Millinery, Dry Goods and Notions," was painted in yellow and black on the false front.

Inside it was cooler and shaded. The counters and shelves, with the piles of lawns and calicoes, seeming to run largely to grays and blues, and the notions, among which were displayed attractive side combs and irresistible ribbon bows, were all arranged in careful order. And the hats—such creations!

Mrs. Potter gazed at them with admiring eyes. She stood for a moment uncertainly. Then Miss Ellis herself came forward, large and complacent, in cool gray chambray, with smoothly combed black hair and a dark down upon her upper lip which rivaled the notion counter in the attention of the children.

"Why, how d'you do, Mrs. Potter?" Miss Ellis was most cordial. "When did you get in town? The darlin' baby! And both the little girls too. My! Aren't you tired out this hot afternoon? Just set down here, Mrs. Potter. You came in to do some buyin', I suppose?"

"Yes'm. I thought I'd get me and the girls fitted out with hats, though it's don't want to be late getting started home."

"Oh, I guess we'll be ready by the time you women folks get fixed up with hats," and pa chuckled in high good humor, now that the long drive was over.

Mrs. Potter smoothed the baby out as well as she could. The baby, worn out by the long ride, protested only feebly.

With her free hand their mother straightened Mary's sunbonnet and Lucy's sprigged percale apron and shook out the streaks of dust from her own cheap black serge.

With the little girls close at her pretty late to be gettin' them."

Her sunburnt face flushed a little.

"Oh, we have some nice hats left, Mrs. Potter, though, of course, the stock's a little picked over. Shall we take you first? Oh, the little girls? Let's see. What are their names? Oh, yes; Mary and Lucy. All right. We have the very things"—

Miss Ellis helped their mother untie their bonnets in preparation for the ceremony of trying on. The little girls were frightened at first, but they grew dazed with joy when they found themselves radiantly hatted, one with blue flowers and ribbons, the other with pink.

At last they knew them for their very own. The rubbers were slipped under their proudly lifted chins, and it was Mrs. Potter's turn.

"You can put the baby here." Miss Ellis offered a cushioned armchair. "Poor little thing—it's all tired out," and "it," who was, in truth, of feminine gender and labeled "Alva Jane," was gently deposited, warm and red and sound asleep, on the calico cushion.

Mrs. Potter brushed at her black dress and felt nervously at her black hat. It was very old, and the felt and the ribbons were dusty and limp.

She put it on a chair beside her and smoothed vainly at her roughened, faded hair. Her face was lined and weary, and her eyes, which were blue and should have been pretty, were reddened from the sun and wind.

She stood passively while Miss Ellis selected a hat and placed it on her head. It was a large hat, with a softly drooping brim, with mounds of chiffon and big pink roses.

Mrs. Potter looked almost timidly into the glass, and then she forgot that she was stiff and tired from her ride and that her face was dusty and her hair stringy. She was gazing at the mirrored reflection of the hat.

"That certainly does look good on you, Mrs. Potter," said Miss Ellis, who was a milliner of business rather than aesthetic principles.

"Oh, do you think so?" Mrs. Potter hesitated.

She reached up and felt nervously of a pink rose with her brown hand, awkward in the black cotton mitt.

"Well, I certainly do. Just look at them roses. And the amount of pink chiffon that's on that hat—it's sure the hat for you, Mrs. Potter," Miss Ellis went on encouragingly, but her customer was not listening to her at all. She was looking into the mirror at something for which Miss Ellis had not the gift of sight.

She saw a girl's face, sweet and pretty, with pink cheeks, and big blue eyes, and golden brown hair. And shading it was the wonderful hat of chiffon and roses.

The reflected face, which Miss Ellis would have said was old looking and very tired, flushed, and the eyes brightened and filled a little. Mrs. Potter, with the glory of her vision upon her, turned to the milliner.

"It's like one I had the summer Will and I was married," she said. "He liked it. He said it just suited me." The flush deepened. "I believe I'll take it if it's not too high and you think"—

Mary and Lucy had recovered from the awe of their new hats and were playing hide and seek among the counters.

Mary ran around to where her mother stood. Mary was used to her mother in a chronically old blue calico sunbonnet or the black felt with the rusty, crumpled ribbon, but this! Mary had not known her mother fifteen years ago, and she did not understand.

She looked a moment, puzzled and dismayed.

"Why, mamma!" she said slowly and then gurgled in delighted appreciation of the joke.

"Oh, Lucy!" she cried gleefully and dragged her sister around where she could see. "Come and look at mamma. Ain't she funny in that pretty hat?"

Mrs. Potter turned suddenly again to the glass.

The light from a back window fell glaringly across her. She saw the pink billows of chiffon and the roses and the soft white brim drooping over her tanned face. The glass blurred before her. She could hardly think or move for a minute.

Then she roused herself and lifted the hat from her head. Her rough fingers caught in the soft chiffon as she set it down.

"I guess I won't get my hat today, after all, Miss Ellis," she said dully. "Come on, children; your pa'll be waiting for us."

And she pinned on the old black felt.

Treating a Corn.

Whether a corn is treated at home or by a chiropodist, the treatment is the same. It consists of applying to the surface an acid (the most commonly used being salicylic) mixed with collodion and ether. The ether evaporates, leaving a layer of collodion to hold the acid while this does its work. After applying this regularly for four or five days the foot is soaked in hot water, when the corn can be picked out in one piece, leaving a hole, which quickly fills up. Some chiropodists cut the corn out by repeated applications of nitric acid, picking away the parts of the corn destroyed at each treatment. Every time you cut a corn yourself you run the risk of blood poisoning.—New York World.

Nothing Doing.

A little four-year-old, a most attractive little fairy, suddenly lost interest in Sunday school. She had enjoyed so much learning about Moses that her mother could not understand the change of attitude.

"Why don't you want to go, daughter?" she asked.

"Oh," was the astonishing reply, "I don't like to go to Sunday school since Moses died."—Woman's Home Companion.

In Daily Fear Of Death—Until "Fruit-a-tives" Brought Relief.

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd. 1913.

"Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from Indigestion. One day my eye caught a billboard of "Fruit-a-tives" and I said to myself "if Fruit-a-tives will build me up like that, it is good enough for me". I bought some. After taking these wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself wonderfully improved. In a short time longer, I cured myself entirely. My case was no light one, either, Gas would often form in my stomach and I was in daily fear that it would get around my heart and kill me. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy for Indigestion".

Youthful Members of Newport's Smart Set.

Copyright by American Press Association.

Newport, R. I., as nearly everybody knows, is where the fashionable folks spend their time in summer. And, of course, there are lots of young people there who in time will be the leaders of society, although now they are simple little children enjoying themselves at the seashore. In the social life of Newport the little folks take very little part, although they are permitted to play on the sand and in the breakers that roll up on the beach. Recently a camera man was present at a social function at the famous Casino and snapped some of the little folks as they watched a game of tennis. The two youngsters shown in the picture are Miss Frances Mills and her brother, Master J. Mills, children of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills of New York and Newport.

Game of Bricks.

Draw two lines fifteen feet apart, then divide the boys into two companies, allowing each player a piece of brick or square wood that can be easily thrown. Each player on one side throws his brick, trying to come as near as possible to the line on the other side. The one farthest from the line sets up his brick on the line and the one nearest standing on the opposite side pitches at it. If he fails to knock it over he sets up his brick and the other boy pitches at it. If he succeeds he picks it up, goes back to the line, pitches it again near the other brick, hops over it and kicks his brick near that of his companion. Then he must pick up his brick and carry it successively on his head, on each shoulder, on his back, on his breast (walking), in the bend of his knee (hopping), between his legs (shuffling). Each time starting at the line and proceeding to the other brick and knocking it over. Finally he marks a square inclosing the brick and about eighteen inches square, and if he can hop over this he is declared a winner. If he fails in any one of the "stunts" he must wait his turn, but can then begin at the point where he failed.

Too Far Away.

There is a sign nailed against a Deadwood thirst parlor so that he who runs may read that it is "five miles to the next saloon." A short time ago the colored porter of a rival sample room down the street borrowed a beer pump from his competitor with the misleading sign, but did not return it according to agreement.

Becoming impatient one morning and seeing the colored porter standing in the doorway of his saloon, the owner of the loaned article yelled in a loud voice, "Why in thunder don't you return that beer pump?"

After a little hesitation the porter replied, "If you're talking to me I can't hear you, because you are five miles away."

Just Run Into It.

Elements mix in a railroad station, but that of humor predominates. The other day a man entered the Grand Central hurriedly. He afterward explained he had to meet a country cousin coming in. He rushed over to a friend who knew of his errand.

"Am I late?" he asked.

"No; the train just ran into the station," he was told.

"Ran into it!" he blurted. "Was anybody hurt?"—New York Tribune.

Points for Mothers

A Cleansing Cream.

For cleansing the skin try the following cream: One-half ounce each of white wax and spermaceti, two ounces oil of sweet almonds and two ounces of rosewater. Melt the wax and spermaceti, add the almond oil and when well blended remove from the fire and add the rosewater, stirring briskly till cool and creamy. You can dissolve a tiny pinch of borax in the rosewater if you wish or can add ten drops tincture of benzoin while stirring the cream.

Saw the Entire Faces.

A man at the international polo games remarked that he had never seen women's faces look so well. He puzzled about it until a woman enlightened him as to the reason—their hair was brushed away from the brow and temples. This new coiffure shows all the face, and it even goes so far as to uncover the ears. This is a part of a woman's anatomy that she has skillfully kept from the public for the last four years.

Eyebrow Tonic.

A good tonic for the eyebrows is made with two ounces of petroleum jelly, one dram of tincture of cantharides, fifteen drops of oil of lavender and fifteen drops of oil of rosemary. Apply night and morning with a tiny brush. This can also be used on the eyelashes, but must not be allowed to get in the eyes since any oily preparation will inflame them.

Damp Hands.

Needlewomen who suffer from damp hands will find it is an excellent plan to rub the palms of the hands occasionally with a solution of borax in a little alcohol. When sewing keep a sponge saturated with the solution ready at hand and occasionally squeeze it in the palms of the hands, allowing the moisture to dry without wiping.

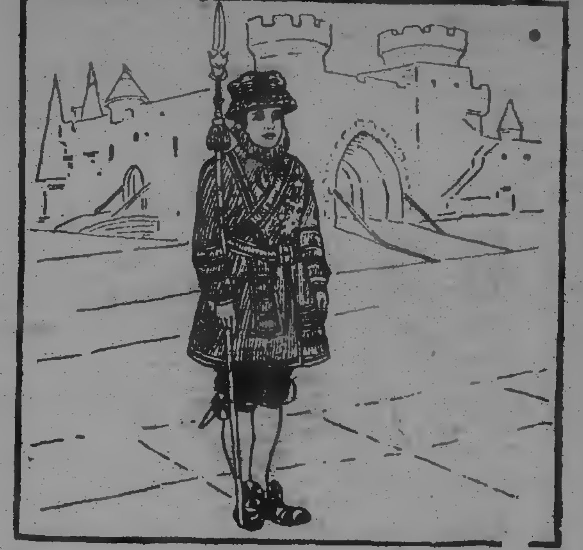
Behold! Summer Pastimers Next to the Last Picture!

Let it be remembered that NO SETS OF ANSWERS WILL BE ACCEPTED BEFORE NOVEMBER 2ND, and may be sent in so as to reach our office not later than NOVEMBER 7TH.

The fun is only just beginning. We have been informed by many of our readers that they are saving their real efforts for the time when all the pictures are in their possession, which will be by to-morrow. Therefore the true opportunity awaits you now, even though you may have seen only a few of our pictures in the past season or none at all. Begin to-day. You have already observed that nobody can get ahead of you, because no sets of answers will be accepted until Nov. 2nd. And even then no sets of answers will be considered until Nov. 7th, when all competitors have been heard from. You can get all the 75 pictures now by purchasing either the Handbook or the Logbook. Act at once and secure for yourself wholesome and easy recreation as well as diversion from the all too serious experiences of the war.

Summer Pastime Rebus Picture No. 74.



Answer Form No. 74, Peterborough Review's Summer Pastime

The name represented by the picture is.....

HANDBOOK. Competitors in the Summer Pastime have already purchased the Handbook in large quantities, but some few may have been holding out on the assumption that they may be clever enough to solve all the pictures without the assistance of the lists of names which is part of the Handbook. It may be that these persons are right, but we believe that 25 cents represents a fairly good investment when in return can be obtained smoothly arranged material, among which the 75 correct answers are positively guaranteed to be.

The Handbook also contains three sets of coupons or answer forms, ranging from one to twenty-five. For those who are going to try for four prizes, as the rules permit, it is quite obvious that these extra coupons have a value equal to seventy-five additional copies of this newspaper.

It should also be borne in mind that, even in order to win one prize, it may be desirable to turn in more than one set of answers. You may not be sure of your judgment on some of the pictures, and therefore you may be securing yourself against losing out, by entering two, three or four sets of answers.

The Summer Pastime Handbook costs 25 cents. It can be obtained by calling at our office or by sending us 30 cents, in which case the Handbook will be mailed. A complete set of pictures now go with it.

LOGBOOK. For the further convenience of those who are playing the game, we present the Participants' Logbook, containing three sets of answer forms numbered from 26 to 75, or 150 in all. These, together with the coupons in the Handbook, constitute three complete sets of coupons from beginning to end.

Furthermore, the Logbook contains a fourth complete set of answer forms, which can be used to replace the original set of answer forms first required to be cut from this newspaper. Thus a competitor who has the Handbook and Logbook may make complete entry in compact, convenient form, making sure that none of his answers will be lost in bundling together, etc., and also making it easy for the judges to go over his or her work.

Finally, THE LOGBOOK CONTAINS POSITIVE AND PLAIN CLUES WHICH SHOULD GIVE YOU THE ANSWERS TO TWENTY PICTURES IN THE SERIES.

The price of the Logbook is 50 cents and can be called for at our office or will be mailed on receipt of price.

The price of the Handbook and Logbook together at our office, or mailed, is 75 cents.

There is no obligation to buy either of these books. But their worth has been described, and whoever wishes may obtain these books. We wish all our competitors good luck. Be sure to watch for to-morrow's picture, and then continue to read the notices of general interest that we shall print between now and the last day of sending in answers, which will be November 7th, 1914.

Board of Works.

To the Council of the City of Peterborough.

Gentlemen:—

Your Board of Works beg leave to report and recommnd as follows:

That the matter of appointing a night watchman in connection with sewer construction and an inspector of cement on pavement construction be left with the Chairman and the City Engineer.

That the City Engineer make the usual report respecting the construction of sidewalks on the following streets and that notice of the intention of the Council to construct them be given under Section 9 of the Local Improvement act, namely:—Walton Street, east side, from Weller Street to Homewood Ave., Townsend Street, south side, from a point 166 feet east of Aylmer Street to a point 216 feet east of Aylmer Street.

That an application of the Bell Telephone Co. for permission to erect four poles on the south side of Sophia Street east from Mark Street be granted, the poles to be placed and the work to be done as directed by the City Engineer.

That the agreement given by Barries Limited in regard to an area under and glass in a sidewalk at their new building be approved of.

That the recommendation of the Local Board of Health that sewers be constructed on Adeline and Baker Streets be adopted and that notice be given of the intention of the Council to construct these sewers.

That the recommendation of the Local Board of Health that a sewer be constructed on Clara Street be adopted and that notice be given of the intention of the Council to construct it provided an agreement satisfactory to the City Solicitor is given by Mr. Baker to protect the city from all claims.

That a letter from the City Solicitor in regard to the ownership of a lane from Water Street past the Post Office and the condition of a drain on that lane be referred to the Local Board of Health.

That a letter from the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. saying they wish to construct power feeder lines on certain streets be referred to the City Solicitor, the City Engineer and the Manager of the Utilities for report, the Solicitor to consider especially the right of the company to put up pole lines for conveying power and that the City Solicitor be authorized to consult counsel if he thinks it advisable.

That an application from G. N. Graham for permission to erect a sign at the Empress Hotel extending out 12 feet over a balcony be granted subject to the usual conditions respecting illuminated signs.

That the City Engineer inform the Canadian Pacific Railway that the work done by the railway at the corner of the Monaghan Road and Romaine Street is satisfactory. Your Committee received a report from the Engineer saying that he had inspected the work and considered it satisfactory.

That the matter of removing trees from Maude Street be left with the Chairman and the City Engineer.

That the City Engineer notify the person who put rubbish in the drain on Edinburgh Street to remove it.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ALD. DUNCAN,
Chairman.

Power Committee.

To the Council of the City of Peterborough.

Gentlemen:—

Your Power Committee beg leave to report as follows:

That we authorized the Chairman of this Committee to have tile put in on Charlotte Street from George Street to Water Street to receive underground wire for lighting purposes if he deemed it advisable.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ALD. JOHNSTON,
Chairman.

Will Erect Wall.

Ald. Langford reported that the work of repairing the Incinerator had been commenced and that the engineer urged the erection of the centre wall spoken of before to divide the furnace into two separate units. The cost will be about $140. On motion of Ald. Green and Duffus the work will be executed.

Prevented by Pole.

A letter was received from Superintendent H. F. Coyle of the G.T.R. which stated that that corporation were ready to move the siding between Simcoe and Hunter Street to give the proper clearance to the sidewalk but they are hindered from doing so by the location of one of the hydro poles. The City Engineer will look into the possibility of moving the pole.

Manufacturers' Sign.

Wm. R. Breyfogle, manager of the De Laval Co. had a communication before the meeting asking permission to have a sign erected on the small island north of the C. P. R. bridge across the Otonabee River. It was his intention to have the cards of all the local manufacturing concerns on the sign. The matter was left to the Board of Trade and Property Committee with the understanding that local industries only will be allowed to utilise space on the sign board.

SUDDEN CHANGE MADE IN LEADERS AT CRITICAL TIME GEN. VON MOLTKE QUITS

Unofficial Advices From Berlin Indicate Serious Trouble in German War Office---New Leader Does Not Figure in Official Lists.

LONDON, Oct. 6. — Gen. Voightsrhetz has been appointed chief of the German general staff to succeed Gen. Relmuth Von Moltke, according to unofficial advices from Berlin.

The deposed general is the nephew of the great leader who directed Prussian operations in 1870 which resulted in the defeat of France. On Jan. 1, 1906, he was appointed chief of staff. The elevation took place over his protest, it being said that Von Moltke did not feel himself fully qualified for the high command. However, he is credited with being an excellent soldier and has done a great deal to increase the efficiency of the German soldier.

Gen. Voightsrhetz, who succeeds him, is almost unknown. His name appears in none of the usual reference works. He is the son of a well-known commander of 1870 who lead a division and afterwards became governor of Hanover. When he died an infantry regiment was named after him.

The military expert of The Standard, commenting on the removal of Gen. Von Moltke, says:

"If this is true, it is news, indeed, for it will constitute a serious panic in high places. Even in minor affairs of the world, it is not often that the policy known as 'swapping horses while crossing a stream' is adopted.

"There must be something very gravely wrong indeed if the Germans find it necessary to get rid of the man who originated and directed the whole of the strategy of their campaign, and that at a vitally critical moment.

"One cannot, for instance, believe that Von Moltke of his own initiative and free will withdraw troops from France at a moment when they were urgently needed to secure a decisive result in that area of war. Having withdrawn them, one cannot imagine Von Moltke sending them on a useless errand to East Prussia, when their presence in Galicia might have saved the Austrian army from disaster.

"But if he was responsible for such a fatuous policy, then supercession is not sufficient punishment. He should be sent to take a landsturm division into action."

GEN. VON MOLTKE.

Comradeship In the Field

English newspapers which have been received contain a pleasant anecdote of the fighting at Mons. It comes from the French paper the Liberte, and concerns a Scottish regiment which is not named. This regiment was occupying a trench, swept by violent rifle and artillery fire, when two privates noticed that a Frenchman attached to the battalion as interpreter occupied the most exposed spot in the trench. One private said, "The Frenchman is badly placed; let's widen his trench," and during a minute, paying no attention to the hail of bullets and shrapnel, the privates deepened the trench, and with the same calm resumed their places.

WHEN SOCIALISM FAILED

Followers of Marx Rushed to Join the Colors

The London "Daily Herald," a syndicalist organ is very much concerned at the failure of the French and German Socialists to revolt against military service. It says:

"Perhaps the most terrible side of the struggle is the part played by the workers at the supreme moment of crisis. There are four and a half million Social Democrats in Germany—they have been as nothing. They have in no wise affected the issue.

"In France, the Prime Minister is a former leader of the Socialist party. Is he then dead to the inspiration of his ideals? Does he come to bring not peace but a sword?

"Is there something essentially wrong in this Continental Socialism? Is it too materialistic in nature to understand the real significance of the ideals it has thus cast aside as catchwords? Does the German worker think that there is something ordained by Nature which makes his interest antagonistic to that of his French brother? Have they seen no soul, no compelling sense of brotherhood, in the principles they have preached?

"To let this war go on involves the certainty that for our brothers abroad at any rate, 50 years of Socialist propaganda has been in vain. Louis Blanc, Marx, Lassalle erected a superb superstructure; but its foundations were of sand."

Shining Example.

When Turkey casts aside the bonds
  That held her to the past
And comes, a giant new and strong,
  By elders not outclassed,
And from a nation old and sick
  Sits up and sets the pace,
Then confidently we may say
  There's hope for any race.

Who would have thought it of the Turk,
  So often billed to die,
That he would come to life again,
  So gay and young and spry?
Who would have prophesied that he
  The despot's power would check
And be discovered standing there
  Upon the sultan's neck?

Of course he stood it pretty long,
  And time he had to learn.
From centuries of greed and graft
  At last the worm will turn,
And when at last he turned and took
  The nations by surprise
He only had to reach his hand
  To grasp the freeman's prize.

Good boy there, Mr. Youthful Turk!
  You've surely won a place
Among advancing peoples who
  Toward progress set their face.
You've joined the human brotherhood.
  Our hand is at your door
To welcome you and say you are Unspeakable no more.

Mine Destroys Another Vessel

LONDON, Oct. 6. — Telegraphing from Ostend, the Exchange Telegraph Co. correspondent says:

"The steamer Ardmount, loaded with grain, which left Dover at 6.30 o'clock yesterday morning for Zeebrugge, Holland, struck a mine. Her crew of 35 was saved."

The Ardmount was from Galveston and it is reported that when she reached Falmouth last Saturday, she was ordered on to Antwerp.

The British steamer Ardmount, a vessel of 3,510 tons, commanded by Capt. Ronald, sailed from Galveston Sept. 9, and arrived at Falmouth Oct. 3, and sailed shortly afterwards for Antwerp. The Ardmount was owned by the Ashmount Steamship Co., of Glasgow.

PRINCE EITEL ESCAPED.

Another of Kaiser's Sons Displays Talents at Coulommiers.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—When the German troops occupied Coulommiers they took the chief officials of the town as hostages for an indemnity of $20,000. The officials protested that it was impossible to provide this, as all the wealthy inhabitants had left. The German general threatened to have the hostages shot, but in the midst of this scene a tall young officer entered. Gen. Von Kluk clicked his heels and saluted. Then followed a short colloquy with the unknown officer, to whom the general showed an extraordinary deference. The hostages were led out into the street and placed with their backs against a wall while twelve soldiers covered them with rifles. For nearly twenty minutes the hostages faced the muzzles of the rifles, not knowing when the officer's sabre would fall, giving the signal for their death.

Suddenly from above came the drone of an aeroplane. The aviator descended. He brought bad news. The British forces were approaching in great strength. The Germans, forgetting their prisoners, made a dash for their quarters, and half an hour later they evacuated the town in something like a panic. One of the first to leave was the tall young officer to whom Von Kluk had shown such great deference. Mounted on a fine horse, and striking to the left and right with his sabre, he forced his way through the terrified infantry. According to stories of German stragglers whom the British took prisoners, this young man who was in a hurry was Prince Eitel Friedrich, the Kaiser's second son.

Essad Pasha Gets His Desire.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—A Havas despatch from Durazzo dated Oct. 4, says that the Senate has named Essad Pasha, president of the provisional government of Albania. His 10,000 Albanian troops occupy strategical positions in the city.

Essad Pasha was formerly Albanian Minister of War and was also commander-in-chief of the Turkish forces at Scutari in the Balkan war. He was opposed to the rule of Prince William of Weid, who was appointed to the Albanian throne by the powers.

APPLES AND SPUDS CHEAP AND IN PLENTY WAR STOPS EXPORTS

In these days when the prices of so many eatables are showing the same tendency as the sparks; that is to fly upwards, it is comforting to be assured by the food merchants that apples and potatoes will be exceptionally cheap in Canada during the coming fall and winter.

Of course one cannot live entirely on apples and potatoes, but they are delectable accompaniments or helpful fillers on a foundation of bread and meat and therefore the announcement that they will be cheaper—they are cheap right now—will be equally as welcome as good news from a far country about which the sage of Israel spoke.

There are two substantial reasons why apples and potatoes will be cheap: First the crops of each are bountiful all over the Dominion, and second the war is going to cause the exports to be curtailed, so it would seem that there is an element of good in the war for some of us.

Apple buyers just now are not the most optimistic people to meet. Hitherto they have found a ready market in Great Britain and Germany for Canadian apples. Not with transatlantic travel surrounded with more than the average element of danger buyers are not going to rush their purchases to Britain without exercising every precaution, and they wouldn't attempt to ship to Germany for several reasons, which would really be superfluous and unnecessary to mention.

HYDRO BILL IS CHAIRMAN ON FINANCE

Ald. W. J. Johnston is Appointed to Succeed Ald. Anderson

Alderman William Johnston, who has been so closely connected with the efforts to bring Hydro to this city, was last evening elected chairman of the finance committee, to succeed Alderman Anderson, who has resigned to accept the position of accountant in the utilities commission office. When Alderman Anderson's resignation was read, his worship spoke a few words expressing his regret at the departure of the East City representative. Ald. Anderson was what the mayor termed "a good alderman," always attentive to his duties and working for the best interests of the city. Ald. Johnston also spoke, and then moved that the resignation be accepted with regret. The motion was seconded by Ald. Green and reluctantly carried.

Ald. Anderson in reply thanked the council for their expressions of appreciation of his past work. He always considered himself one of the younger members of the council, but, looking over the present members, there were but two others besides himself left of the 1911 body. They were Mayor Buller and Ald. Duncan. During the period which he represented the east ward in the council, the city has made great strides of progress, and he sincerely hoped that it would continue to do so. Before giving up his seat, Ald. Anderson paid a tribute to S. R. Armstrong, the city clerk, thanking him publicly for the many ways in which he assisted him, and assuring the rest of the council that Mr. Armstrong was one of the city's most obliging employes.

It was moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Green, that Ald. Johnston be appointed chairman of the finance committee. An amendment was made for the appointment of Ald. McIntyre, by Ald. Saunders and Duffus, but the original motion carried.

RASPBERRIES!

It's raspberry time in Otonabee. Yesterday Mr. W. T. Arnott, the well known market gardener of that township showed The Review a branch of a raspberry bush which was laden with berries. The branch is one of a thousand shoots Mr. Arnott planted in the spring. The greatest growth of any of these shoots is twelve feet. The berry is known as the Columbian.

Aren't those new men's overcoats the nearest thing to hoop-skirts you've seen, and aren't you sorry for the poor boys that have to wear their last year's models?

REQUESTS MADE TO CITY COUNCIL

Ex-Mayor Rush waited on the City Council last evening and brought up the old question of the property of the city on Water Street upon which a part of the terrace owned by Mr. Green is built. He, as an executor of the Green estate, wished to purchase the property from the city for $300. The matter was referred to the legal committee.

Sewer Connections.

Dr. Park and Mr. Graham representing residents of Bethune Street north of Smith Street waited upon the council and urged that they be given sewer connection. The request will be looked into by the City Engineer and Board of Works.

Room Wanted.

Messrs. H. Sowden and W. Liburn, representing the Ambulance Corps, asked for a room in the city building for the corps. Ald. Langford, chairman of the Property Committee, will investigate and see if something can be done.

Dangerous Chimney.

Mr. Bone, a resident of the north end complained to the meeting that the chimney of the old German Card Co. was unsafe and liable to fall. The City Engineer will look into the matter and if the chimney is dangerous it will be condemned.

Robt. Wilson Takes Extra Work, Salary at $800

Caretaker of City Buildings and Utilities Office

For the first time in months the city council was out in full force at the meeting last night. Alderman Dobbin, who has been touring western Canada, was back in his usual place.

A by-law was passed which appointed Robert Wilson caretaker of the city buildings and the utilities commission office at a salary of $800 per year. Two hundred of this will be paid to the city by the commission.

No Action Taken.

Alderman Green brought up the question of doing something for one of the firemen who has been ill for a number of weeks and who will be unable to return to work for another fortnight. Considerable discussion was given the request, and it was finally decided that no action be taken.

The reason was that he council was no desirous of forming a precedent. It was the feeling of the meeting that the firemen should be given an increase in wages, and they could take on a sick benefit policy themselves.

CONTEST FOR BETTER BABES IS POPULAR

Much Information of Value to Mothers is to be Had

EIGHT PAIR TWINS

One of the greatest assets a mother can have, is the knowledge of how to look after her baby. All this week there is being held in the public library a contest, the sole purpose of which is that mothers can go there and get this information from those whose knowledge in this department is of high value. The proper care and food for a child is clearly demonstrated. After the registration of the baby, it is given what is called a mental test. This shows how strong the child is mentally. Then the babies are weighed and measured, and they undergo a physical examination. The doctors in charge are men whose long experience has made them proficient in these several lines. The proper care to be taken of the milk is thoroughly gone into, and the nurses in charge, by demonstrations, bring out very forcibly its importance.

The diet for babies from 12 to 18 months, 18 to 24 months, and 2 to 3 years, is very clearly displayed, in little tables, with menu cards placed on them. There is a large variety of literature in pamphlet form, prepared by the Government, and giving a splendid treatise of points most vital to the good health of the child. Some of these pamphlets are entitled, The Child, Milk, The Conservation of Life, etc.

It is estimated that one baby out of every four, dies every year from a needless cause or 3,500 deaths in the province of Ontario every year. There is a mechanical effect bringing this idea out very clearly, also another one showing the evils of public drinking cups.

An illustrated lecture which is also given is a great help to the mothers. There are over 200 entries, including 8 pair of turns. On Friday afternoon, prizes, diplomas, certificates, will be awarded, at which the mothers are earnestly requested to attend.

Dr. McCullough, provincial health officer, and the district officer of health will visit this contest some day this week. The doctors in charge are the physicians of this city, the nurses are the staff from the Nicholls Hospital.

OBITUARY

TERESA FINNEY.

The death took place last evening at the Isolation hospital of Teresa Finney, the 10-year-old daughter of Philip Finney. She was of a very bright disposition, and her death will be a great shock to her many playmates. The child had been ill with diphtheria. The funeral took place this afternoon to St. Peter's cemetery.

REGINALD WATSON.

Reginald Wallace Watson, 9 years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Watson, died in the Isolation hospital yesterday, after an illness from diphtheria. The funeral was held this afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

Linoleum which has been rolled and put away can be prevented from cracking by placing it for a few minutes in front of a fire before it is unrolled.

CANNOT GET CORDAGE CO. BUILDING TO USE FOR THE MANUFACTURE OF SEWER PIPE

The idea which Mayor Buller launched at the last board of works meeting of securing the factory lately occupied by the Canadian Cordage Co. and using it as a factory operated by the city, for making the concrete pipes to be used on the outfall sewer, has been "tapped on the head."

Mayor Buller informed the council last evening that the efforts of the city to secure the building gratis were unsuccessful. The matter will be left with Ald. Duffus, chairman of the manufacturers' committee. He will endeavor to secure a factory.

Street Railway Work.

Although the council did not dwell on the problem of the unemployed, Ald. Duncan suggested that the manager of the Radial Railway Co. be written to, and urged to proceed with the work on the extension from Patterson street to the corner of Park and Charlotte streets. The chairman of the board of works thought that the work would assist the city in overcoming the problem of the unemployed. The matter will be dealt with according to Ald. Duncan's suggestion.

PRINCIPAL HODGSON MAKES PLEA FOR LETHBRIDGE TEACHERS WHO OBJECT TO SALARY CUTS

Lethbridge, Oct. 6. — Pedagogues in the city schools gained a temporary victory in their fight against any salary reduction by thes cvhool board.

After Principal Hodgson had laid the teachers' resolution before the board, on behalf of the committee appointed to take the matter up, the board resolved itself into a meeting of the school management committee and passed the following resolution: "That the change in the salaries to teachers and officers come into effect with the new agreements, January 1st, 1915."

This virtually means that the reductions as ordered some time ago by the board are deferred until the first of the year, and that they automatically come into effect at that time. This will afford the teachers time to take on more lucrative positions if they desire. The board's action has not yet come before the teachers as a body.

In presenting the teachers' side of the question, Mr. Hodgson made a splendid appeal. The certificates held by local pedagogues, he said, were recognized in any of the other provinces; the salary they were receiving here was not fixed by local distress or prosperity, and as long as the supply didn't exceed the demand salaries should not decrease. even with a season of depression. In Canada, said Mr. Hodgson, with the exception of a few Alberta cities, teachers were not being affected, because there was no over-supply. That the teachers here are not receiving more than the average was supported by the claim that 20 per cent. of them could have obtained better positions elsewhere. As an evidence that there is no over-supply, Mr. Hodgson pointed out that recently the Lethbridge school board had advertised in Toronto papers for a mathematics master, at a salary of $1,600 a year, and only two favorable applications were received.

The teachers' appellant further pointed out that the reduction was not sought by any large majority of the ratepayers, and that it would affect the average ratepayers to the extent of only 50 cents a year. Those most insistent, he said, were the comparatively rich, who did not need the money that would be squeezed out of the struggling pedagogue.

The chief point made in the discussion that followed was that the schools of the city are efficient, and that their efficiency at the present time has never been surpassed.

METERS FOR HOUSE LIGHTING TO BE PLACED IN BASEMENT

At the meeting of the Utilities Commission yesterday afternoon Mr. Hicks launched the members into discussing the possibility of placing the meters in the basements instead of the upper portions of the houses.

Manager Howse gave out the cheerful information that he intended having all the meters placed in the basements. The extra cost will amount to but four or five dollars.

Out-of-City Customers.

In connection with supplying customers living outside the city, the Solicitor will be asked for advice and the clerk was authorized to write the council of the Township of North Monaghan and ask permission to carry on the electric light business in that municipality.

Rate to be Set.

The rate to be charged the city by the Utilities Commission for supplying current for the street lights will be set by the Hydro Commission.

The Seven Great Big Blunders

Rev. H. T. Crossley, at St. James' Methodist Church, last night had an extra good congregation for the second night of his campaign. From 7.45 to 8 a few hymns were sung from the Book: "Make Christ King"; then Mr. Crossley sang "The Model Church."

After responsively reading Ps. 120, and 1, and prayer being offered, Mr. Crossley sang "God Cares for the Sparrow" and gave his evening sermon on "The Seven great big Blunders." The "Gospel," he said, meant Good News, yet men were constantly making big blunders in misunderstanding or in misappropriating it. (1) They did not give to children the place Jesus gave them in the Kingdom. (2) They often thought they were sceptical — a state less frequent than it was 30 years ago. Often it was nothing more than a temptation to doubt that assailed them. Again men often under conviction were deluded by waiting for feelings to take the place of Faith. Feelings, he interpreted, as moral perspiration, and he made telling reference to Sam Jones' incident of the man standing by a tree, with axe in hand, waiting to sweat before he struck a blow. The backslider blundered awfully when he turned his back against God. According to Scripture, backsliding was spiritual adultery. Secret confession of Christianity was as great a blunder as refusing to put up a banner when in the service of the King. The final blunder was when men are content to wish or hope to be a Christian when they may know that by acceptining Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour, and King is a Christian. The meetings begin each night with a song service from 7.45 to 8 o'clock. The sermon tonight is entitled Seven Crowns.

MME. THEBES OUT.

Paris, Oct. 6.—Madame Thebes, the famous fortune teller, while at Nancy predicted that the Germans would again bombard the city September 27. Thereupon all the population retreated to the cellars and remained there a couple of days.

The city was not bombarded and Madame Thebes has retreated to Paris.

SEND FIRE CHIEF TO CONVENTION

Ald. Green Will Accompany Him to Stratford

Fire Chief Howard and Ald. Green, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee will attend the convention of the Fire Chiefs of Ontario to be held in Stratford on October 14, 15 and 16. This was decided upon last evening by the City Dads. Ald. Green in bringing the matter before the meeting stated that chief Howard has been strongly urged to read a paper at the convention and there was a possibility of securing for Peterboro the convention of the Fire Chiefs of the Dominion next year. For these reasons he would like to see the Chief in attendance.

It was moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Stratton that the Chief and chairman of the committee be sent to the convention and that they be authorized to try and secure the 1915 convention of Canadian Fire Chiefs for Peterboro.

WOMAN WEAK AND NERVOUS

Finds Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Creston, Iowa.—"I suffered with female troubles from the time I came into womanhood until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would have pains if I overworked or lifted anything heavy, and I would be so weak and nervous and in so much misery that I would be prostrated. A friend told me what your medicine had done for her and I tried it. It made me strong and healthy and our home is now happy with a baby boy. I am very glad that I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and do all I can to recommend it."—Mrs. A. B. Boscamp, 504 E. Howard Street, Creston, Iowa.

Tons of Roots and Herbs

are used annually in the manufacture of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is known from ocean to ocean as the standard remedy for female ills.

For forty years this famous root and herb medicine has been pre-eminently successful in controlling the diseases of women. Merit alone could have stood this test of time.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

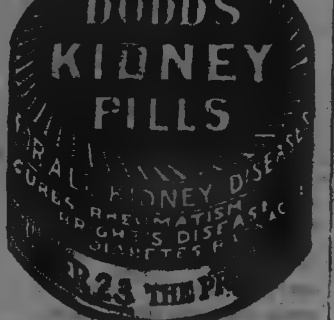
Just "Itching for a Scrap"

Here is a cheery letter from a midshipman in one of the British battleships that are waiting for the German fleet to come out of hiding; it appeared in the London Morning Post:— "A rumour got about that we had been sunk, some wooden gear that we had thrown overboard being found. We have not been sunk yet, nor, I am sorry to say, have we sunk any Germans. By the time this fetches up, however, I hope we shall have met them, captured most of them and sunk the rest. We are all itching for a scrap, and this routine is getting rather monotonous. We go to night defence-stations for three and half hours every night, and sleep in our clothes during watch off and after daylight. We go into harbor to coal every four or five days. In the daytime at sea we have nothing to do except to rig night defence gear (searchlights are stowed below at daylight), do physical drill, running round the ship, etc., to keep ourselves fit, and occasionally going to action stations. Of course there have been various alarms, when we have had to rush to our stations. But they are generally caused by some ham-handed horse marine firing a gun by mistake, or by some swivel-eyed lookout seeing one of our own ships and thinking it the enemy, or mistaking a treacle-tin for the periscope of a submarine. Anyhow, none of them have come to anything; but they tend to relieve the monotony, although at the expense of sleep, which is a rare luxury, especially at night. We have to sleep in the signal house so as to be near our searchlights, and are waked up every two or three minutes by signalmen coming in and falling over our feet (I can imagine you saying it serves me right for having such big ones?) It is the only place where they can switch on a light to read signs. But in spite of these little inconveniences, I dare say we come off better than you. I am very sorry for everybody left at home; the war must affect them much more than it does us. I expect Hal is taking the war very seriously and thinks it 'balmy' that he can't go to the front or come to sea? I am not allowed to tell you anything, so will write no more nonsense."

Britain Using Pressure?

ROME, Oct. 6.—(Via London.)—The German press, according to communications received here, thinks that Great Britain is using pressure to induce the Scandinavian countries, particularly Denmark, to abandon their neutrality and participate in the war against Germany.

The Deutsch Tage Zeitung of Berlin says it is rumored that many hostile ships have been seen in the Skagerrak and the Cattegat, adding, if these ships are British, it shows an intention to make threatening demonstrations against the Scandinavian states, particularly Denmark.



Japs in the South Sea

TOKIO, Oct. 6.—The Navy Department this morning issued the following statement:

"The Japanese squadron delegated to destroy the German fleet in the South Seas, has landed bluejackets on Jaluit Island, the seat of government in the Marshal Archipelago, which was annexed by Germany in 1886.

"It is believed the German base was destroyed and that the fortifications, arms and ammunition were seized. A British steamer in port was released. There was no resistance to the Japanese."

Friend of Prisoners Jailed.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—(Via The Hague to London.)—Edward Page Gaston, an American, who recently distributed blankets, underwear and clothing to British prisoners of war, was arrested here yesterday when about to depart from the city. The charge against him was not made public.

Man Who Burned Louvain Taken.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Among prisoners recently taken by the French is Major Von Manteuffel, who is said to have caused the destruction of Louvain. He was recognized by a Russian officer now with the French staff, who formerly knew him at Petrograd when he was stationed there.

MAKERS MUST GIVE UP.

British Government Deals Sharply With Woollen Goods Firms.

LONDON, Oct. 6. — According to The Yorkshire Post, the War Office is taking drastic measures to secure an adequate supply of hosiery, underclothes, gloves and other woollen goods for the army and navy. All the manufacturers in Leicester, the chief centre for the woollen industry, have been informed that their entire product of heavy woollen goods must be placed at the disposal of the War Office, and that if a single garment be withheld by a manufacturer, or is supplied to any firm whatever, the War Office will at once take over the factory at which it is made and run it, giving the firm a certain percentage of the profits.

AN UNSAFE JOB.

To Be a King In Southeastern Europe Is Hazardous.

A king or an heir to a throne in the Balkan states holds the most hazardous position among royalties. The murder of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg added two more names to the list of royal murders.

Compared with other sections of the world, the 200,000 square miles of Balkan territory present the climax of murder and political intrigue, and the rulers therefore are forced to live in utter loneliness and seclusion.

In the few months that have elapsed since his accession to the throne of Albania Prince William has been in constant terror of his life. Austrian and Italian warships linger within range of his castle at Durazzo, while 500 of their sailors are in constant attendance on the prince.

Twice he has been forced to take refuge on men-of-war while Mussulman insurgents stormed the Albanian capital. Every possible precaution has been taken to guard him, but his life is constantly in danger.

The assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga of Servia at Belgrade in June, 1903, was one of the most tragic in history. With them were slain two of the ministry, the queen's two brothers and two members of the royal guard, who attempted to protect them.

There had been no previous hint of a plot or uprising. The city of Belgrade had been draped with flags in commemmoration of the anniversary of the assassination of Prince Michael, who was slain June 11, 1868, in the park at Topschider, and a requiem mass was being said in his honor.

March 18, 1913, King George I. of Greece was assassinated while walking on the streets of Saloniki. A previous attempt on his life had been unsuccessful.

Other regicides and political murders in this little territory include the following:

July 25, 1895 — Stanislaus Stambouloff, ex-Premier of Bulgaria, killed by four persons armed with knives and revolvers.

Sept. 7, 1878—Pasha Mehemet Ali, murdered by Albanians.

June 4, 1876—Hussem Avni and other Turkish ministers killed by Hassam, a Circassian officer.

June 4, 1876—Abdul Aziz, Sultan of Turkey, assassinated.

June 10, 1878—Prince Michael of Servia, killed.

Aug. 13, 1860—Daniel, Prince of Servia, slain.

Oct. 9, 1831—Cato D'Istria, Greek count and statesman, tortured and killed.

The people of the various kingdoms are exceedingly patriotic, but when this passion turns against a king or official an assassination follows.

South Africa Not Disloyal.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The Cape Town correspondent of The Morning Post says that despite the activities of German spies and rumor-mongers, there is no evidence to suspect active disloyalty in South Africa. Gen. De Wet and a number of the Hertzogites continue demonstrations against the Government, although the number of Hertzog's party are solid for Botha. The correspondent adds that the Boer commandos in German S. W. Africa, who have been raiding union police posts are not, as reported here on Saturday, led by a nephew of Gen. De Wet, but by an adventurer with an inglorious record from the Boer war.

GERMAN WING ADMINISTERS SLIGHT CHECK

But Confidence of Victory is Expressed by Experts in London

VON KLUK GAINS

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Gen. Von Kluk has at last delivered a successful attack, and the German right wing yesterday gained ground. The points lost by the allies are not known, but it is believed that the principal assault took place in the region between Roye and Arras, where both sides are reported to have massed great bodies of troops in the past few days.

The French official statement yesterday afternoon acknowledged a temporary check on the left wing of the allies. It is worded as follows:

"On the left wing, to the north of the Oise, the battle continues with great violence. The result remains indecisive. We have been obliged, at certain points, to cede ground.

"Along the remainder of the front there has been no change.

"In Russia, after a battle which lasted ten days, the German army which was operating along the eastern Prussian front and the Niemen river has been driven along the entire line and made its retreat, abandoning a considerable quantity of war material.

"This army has evacuated completely the territory of the Russian provinces of Suwalki and Lonja."

This change in the situation comes after several days of desperate fighting on the part of the allies, endeavoring to pierce the line of German communications and complete the enveloping movement begun on the Marne. This line centres at Aix-la-Chapelle and Cologne, extending northeast from Compeigne through Tergnier, St. Quintin, Maubouge, Liege, and thence to the two first-named points. The allies have taken and held a railway line running from Amiens to Arras, where it diverges east and cut into the territory held by the Germans. This line has proved of immense value in bringing troops to vital points.

The town of Douai reappears constantly in reports from the front. It is said that heavy reinforcements have been rushed to that town, and that the fighting in the vicinity is of the most sanguinary character. Douai is situated 15 miles northeast of Arras, midway between that town and Valenciennes, on the railroad route to Mons. This indicates a progressive advance north. The allies are in touch with Belgian troops in the southwestern section of that country, and by means of a branch road, which runs from Arras via Douai and thence to Lille, Courtrai and Ghent, will be able to push ahead.

The opinion is held that a severe blow to the German lines of communication would completely tie up the German defensive. For this reason Von Boehm and Von Kluk are making superhuman efforts to turn back their enemies, which they have done with some success. Until the points lost are made public, no conclusion can be given as to the true situation.

Both in London and in Paris there is the greatest confidence, although some surprise is displayed at the success of the Germans in preventing the outflanking movement. There is a feeling, however, that the Germans cannot extend their line much further north without weakening it at some point.

Naturally progress by either side must be extremely slow, for after every advance, no matter how slight, the troops making it must entrench themselves for protection against the shells from the enemy's guns posted in strong positions from one end of the line to the other.

The Daily Mail's correspondent in France reports fighting in and around Douai, and considers that if the French have reached Douai in force that the situation of the German general, Von Kluk, must be desperate.

"Gen. Von Kluk," the correspondent says, "has had all the reinforcements which could be spared him and yet finds himself outnumbered at every point. There are many indications from German prisoners, from French officers and from members of the British transport service, the combined testimony of whom it is difficult to disbelieve, that the German army is becoming demoralized.

"The timidity of the German outposts, who surrender when surprised is strong evidence of their demoralization."

Official Inquiry Under Way.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—An official investigation is being made regarding the movements of a number of vessels which left American ports, carrying coal, presumably bound for ports which have not been reached. While there is no disposition on the part of the British Government to question the efforts of the United States Government to prevent the coaling of German warships by vessels from American ports, it is explained that every effort is being exerted to forestall a repetition of the coaling of the German cruiser Karlsruhe.

On Intelligence Staff.

Captain L. F. Guttman of the 14th Regiment left Kingston to join the Canadian contingent to take up an appointment on the intelligence staff of the Canadian contingent. He is well acquainted with European countries, and is a native of England. He is a professor at Queen's University School of Mining.

Home is where you are treated the best and grumble the most.

VICTORY COMPLETE

Germans Utterly Routed in Battle of Augustowo

ROME, Oct. 6.—The Russian embassy here last night made public an official communication received from the Russian headquarters' staff, saying:

"The defeat of the Germans is complete. Their retreat is changing into a rout that is so disorderly and precipitate that they are forced to abandon everything.

"Two Russian armies are proceeding, one from the west and another from the south toward Allenstein (in East Prussia, 50 miles southeast of Elbing).

"The German losses have not yet been officially ascertained, but it is estimated that they had 70,000 men disabled."

News from the Russian headquarters says that the invasion of Hungary through the Carpathians has two object. The first is to insure the left flank of the Russian army operating against Przemysl and along the San river, and second, to open a new field of action in the vast Hungarian plains where it can frighten the population, disturb the drilling of Hungarian reservists and recruits and cut the railway communications, besides freely feeding an important portion of the army from the resources of the country.

It is recalled that during the Russian-Turkish war of 1877, an expedition, commanded by Gen. Gourka, and mostly composed of cavalry did the same thing crossing the Balkan mountains and entering Eastern Roumania.

A despatch received here, speaking of the Russian invasion of Hungary says:—

"Having captured all the Carpathian passes, the Russians have commenced the invasion of Hungary. Advancing to the south they have occupied Hosezumezo. Then the Cossacks effected a daring coup. They crossed the river and cut the railway at Czigst, thus isolating the remainder of Hungary."

Sad.

"Many men of many minds,"
So the brief inscription runs.
No one, though, the precept binds,
For a man so often finds
Very many mindless ones.

No Ill Feeling.

"Hello! What's the trouble here, little boy?"

"Aw, they ain't no trouble! Them kids is jist scrappin' to see which kin lick."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 5.—A bull market, with a good demand for all grades of grain and a fair export trade, marked the opening of the week. Wheat prices opened ⅛c to ⅞c higher. There was a heavy decrease in world's shipments from last year—bad news from Australia and Argentina, a heavy decrease in local receipts, and a 365,000,000-bushel deficit in Europe—so the bulls came down with their horns on. Closing prices were ⅞c to 1⅛c higher for wheat, unchanged to ⅛c higher for oats, and 1⅞c to 2⅛c lower for flax.

Cash prices: Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.07; No. 2 do., $1.03⅝; No. 3 do., 98⅝c; No. 4, 93c; No. 5, 87½c; No. 6, 82½c; feed, 77c.

Oats—No. 2 C.W., 45⅛c; No. 2 feed, 44½c.

Barley—No. 3, 65c; No. 4, 58½c.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.13⅞; No. 2 C. W., $1.10⅞.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—Business in all lines of grains over the cable today was quiet owing to continued limited demand and the best bids from London for No. 1 northern wheat were 41s 3d. The local trade in oats is quiet, the demand being only for small lots to fill actual wants and as the offerings are fairly liberal, prices are lower all round. Argentine corn in car lots is selling at 84c per bushel ex-store. There is some demand for Ontario malting barley at a decline of 2c to 4c per bushel. The market for rolled oats is stronger in spite of the weakness in the raw material, and prices have advanced 45c per barrel.

In winter wheat flour the feeling is weaker and prices have declined 25c per barrel owing to more liberal offerings. Spring wheat flour is very quiet for both export and domestic account. The trade in millfeed is also slow as buyers are well supplied.

The butter market is quiet, finest creamery at the auction sale selling at 26⅝c. Demand for cheese from over the cable was quieter, but the tone of the local market is firmer in sympathy with the higher prices paid in the country. Eggs steady under a fair demand.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 5.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.10; No. 1 northern, $1.06⅞ to $1.09; No. 2 do., $1.00⅞ to $1.08⅞; December, $1.08⅞.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 65c to 66c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 42⅛c to 43⅞c.

Flour and bran unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Oct. 5.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.09; No. 1 northern, $1.08; No. 2 do., $1.05; December, $1.08.

WORK FOR ALL

If the men and women of Canada will buy nothing but "Canadian-Made" Goods from now to January First, every workman in Canada will be employed and the country will enjoy a period of prosperity hitherto undreamed of.

Canadian manufacturers are doing their duty under present stress in endeavoring to keep plants running and men employed regardless of profits.

Good Canadians will show enlightened patriotism, as well as sound business common sense, by buying only "Made in Canada" goods, thus building up their own prosperity and looking after those who remain at home.

And "Made in Canada" goods offer equal value with those made anywhere else in the world.

McDONALD EQUALS RECORD IN COLLEGIATE ROAD RACE

New Time Made by W. Common in Junior Event — Field Day on Friday

The annual road races in connection with the Collegiate Institute Field Day which is to be held next Friday were held last evening at four o'clock. The senior race was in the neighborhood of four miles in length and the time recorded by the officials as D. McDonald crossed the wire was 19.55 which is equal to the record. A. Austin came second and H. Lewis third.

Contrary to expectations the junior race was exceedingly interesting. It was about a mile shorter than the path for the seniors and the time made was 13.10 thus making a new record. W. Common was first, D. O'Connell second, and A. McLeod third. Common's lead on the third man at the tape was less than one hundred yards.

Mr. Carson, of the Y.M.C.A. acted as starter while the timekeepers were: Messrs. Pettit, Morris and Brown.

On Wednesday evening some of the jumps will be held.

The Indian Braves Are Coming Strong

Sporting Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I see by your paper that you seem to think that it will be between Frenchmen or the Irishmen that the tug of war will be won at the Riverside Park on Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 12. But I understand that this event is open and I am bringing six powerful Braves from the Chemong Indian Reserve to pull at the war. Look out if the rope does not break in favor of my Braves. I am sorry there are not more games open to enter in the contests. Smoke will be on the job in the 10 mile race, and is in pretty good shape. I know he will win as he always did. I hope they let us enter in some of the other contests as throwing the heavy shot, etc. We all have confidence that Smoke is a sure winner in the 10 mile race.

D. E. WHETUNG, Jr.,

Manager of the Chemong Athletic Club.

NEW FEATURES FOR MEET ON THANKSGIVING DAY

Some new features have been added to the athletic meet to be held at Riverside Park at 2 p.m. Thanksgiving Day.

One of the features of the day will be a public school relay race. Each of the public schools of Peterboro are going to put in a team of ten boys, making sixty boys in the one race. This is something new in this city and should be a big drawing card as all the children in their particular schools will be rooting for their team. This is not only a boon for athletics but it should create a loyalty among the children for their respective schools. Dr. Morrison, chairman of the school board has offered a banner for the winning team. This banner will be perpetual the school winning it will hold it for one year and then it will be put up for competition again. Show your loyalty to your school by coming out and cheering your team.

Another feature of the sports will be an exhibition of hammer throwing by Dr. R. W. Frank. This is a spectacular event, but because of the complicated coordinations in getting the turn necessary in order to throw the hammer, very few athletes take it up. It, however, should attract a great deal of attention as Dr. Frank holds the Intercollegiate championship of Canada.

All men and boys entering the city championships or the road race, should leave their entries at the Y.M.C.A. on or before Saturday, Oct. 10th. Only amateurs in good standing with the A.L.N.A. or the A.A.U. of C. can compete. If you are not a registered athlete call at once and see the physical director at the Y.M.C.A.

COMMENT

As You Like It

In 90 games and 120 hits Ty Cobb failed to get more than one home run.

W. A. Phelon, the well-known Cincinnati sport writer, says that the world's series will be all Athletics.

Frank Chance states he's through with baseball forever, and from now on will look after his ranch down in 'Fornia.

It is reported that the Braves will give "Rube" Marquard a slice of the Serious money." "Rube" surely helped them a lot to win.

Stallings believes that the disadvantage of opening the series away from home will not be so marked as under ordinary circumstances. He points out that his team has absolutely no home advantage over the Athletics because Mack's men know Fenway Park better than do the Braves. Stallings, however, is familiar with every intricacy of Shibe Park, as he made a close study of Mack's stamping ground when he was in command of the New York Americans.

Charles E. Tesreau, known to baseball fame as "Jeff," will appear in the New York court in a few days at the hearing of the breach of promise action brought against him by Miss Clara Young, of Perryville' Mo. Among the letters shown by Miss Young to police court reporters was one in which Tesreau explains how he kept his arm in the shape which was responsible for his good showing during the past season. The missive reads thusly: "The exercise that I gave my arms in your company last winter came in handy this season. Look at my record."

Manager John J. McGraw, of the Giants, has shown himself a mighty good sportsman. As a friend of Stallings he has volunteered all the available information possible as to the successful tactics of the world's champions in the two series against the Giants. Mathewson, who is one of the wisest pitchers in the game, has given Boston twirlers all the benefit of his experience with the Quakers. Both McGraw and Mathewson have attended the classes which Stallings holds in the clubhouse each day before the game.

A group of star golfers recently were discussing nerve, and some of the bunk thereof. "I remember two matches I had in a tournament," said one. "In the first match I was 2 down and 4 to play. I finished with two 4s and two 5s and won the match. And everyone complimented me on my courage in coming from behind. In the second match I was 2 up and 4 to play. I finished with three 4s and one 5, and was beaten. And everyone said I cracked. I played beter golf when I was beaten than when I won, yet I was supposed to have shown fine nerve in one instance and to have been blown in the other."

The miracle of the Braves is answered in the main by two vital factors — the genius and courage of Stallings, as related before, and the finest defence in the game.

Boston reached the top in 1914 just as Fielder Jones did in 1906—with no great attack, but with a defence almost impregnable. Boston's batting average all the year has been below .250. Her runners have stolen fewer bases than any other rival. Her attack has never been powerful or consistent. But attached to wonderful pitching was wonderful fielding—and all of it at its best in the pinch. The Braves made few errors when an error counted. They had the faculty of rising to meet the occasion—whether it needed wonderful pitching, a wonderful stop, or a double by Hank Gowdy down the left field line. And Gowdy, another Giant cast-off, furnished his share of these telling, timely blows. And if one man fell down, another one took his place.

Which recalls another remarkable feature of the Brave miracle. In the closing days of the stretch, when the leaders were supposed to be on the dizzy verge of "cracking under the strain," they ripped their way to ten victories in a row. And in eight of these ten victories they came from behind, centred their rugged assault upon one inning, and dashed on to victory. And in these ten straight contests at least seven different people played star roles, Connolly alone breaking up two tight battles with lusty blows that cleaned the bases.

For this reason Stallings refused to pick out any one or two men as the main stars. "I have never had a club with finer team play," he said. "It was a case of work together and pull together. Each man was for the other fellow and the team—but not for himself. Each man contributed his share. And they all understood that what I said on the bench in a tight game didn't go after the game was over. So there was no sulking and no loafing. It was hustle, work, and fight—through every inning of every day of every week. It was the gamest fight I've ever seen a ball club make—and I've been in the game for thirty years. For this reason I'd rather not pick out any one or two stars. One or two stars or four or five stars or nine or ten stars could never have done what my club accomplished — unless they were all working together — which stars don't always do. It was a case of team play — of twenty-five or thirty men all pulling in the same direction without a quitter or a sulker or a loafer in the bunch."

Which was of all the more value in a year where so many on other clubs were defying discipline or loafing in the knowledge that another league was waiting to take them in. —From Collier's.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THERE is said to be nothing new under the sun, but occasionally we meet a specimen of the genus homo who appears to be fresh.

You can't rely upon appearances, and it is foolish to disregard them. So what's to be done?

As there is no calculating on what a whimsical person will do, the only conclusion to come to is that he won't do.

As it requires sanity to judge sanity, an unprejudiced opinion as to the soundness of any one's mind is an impossibility.

Trying to edit and revise the opinions of another person is about as satisfactory as trying to extirpate the industrious dandelion.

Some people can't take a joke any more than others can make one.

When no possible good can come from it is the time that you may expect a lot of people to strenuously object.

ALONE.

I WALK the busy city street,
With crowds unending seething,
And hardly is there room for thought
And scarcely space for breathing.
Yet more alone I would not be
Were I in desert places,
In sight no habitation and
Of humankind no traces.

For of the thousands as they pass
Each one is as the other,
And none is there to reach a hand
Or stop to call me brother,
And there is none in all the throng,
Which as I pass is parted,
To care if I am blithe and gay
Or sad and broken hearted.

Like human ants they hurry by
Without a sign or token.
Although their kind is everywhere,
No word of cheer is spoken,
Unnoticing in any way
The man whose sleeve he brushes,
A little world unto himself
Each one as on he rushes.

For blank, unbroken solitude
The city with its rumble,
Its glitter and its fever pace,
Where fortunes grow and crumble,
For warm and true companionship,
For friendly human faces,
When hearts to other hearts respond,
Search out the wayside places.

Earning His Money.

"Is the train on time?"

"I'll know when it gets in," said the depot agent.

"So will I."

"But you won't draw a salary for knowing it."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

FEELEY—McDONALD.

The wedding was solemnized this morning at seven o'clock at the Church of the Sacred Heart, of Edward Feeley and Margaret McDonald. They were attended by Mr. Joseph Laplante and Marie McDonald, a sister of the bride. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. J. V. McAuley.

Mr. and Mrs. Feeley will reside in the city.

COOK—DUFFUS.

A pretty wedding took place at the Sacred Heart Church this morning when Mary Loretta, daughter of Mr. J. J. Duffus, of 269 Romaine Street, was united in marriage to Basil Cook, of Otonabee. The Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien officiated.

The bride, who was charmingly attired in ivory satin with pearl trimmings and carrying her mother's wedding wreath, was given away by her father. She was supported by Miss Helen Redmond as bridesmaid, who wore pink satin with shadow lace. Mr. Harold Duffus acted as best man. During the ceremony music was rendered by the choir and a solo by Miss Annie Simmons, while Mr. J. Armstrong played the wedding march. After the ceremony the wedding party repaired to Roy's studio where a group photograph was taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook will tour Western Ontario, and on their return will reside in Otonabee.

Mr. E. Hoop, Toronto, is here on business.

C. G. MacKay, Toronto, is here for a few days.

Mr. C. R. Battin, Toronto, is visiting friends here.

Mr. Chas. E. Geatman, Montreal, is here the guest of friends.

Mr. Henry Higgs, Amsterdam, N. Y., is a guest at the White House.

Miss E. Follis, of Rutherford Ave., returned this morning from Birmington, England, after spending a three months' visit.

Messrs. J. J. Turner, Jr., and R. Gavine, went to Ottawa last night, on business for the J. J. Turner and Sons.

Messrs. L. Ketcheson and R. H. Mortimer, Belleville, are among those registered at the Snowden House.

Dr. MacNaughton of Hamilton and Mrs. MacNaughton have returned home after spending their holidays very pleasantly with the doctor's sisters, Mrs. Learmonth, Stewart Street.

Capt. Fletcher Mitchell, Quartermaster for the 106 Regt. of Winnipeg, was in the city yesterday visiting friends. Capt. Mitchell is on his way home after six weeks of strenuous work at Valcartier.

The following extract is taken from a letter dated Sept. 19, which was received by Mrs. Soward, of Peterborough, from a niece in Brighton, Eng.:

"We have had such a summer's work in the general postoffice here as we have never had before, on account of the war. The staff is badly depleted, so many men having been taken for the coast guard stations. The office is watched night and day by detectives for fear any of the wires should be cut. There is scarcely a horse to be seen, the government having taken them all, and the town is full of soldiers. Mother was afraid they would billet some of them with us, but we find they do not send them to houses where there are only ladies. The barracks are full and there is a large camp beyond, and the Sussex county hospital, pavilion, grammar school and large public halls are full of sick and wounded. We have a fright every time an aeroplane goes over, for fear it should be a Zeppelin.

"London is darkened at night and is watched from above by airships, and the Germans resident there have been causing a good deal of trouble. The postoffice will not let them have their money from the savings bank unless they produce their naturalization papers. We have no gold, and the treasury notes have caused a great deal of loss and trouble. They are guillotined when they are made and consequently stick together so that it is easy to give away two instead of one, and the people are not always honest enough to return the extra one. I am glad to say they are going to be withdrawn and better ones substituted, and we now have a little gold again. We do not like paper money; we are not accustomed to it.

"The cost of all provisions, except tea, has increased enormously, in spite of Canada's munificent gifts. The papers are unanimous in their praise of Canada's loyalty and generosity.

"Strange to say, father said before he died two years ago, that this terrible war would come, but he did not think it would be during this generation, because he thought Germany was too poor to begin it. It is as he said it would be—we have neither men, horses, ammunition nor stores in sufficient quantities, so that the pressure of preparation is very great.

"As I write I can hear firing, probably at Newhaven, where entrenchments are being made and the harbor mined. I am sending you some of our latest papers, so that you may gather from them how things are really going. Mother says the destruction of Rheims cathedral is as dreadful a thing as it would be to destroy Westminster Abbey."

Sell Union Jacks on Trafalgar Day

From a recent issue of the People, the well-known London weekly, the following is taken:

The North British Academy of Arts (Newcastle-upon-Tyne), with the approval and sanction of the committee of the National Relief Fund, are organizing throughout the United Kingdom a National Union Jack Day, when every Briton, young and old, male and female, is expected to purchase and wear a miniature Union Jack in token of their patriotism and of their sympathy and desire to help the wives, widows and children of the gallant men who have volunteered to fight for their country's honor, and, it may be, for its very existence. The entire cost of organizing this Union Jack Day will be borne by the North British Academy of Arts, and the proceeds arising from the sale of the Union Jacks will be devoted to the Prince of Wales' National Relief Fund.

Union Jack Day is appointed to be on Oct. 21 next, the anniversary of the battle of Trafalgar (Oct. 21, 1805). The work of making these small Union Jacks will be given to the unemployed wives and daughters of the soldiers and sailors. The Union Jacks will be set on sale at cost price by the North British Academy of Arts, and all those not returned as unsold must be paid for out of the amounts collected, and the balance either remitted direct to Buckingham Palace or sent to the North British Academy for transmission.

This same plan might possibly be executed in this city and have the proceeds go to the Patriotic Fund. It is possible to secure a gross of suitable flags for $1.50, and should they be sold for five cents a piece they would bring in return $7.20 or a profit of $5.70.

SINOFF MUST TAKE OUT LICENSE

Police Chief Has Been After Him for Two Months

In police court this morning Abraham Sinoff who carries on a clothing store at 311 George St., was charged with operating as a transient trader without a license.

It appears that about two months ago, he was told by the police chief that he would be required to take out a license. He did not pay much attention to the repeated warnings of the Chief, so he was asked to appear in court this morning. E. L. Goodwill who appeared for him, maintained that Sinoff was a ratepayer, but this was disproved by S. R. Armstrong, city clerk, and W. J. Green, tax collector. Mr. Goodwill pointed out that the defendant was in a bad way financially, but his intentions were good. He had taken a three year lease and he wasn't trying to evade the law in any way.

Magistrate Dumble assessed him $53.35 and gave him seven days in which to take out a license. If he does so the penalty of $50 will go to his credit.

Conceited Jailbirds

In the land of the Niger, says Mr. P. Amaury Talbot in the London Times, little or no stigma attaches to jailbirds.

In fact, prison residence is often regarded as conferring the mark of culture and distinction. The last governor of Southern Nigeria once complimented a chief of the interior on his knowledge of English, to which the man replied with a proud air: "Of course I be fit to talk English mouth! I learn all that when I live long time for prison."

Such residence is indeed looked upon as giving a sort of official status. At Calabar some prisoners were out cleaning the road when a clerk, dressed in the height of fashion, high collar, patent leather boots and the smartest of suits, went by. In passing he flicked one of the bending laborers with a little swagger cane he was carrying. At once the aggrieved party sprang erect. "What!" he exclaimed, with splendid contempt. "You dare touch me! You factory man! Look-a me!" Here he pointed to the broad arrows prominently displayed over his simple vest and loin cloth. "I be government man! See here!"

And the dandy passed on thoroughly abashed.

These have been carefully selected in accord with the Thanksgiving spirit, and studied and rehearsed in a most thorough manner.

Keep the date open and watch for program to-morrow.

CARE OF THE EWE AND LAMB

The Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa has issued a very practical bulletin on "The care of the Ewe and Lamb." It constitutes a shepherd's presentation of the details of management of the breeding flock, more particularly during the winter and spring months. It takes up, among other things, parturition, feeding, docking, castration, the raising of pet lambs, and the simple and more serious ailments and accidents met with in the ordinary flock, concluding with a series of paragraphs termed "Leaves from the note-book of a successful shepherd."

The bulletin, which is helpfully illustrated was prepared by T. Reginald Arkell, who has charge of the Sheep and Goat Division of the Live Stock Branch. It is designated as Pamphlet No. 5 of the Live Stock Branch. Copies are available to those who apply for them to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

You can give money and that's assistance; but it takes personal work to be of service.

NO REDUCTION IN MINIMUM AGE OF DELEGATES

Methodist Probationers Will Still be Asked if They Use Snuff

Rev. Dr. Carman Ex-Officio Member of all Standing Committees

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—The proposal to empower the executive of an Epworth League to nominate its own superintendent, provoked a lengthy discussion at the Methodist general conference to-day, but it finally voted to allow the minister to retain his privilege.

The proposal to make Rev. Dr. Carman an ex-officio member of all standing committees, was endorsed. Little support was given the motion reducing the minimum age of delegates from 25 to 21 years.

Once a year probationers for the ministry are asked whether they use snuff, tobacco or intoxicating liquors, and an answer in the negative is expected.

The discipline committee reported in favor of dropping this question, but the close vote resulted in the recommendation being defeated, so the question will be asked from year to year.

Ottawa, Oct. 6. — For the first time in the history of the Methodist Church in Canada, some ritual will be embodied in the new hymn book for the Church. The General Conference decided on this yesterday afternoon. The ritual will include the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments, the Apostles' Creed, the questions and answers of the Reception Service, and the general confession of the service of the Lord's Supper.

Discussion on the report of the Hymn Book Committee, of which Rev. Dr. S. P. Rose, Montreal, was chairman, and Dr. A. D. Watson, Toronto, was secretry, absorbed considerable time, and was the feature of the business yesterday.

The report of the Hymn Book Committee provoked considerable debate. One of the first terms to cause discussion was the recommendation that "amen" be sung only at the end of certain or suitable hymns. Some of the delegates favorod singing "amen" at the close of all hymns.

Rev. Dr. Salem Bland, Winnipeg, pointed out that some hymns are in the nature of a warning. The committee's desire prevailed.

The conference favored embodying in the new hymn book the Lord's Prayer, the Apostle's Creed, the Ten Commandments, the Questions and Answers of the Reception Service, the General Confession of the Service of the Lord's Supper. This is a new departure as there is no ritual in the old hymn books.

There is a feeling amongst some of the delegates that the committee had in selecting hymns for the new book omitted to put in some of the best old tunes.

Rev. Dr. Bland suggested an appendix for the new volume in which some of the old favorites thrown out by the committee be placed. "Some of the old tunes have been dear to us since childhood," said Dr. Bland.

W. S. Dingman, of Stratford, Ont., said he had a good deal of sympathy for Dr. Bland's suggestion, but he did not favor an appendix. It would be better, Mr. Dingman held, to put the old tunes right in the book.

Rev. A. D. Watson, Toronto, secretary of the committee, appealed for the adoption of the recommendation of the committee.

Rev. W. L. Hall, Revelstoke, B.C., favored a canvass being taken of the different congregations throughout the country. The acceptance of the new book would mean a considerable break from old associations.

An amendment that the new book be sent to the annual conferences before it is approved was lost. An amendment to the amendment that an appendix be added was also lost. The report was adopted.

Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, general superintendent by virtue of being elected head of the Church, will in future reside in Toronto. Two years ago he went to reside in Vancouver, primarily for the purpose of putting Ryerson Theological College on a practical working basis; also to attend to the affairs of the Church in the West, while Rev. Dr. Carman, then general superintendent, attended to affairs in the East.

Rev. Dr. Carman informed the conference he would accept the position of general superintendent emeritus.

A resolution expressing appreciation for the good work done in the mission field in the West by Rev. Dr. Jas. Woodsworth, of Winnipeg, retiring superintendent of home missions, was passed, all the delegates standing as a significant mark of respect and approval.

To Settle Dispute Out of Court

The action of Henry Thomas Cross and Richard Cross, of Campbellford and Toronto, respectively, against Charles Davidson, of Campbellford, to recover the sum of $285 alleged to be due the plaintiff on a real estate deal and $175 alleged to be due the plaintiff from the sale of furniture, which was to have come up before Judge Huycke at the non-jury sitting of the county court to-day, was adjourned till the December sitting.

It is expected that the parties will settle the matter out of court.

An Appreciation of Peterboro

H. J. Osborn, J.P., London, England, journalist and lecturer, who is spending a week in the city, and is speaking on Wednesday (tomorrow) night, in St. John's Church school house, on "England Today—Conditions in War Time," Mayor Buller in the chair, sends to the Review the cordial appreciation of Peterboro printed below.

A Visitor's Appreciation.

Much travel on the Grand Trunk Railway has familiarized me with that great company's motto, "Safety First,' and borne into one's mind the fact behind the phrase. By it and other roads, during five former visits in Canada, and on this present tour, one has been carried to, and through many cities and towns, and been The Transient Guest, or the "Stranger within the Gate," in a fairly long list of places in this Dominion. A lover of Canada, one is perhaps predisposed in favor of many things Canadian, and it is in no desire to disparage other cities that I pen these lines.

Yet I use only the words of soberness when I say that I regard Peterboro as the nicest, sweetest, cleanest city I have yet seen this side of the Atlantic. Centre and suburbs strike one with an air, and an influence that breathes welcome," business streets and residential avenues alike impress by trim neatness, good order, bright activity, and charming outlook; while within a brief walk beyond the centre, the abundant foliage, and especially the luxuriance and loveliness of the predominant maple, satisfy the eye with a colour scheme that recalls an Alpine sunset. But all that is merely the physical and inanimate at that. Much more, is it the people who make and give character to place? Without announcement, and one can believe unconsciously, the citizens of Peterboro have taken as a motto, or at least they practice the sentiment, "Courtesy First." This quality is quickly sensed by a traveller in many lands, and seldom, if ever, has it been so obvious as here. Not many hours, much less days, sufficed. In a brief stay one has met many and varied representatives of the city's life. And without a single exception marked courtesy has been the note of all intercourse. It has been a delight to meet and to be thus welcomed by the Mayor, ex-Mayor, editors, lawyers, clergy, ministers, church and society officials — while store, cafe, railroad, road car attendants, policemen, and even entire strangers in the streets have displayed the same quality.

A grateful tribute of thanks is due, and is offered with the assurance that Peterboro will long retain a warm place in memory and regard.

Some Basic Principles of Agricultural Chemistry

A pamphlet has been issued by the Central Experimental Farm entitled "The Farmer as a Manufacturer." It has been prepared by Mr. A. T. Stuart, B.A., Assistant Chemist, who has presented a number of simple illustrations of the chemical processes that take place in vegetable and animal life.

The processes are indicated by which the farmer, whose raw materials are but air, water and soil, is able to manufacture therefrom an apparently endless variety of products—both plant and animal. It is shown, however, that their composition is to be easily understood, consisting as they do of but four principal constituents. The nature of the raw materials, the process of manufacture and the products are discussed.

Under the heading "Maintaining Fertility" it is pointed out that "the farmer must exercise extreme care if he would keep his soil in the highest condition of productiveness. Soil is the real guardian of the farmer's capital, and the security is absolute. Try as he may he cannot "Break the bank." He may bring about temporary derangement and dividends may for awhile be suspended, but invariably under better management prosperity can be restored and perhaps even larger profits than ever secured."

The pamphlet, which is Bulletin No. 20, of the Second Series, is available to those to whom the information is of interest on application to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

MILITARY UNIFORMS

In many houses in the city there are uniforms, belts, some rifles, side arms, and other equipment belonging to the 57th Regiment. These in some cases have been left by soldiers now out of the city. The equipment is urgently needed and will be called for if a card is sent to Capt. A. G. Carruthers, 138 Hunter St.

Persons unlawfully having these articles in their possession are liable to a fine of $20.

It is a good plan to pepper a carpet thickly just where any heavy piece of furniture has to rest on it, as this helps to keep the moths and other insects away.

OPPOSING LINES NEAR TO BELGIAN BORDER

Terrific Fighting Continues on Allies Left Wing — Enemy's Attacks in Woevre Have Failed — Germans Driven From Fresh Positions by Russians

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 7.—The afternoon official communication says: "On our left wing the battle continues with great violence. Masses of cavalry contending on either side have extended the opposing lines as far as the neighborhood of Armentieres, or virtually to the Belgian border.

"The enemy's attacks in the Woevre district have failed and there is nothing new between the Somme and the Meuse.

"In the eastern theatre, the German army, retreating from its defeat at Augustówo, has been driven from fresh positions by the Russians, who have penetrated East Prussia at several points."

RUSSIANS BOMBARDING PRZEMYSL.

Paris, Oct. 7.—The Havas Agency reports that the Russians are heavily bombarding Przemysl. Austrian efforts to relieve the fortress have failed and they have retreated.

GERMAN DESTROYER SENT TO BOTTOM.

London, Oct. 7.—The Central News announces that a British submarine has sunk a German destroyer off Wilhelmshaven. Witnesses of the catastrophe saw a great column of water shoot up under the vessel's bows. She heeled over and sank in three minutes. A cruiser rescued the crew.

At the same time the periscopes of two submarines appeared, but it is thought these were German.

The vessel was sunk off the coast of Holland.

SAY ENGLISH MINES SANK BRITISHER.

London, Oct. 7.—A Reuter despatch from Ostend says survivors from the sunken British steamer Ardmount arriving there, declared their vessel was struck by English mines and did not sink until she had struck a third mine.

VICTORY REPORTED FOR AUSTRIANS.

London, Oct. 7.—It is officially announced from Huszt, Hungary, that Austrian forces have been heavily engaged with the Russians since Monday at a point near Tecsoe, telegraphs the Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's.

The Russians retreated. The battle came to an end near Koerossalva, with a complete victory for the Austrians.

JAPS IN POSSESSION OF ISLAND.

Peking, Oct. 7.—It is learned from German sources that the Japanese have occupied the island of Yap Chief, an island of the Caroline group.

CHOLERA OUTBREAK AT TARNOW, GALICIA.

London, Oct. 7.—The Exchange Telegraph Co. reports a violent outbreak of Asiatic cholera at Tarnow, in Galicia, with 40 cases reported yesterday.

SUPREME FEATURE IN FRANCE.

London, Oct. 7.—Now that Gen. Von Kluk in his turn is endeavoring to outflank the allies, the big battle in France appears further from a conclusion that it did two days ago. This counter-stroke is viewed here as a supreme feature in the situation. Neither side is claiming any decision in this unprecedented struggle.

GERMAN BOATS SUNK AT KIAO CHOW.

London, Oct. 7.—The belief was expressed at the war office to-day that the German cruiser Cormoran and two other German gunboats had been sunk in Kiao Chow Bay. The Japanese army has occupied the Shan Tung railroad as far west as Chi Nan.

TOTAL LOSSES OF ENEMY 300,000.

London, Oct. 7.—German losses up to September 1 were 117,000 in killed and missing, according to an official list published in Berlin, and the authorities admit that the total losses to date are 300,000 at least, says an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Rome.

AUSTRIANS LOSE FOUR BOATS.

Paris, Oct. 7.—The Rome correspondent of the Havas Agency declares four Austrian torpedo boats and two destroyers have been lost off the coast of Dalmatia as the result of coming in contact with mines. The majority of the members of the crews perished.

THE BERLIN ANNOUNCEMENT

Berlin, Oct. 7.—An official announcement says: "Continuous French outflanking movements against our right wing have extended the battlefront until it is now north of Arras, west of Lille and west of Lens, nine miles northeast of Arras. Our advance guards are in touch with the enemy's cavalry. No decision as yet has been reached in our counter-attacks along a line between Arras, Albert and Roye. The situation remains unchanged along the battlefront between the Oise and the Meuse, in the vicinity of Verdun, and in Alsace-Lorraine.

"There is no news from Antwerp.

"In the eastern theatre of war the Russians advancing against East Prussia through the province of Suwalki have been checked. We have been successful in our attack against the enemy near the town of Suwalki. This movement began yesterday."

TAG DAY

Funds are urgently needed to carry on the work of the Children's Aid Society, and it is hoped that citizens will make a liberal response on Saturday, when the annual Tag Day will be held.

Last month there were 22 children at the Shelter, and at the present time 18 children are being cared for. There are others who should be at the Shelter.

BABY CONTEST

The prizes, diplomas and certificates awarded to the best babies at the Better Baby Contest will be given Friday evening at 8 p.m. in the Public Library Assembly Hall. There will be a short program and moving pictures. The members of the Board of Education, the Ministerial Association, the City Council, and all interested in child welfare as well as the general public are invited to be present.

LONDON PETITION.

London, Ont., Oct. 7.—Petitions are being circulated asking the city council to submit to the people in January next the question of commission government for the city.

Refused to Congratulate New Premier

Motion at Methodist Conference is Withdrawn

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—A proposal to congratulate Hon. W. H. Hearst on his appointment to the Premiership of Ontario led to accusations of political partizanship on the floor of the General Conference of the Methodist Church today.

Rev. W. G. Hunt, of Calgary, and E. E. Starr, of Whitby, were the mover and seconder of the resolution. Lay delegate Patrick of Victoria, jumped to his feet as soon as the motion was read and declared the resolution was political. "I think we should with conservative hands convey this resolution to the wastepaper basket," said lay delegate George Bell, of Victoria. Delegate W. B. Smith, of Oakville, then reminded the assembly that Mr. Hearst is an official member of the Methodist Church and declared the resolution of congratulation to one of their own people would not be political.

"Mr. Hearst's appointment to the Premiership does not affect the Methodist Church from coast to coast," declared another delegate. If Mr. Hearst deserves congratulation, so does N. W. Rowell for his great stand last June."

"In the judgment of the chairman, the motion had better be withdrawn," said Dr. Chown. "It might cause suspicion of a tinge of political partisanship in this conference."

The motion was then withdrawn.

PREMIER HEARST'S ADDRESS TO PEOPLE OF ONTARIO

Trail Blazed by Sir James Whitney Broad and Worthy Enough For Succeeding Premiers.

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—Ontario's new Premier, Hon. W. H. Hearst, issued last evening his inaugural address to the people of the province. He makes extended and sympathetic reference to the part which Sir James Whitney played in political life and states that the trail he blazed was broad and worthy enough to provide a path for all succeeding Premiers. If, however, occasion demanded radical action, there would be no hesitation in breaking new ground.

After his tribute to the late statesman, Premier Hearst says:

"We have not yet had time to give thought and consideration to new questions and subjects that may demand attention, but I desire at this, my earliest opportunity, to assure the public that the policy of hydro-electric development, inaugurated under the Whitney Government and carried to such a triumphant success with unexampled energy, zeal and devotion to the public service by Sir Adam Beck, will be carried on with unabated vigor, until the boon of cheap light, cheap heat and cheap power is available to every section of the province and to every class of the community, to the toiler on the farm as well as the dweller in our towns and cities, so far as it is practicable and feasible to accomplish this."

A tribute to the self-sacrificing labors of Hon. Dr. Pyne in his devotion to the late Premier and in his official capacity is followed by mention of the special work of the other members of the Cabinet, including the new Minister of Public Works, Hon. Mr. Macdiarmid, who "brings marked ability and special capacity for work to the service of the province."

Dealing with agriculture, the Premier says:

"An active campaign has been inaugurated, and will be pressed on with increased vigor, to stimulate a greater production of foodstuffs so urgently required now by the Empire as well as for home consumption. Additional efforts will be made to secure for the consumer the products of the farm without any unnecessary advancement in price over that obtained by the producer."

The address touches upon the development of the north, the furtherance of educational work, the financial affairs of the province, social welfare work, and refers in a general way to the stimulation of trade; the relief of unemployment and ends with a personal expression of the Premier's appreciation of his recent appointment.

ONTARIO WOMEN ESCAPED.

London, Oct. 7.—The following ladies, who had been held up in Germany since the war opened, reached London yesterday: Mrs. Bratt, Toronto, and the Misses Colquhoun, Holdsworth, Tuer and Bletcher, of Port Hope. They report having been civilly treated during their enforced detention.

Daughter Born to Mrs. Winston Churchill

London, Oct. 7.—A daughter was born today to Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the First Lord of the Admiralty. The Churchills now have one son and two daughters.

COUNT ZEPPELIN BOASTS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 7. — In a despatch from the Hague the correspondent of the Daily Express says German newspapers reaching there indicate that Count Zeppelin is now at Wilhelmshaven on the North Sea, with his staff. Wilhelmshaven is a point from which the great air raid on the British Isles is to start. One of these papers publishes an interview with the Count in which he says he had not forgotten England and would prove it very soon.

The correspondent of the Express continues that Count Zeppelin was summoned recently by Emperor William to Mainz. The Emperor told the Count he relied on him for great work and offered to make him commander-in-chief of the German air fleet. The Count smilingly refused but said he would accept the title when he returned from England.

Zeppelin staffs are working day and night at Wilhelshaven and another station is being established at Emden for other types of airship.

ALL DONATIONS ARE TRANSPORTED FREE OF CHARGE

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has ceived a communication from the Minister of Trade and Commerce stating "that the desire has been expressed by farmers of the Province, and by several of the heads of municipalities, that an offering should be made by them in recognition of their duty and loyalty towards the government of Great Britain in the prosecution of war and to the relief of distress resulting therefrom.

"Arrangements have been made to pay the cost of transport of these donations from the point of shipment on the railway to their ultimate desintation."

In regard to this matter, the wardens of the various counties have been asked to co-operate.

SECOND FORCE OF TWENTY FIVE THOUSAND CANADIANS

Premier Borden Says Preparations are Now in Progress For the Equipment and Training of Another Contingent For Service in Europe.

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—Canada intends to have 50,000 men in the battle front, according to an official statement made by Sir Robert Borden last evening. With 33,000 men, accompanied by 7,000 horses and a complement of guns, etc., now on their way to England, Canada proposes further to organize and train forthwith a second expeditionary force of 20,000 men, with a first reinforcement of ten per cent., making 22,000 men in all. This force, the Prime Minister states, will be organised as speedily as possible, and the arrangements for providing the necessary arms, ammunition and equipment are said to be already in progress.

The composition of the second expeditionary force has not been decided upon, but it is expected that it will take the form of the first, though it is scarcely probable that the same number of artillery will accompany it. In view of the many offers of cavalry units, more horsemen will likely accompany this force.

Upon the arrival of the first division in England, it is probable that the force will be organized as follows: Field troops, including a first reinforcement of ten per cent., 26,400 men; line of communication, troops, 2,100; total force at the front, 28,500. This will leave about 4,500 men for training in Great Britain, who will constitute a reinforcement of nearly twenty per cent. for the men at the front.

It is stated that 31 large steamships were required to transport the first Canadian army to England.

In addition to the above organization, preparations are being made to organize and train necessary further reinforcements for both the first and second expeditionary force.

It is probable that the training and organization of these reinforcements will be made in the city armories. It is not stated how the second contingent of 22,000 men will be mobilised, as winter conditions will prohibit the formation of such a camp as Valcartier.

Contrary to previous announcements that Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, would leave for a holiday in the Haliburtan woods, it is a matter of general knowledge that the Minister will leave for England probably before the end of this week. It is not known how long he will be away, but the organisation of the second expeditionary force will be under the supervision of Premier Borden, in the capacity of Acting Minister of Militia.

MAUBEUGE STORY IS REFUTED

Britain Sent no Ammunition Before Declaring War

LONDON, Oct. 7. — The official press bureau last night issued a statement declaring to be "absolutely untrue" the allegations made by Prof. Harnack and other prominent Germans that Great Britain had stored quantities of ammunition at the French fortress of Maubeuge before the outbreak of the war, which the Germans claimed was evidence that she intended to violate the neutrality of Belgium. The statement adds:

"No decision to send British forces abroad was taken till after Germany had violated Belgian neutrality and Belgium had appealed for assistance. No British ammunition or stores had been placed at Maubeuge before these events. Any British ammunition or stores found at Maubeuge were sent there after and not before the outbreak of the war and the violation of Belgian territory by Germany."

DIPHTHERIA EPIDEMIC, DOCTORS AGREE CHILDREN SHOULD ATTEND SCHOOL

Will be Given Better Opportunity to Combat the Disease— Six Cases of Diphtheria in the City—Six Others Outside the Limits

A meeting of the board of health was held this morning and was marked by the attendance of Dr. Clinton, district medical health officer. The main item of interest was the discussion of the diptheria epidemic which has become rather prevalent in the southern section of the city and that section of North Monaghan to the south of the Exhibition grounds. Dr. McPherson, the local M. H. O., reported that the first case found among the pupils of the School of the Sacred Heart was a week ago yesterday. That case proved fatal, and a few days after two more cases were reported. He went to the institution, examined all the pupils in the two rooms in which cases occurred, injected antitoxin and took swabs from pupils with a discharging nose in these rooms. These were sent to Toronto for examination. When the result of the examination was returned, one case was reported as containing the diphtheria germs, so the house where the child resided was quarantined.

Provincial Men Here.

Dr. McCullough and Dr. Clinton, who were in the city attending the Better Baby contest, accompanied him to the school, and the pupils in the other six rooms were examined. Dr. Clinton has promised to remain and assist him to overcome the trouble. Dr. McPherson stated that the people of the south ward, particularly those in the immediate vicinity of the School of the Sacred Heart, are scared and are keeping their children home from school. Others are asking why the school has not been closed. To his mind the idea of closing the school would be folly, for the children would run about and be more liable to spread the disease. It was his plan to get all the children going to school and keep them examined, and watch the absentees, thus affording a better chance to eliminate the epidemic. In all there are twelve cases, six in the city and six outside the city limits. So far three deaths have been recorded.

Pupils Should Attend.

Dr. Clinton also spoke on the subject and thoroughly approved of the children attending school. He reviewed the fighting of epidemics in other centres, and from experience he stated that it was more easily overcome when the pupils keep on attending school and are examined regularly. He was surprised when he entered the School of the Sacred Heart to find that about one-half the pupils were absent. He urged that Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien be interviewed and that a nurse be secured who would go around to the various parents whose children are being kep home, and urge them to send their children to school. The danger is not in the school, but it is in coming in contact with pupils carrying the germs. It is possible for them to carry diphtheria germs and yet not be ill, and the best manner to select these is to have the pupils examined regularly. This work should, of course, be executed by a nurse, not the M. H. O. Dr. Clinton further stated that he would remain a couple of days and assist in getting the epidemic under control. His suggestian was acted upon. Dr. Amys, Dr. McPherson and Dr. Clinton will confer with Father O'Brien and endeavor to secure a nurse.

HAS 97 WOUNDS.

Paris, Oct. 7.—M. Dumont, an army surgeon, is lying in Val de Grace hospital with 97 wounds. A shell burst above his head near Soissons, killing his horse.

The surgeon lost his right ear, part of his left arm, both his legs were bored like a cylinder, and his kidneys were badly raked, but no important organ was touched. He is recovering.

A. G. T. R. CHANGE.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

John McGarvey Charged With Theft of Money

In police court this morning John McGarvey was charged with stealing $85 from Harry Hamilton, a Celestial, who runs a laundry at 52 Hunter St. East. He was committed for trial. Harry Hamilton called, stated on Tuesday, 29th of September, he had received the sum of $85 from one Leung Quinn, another Chinaman at noon, in payment of a debt. About 7.15 p.m. of the same day the defendant entered the shop and took up a coat that was on the counter, and then threw it back again. After he went out the plaintiff examined his coat, and found the money was gone.

Cross-examined by Mr. Widdifield it was shown the Chinaman had had some quarrel with some passer-by in which the Chinaman had his shirt torn. Leung Quinn was called and told of paying the sum of $85 to Harry Hamilton.

Robert Allen, a bright boy of 14 years, told of seeing the prisoner throw a coat into the Chinaman's shop. He said he could see into the shop and said he did not see prisoner put his hand in the coat or take any money. Detective Newhall told of Harry Hamilton coming to the police station and telling him he had lost $85 or $87 he wasn't sure which. The detective told of going over to East City and finding the prisoner in front of the Hogan Hotel. On being searched by the detective he found a roll of bills and prisoner said "you'll find $85 there." When the detective counted it, there was $67. On searching the prisoner's room the detective found in a valise under the bed, $100. He then placed the man under arrest.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, OCT. 7, 1914

THE LOWER AND HIGHER EFFICIENCY.

WHATEVER our religious opinions or convictions have been, the present war is bound to affect them profoundly. Men cannot be the same after this great war is over as they were before the fiery throats of cannon thundered its beginning. For the same reason, every aspect of thought and activity will feel the influence of the war.

Up to the present war, intellectual ideals have been cherished. With them has arisen a most searching spirit of criticism. Indifference was prevalent. The pursuit of gain was naturally an engrossing feature of a long, prosperous era of comparative peace. Dissatisfaction with prevailing religious ideas arose, and, what gave scope for indifference in some countries, opened a field for a new philosophy which found a wide sphere of, if not acceptance, at least respect in Europe. The new philosophy was that of efficiency, propounded by Nietzsche. It was a philosophy of valour, blessing the great in spirit, and the war makers. While it emphasizes efficiency, it really is a doctrine of self-interest. It may be a high and in many respects beneficial self-interest. Dealing with this subject, President Falconer asserted in his sermon to the students of Toronto University that there was a higher and a lower efficiency. "We have cherished intellectual ideals," he said. "We learn now that there is something more than that, that humanity is larger than intellect."

To learn that means to follow a doctrine of sacrifice. That illustrates the difference between German and British ideals, between the lower and the higher efficiency. It is a view of life that we were fast losing. It is not so much what we can get as what we can do that counts. That ideal is needed in every sphere of Canadian life. Our politics would be better, cleaner, more efficient, if party did not receive quite so much emphasis as the needs of the people as a whole. The good of the nation ought to be enhanced if there is a general feeling that humanity means something and requires something of everybody, for with the political system we have in Canada, it but reflects the thought and feelings of the people. The sobering influence of the war ought to have the effect of facilitating the "higher efficiency" in church, in business, and in thought.

WHY NOT ?

A SINGER in the Dresden Royal Opera writes to an American friend of how the war preparations went forward in his city, and says :

> "During the first two weeks I virtually lived in the streets, and I never saw any disturbance or a man drunk. As a company was formed and put in marching order, it was addressed by the captain, who in every case advised the men that the greatest enemy was alcohol."

The same story, says Collier's, is told in the despatches from Austria, England, France and Russia. If a man must keep sober during war in order to take the lives of others to the best advantage, why should he not keep sober in time of peace so as to bring his own life to the best of which it is capable ?

POLITICS OUGHT TO BE BETTER.

IT HAS BEEN SAID outside of Peterborough that W. Peterborough was "politically the most rotten hole in Canada." This was not always the case. Peterborough began well and has had in the past men of eminence in every way. But a new order of things arose. The weak and the greedy stopped off long enough from their professions of faith to eat heartily of the loaves and fishes, which in many cases were considered all the sweeter because most of them were got unfairly, if not meanly. We have heard the present member say that when he first went to Ottawa he was much irritated at the chaffing he received for having to represent West Peterborough. This has all changed. The remains, only, of the orgy are left. The smell still hangs about, and a few of the favoured still pine for the "good old days." But Peterborough no longer takes pride in having no pride. Getting the dollar is no longer the sole and only worthy object of the "free-living and earnest seeker after good." Drink debases. Vice destroys. Corruption and crookedness bring ruin and decay. The prayer of the Samaritan, "Teach us, O Lord, to be men," will soon be the prayer of the people as of yore. There is no cause for despair. The wicked may flourish for a while, but Necessity alone requires a change. Those who get unfairly are robbing somebody else. President Falconer challenges the present condition of things as one of failure, but not without hope.

* * *

THE International Harvester Company announces that it will start its big molding shop going full time, and its other shops as soon as business will permit. That is putting the "Business as Usual" slogan into effect. We hope to hear soon similar announcements from local factories that have been inactive lately.

GERMAN TEXTILES AND EDUCATION.

DURING the fiscal year ending March 31, 1913, Canada imported merchandise from Germany to the value of nearly fourteen and a half million dollars, of which over three million dollars' worth were textile materials, says the Montreal Journal of Commerce. These goods consisted principally of knitted goods, embroideries, lace, yarns, silk fabrics, and of what is termed in our Customs returns as "other clothing." Knitted goods formed the largest single item, amounting to nearly one and a half million dollars, consisting chiefly of socks and stockings, gloves and mitts, and the finer lines of men's, women's and children's underwear.

Our imports of textile materials from Germany are comparatively insignificant when compared with those from Great Britain, although it is well known that a considerable quantity of German goods are annually imported through British houses, thereby obtaining the advantage of the reduced tariff. It is a remarkable fact that German manufacturers undersell the world in this market on fine lines of both cotton and woollen goods, and also in specialties. The Germans have made great progress in the perfection of specialty machinery, as evidenced in their progress in the manufacture of specialty knit goods, such as knitted ties and scarfs of all kinds, and the fact that a large proportion of the machines making these lines in the United States and Canada are of German make. In the spinning of fine yarns and the manufacture of fine goods, whether cottons, woollens, silks or other lines, they are unexcelled, and their product finds a market in every portion of the globe.

Most of the lines imported into Canada from Germany are not manufactured in this country, and with the present equipment of our mills very few of them can be made here. The demand for most is limited, although a few, such as cotton gloves, are imported in large quantities, so that it is not likely that Canadian manufacturers will attempt to equip their plants with the necessary machinery for their manufacture. Our imports from Germany in these lines have been referred to as trash by some of our leading manufacturers, but most of it is trash for which there is a comparatively large demand, and which cannot be replaced at the moment by manufacturers in any other country. The Germans have made great headway in the manufacture of smallware at a low price, and their success is in a great measure due to their educational methods and subsequent training. Technical and industrial education has made great strides in Germany, and on that basis a great industrial system has been developed. The entire country has been given over to this work, and more research and investigation has been carried on in Germany during the past quarter century than in all the rest of the world. Any person with a new idea was given a hearing in Germany. People were encouraged to investigate, and any invention brought out in other countries, after making a success, was immediately adopted in Germany. The textile industry is no exception, and perhaps the influence of the excellent educational facilities provided is not so evident in other industries. German progress in the manufacture of dyestuffs and chemicals has been the envy of the world, and our dependence on Germany for such lines is now pronounced. Technical and industrial education has been the secret of German progress.

Although at war with Germany, we must recognize these facts. Canada is disappointingly behind in the matter of industrial education, and the provision of facilities for research and investigation work. Our laxity in this direction is now strikingly apparent, but the opportunity is here for us to make a start. There is no better campaign that could be taken up by our manufacturers at the present time than a campaign for more and better facilities along the line of industrial and technical education as outlined in the report of the Commission appointed by the Federal Government some few years ago, and which has lain practically untouched since it was brought out.

German-Canadian Sentiment.

(Berliner Journal, Berlin, Ont.)

It is not for us to criticize the justification of the war. But just as our Anglo-Saxon cousin is filled with a deep and sacred love of native land, so also is the German.

The Educated Englishman and Canadian is a gentleman from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet. A new proof of this was afforded when Winston Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, requested the American Ambassador in Berlin to inform Admiral von Tirpitz that his son, although a prisoner, was in good health and unwounded.

We are in the land of our choice, and for many of us our new home has become a place of prosperity. Canada has invited us here and has shown thereby that she considers us desirable immigrants. And we should not, therefore, violate the privilege of hospitality by expressing our sympathy for our former home too loudly to allow ourselves to be led into hostile demonstrations.

Our heart bleeds at the thought of our brothers and relatives on the battlefield. Nevertheless we can best evidence our patriotism when we reconcile ourselves, with earnestness and dignity, to the unavoidable.

Our Unprotected Frontier.

(Theodore Roosevelt in the Outlook.)

For a hundred years peace has obtained between us and Great Britain. No frontier in Europe is as long as the frontier between Canada and ourselves, and yet there is not a fort, nor an armed force worthy of being called such, upon it. This does not result from any arbitration treaty or any other treaty. . . . The fact simply is that there has been such growth of good feeling and intelligence that war between us and the British empire is literally an impossibility, and there is no more chance of military movements across the Canadian border than there is of such movements between New York and New Hampshire or Quebec and Ontario. Slowly but surely, I believe, such feelings will grow until war between the Englishman and the German or the Russian or the Frenchman or between any of them and the American will be as unthinkable as now between the Englishman or Canadian and the American.

DINNER TIME

By Walt Mason

When dinner is ready my worries depart, all gone are the sorrows that burdened my heart; the scent of the victuals brings calmness and peace, the scent of the cabbage, the onions, the grease : my thoughts are of turnips and early June peas, of pie and of pudding, spaghetti and cheese. I kick up my heels and I stand on my head, for I am an optimist when I am fed. The woes of my life are a pestilent lot : they keep me excited and worried and hot ; the bills I must pay with no money in sight, the fear that my health isn't perfectly right, the dread of results if I chance to fall sick, the coal I must buy—and they won't sell on tick, the high cost of living that's keeping me broke, the shriveling incomes that goes up in smoke—such worries are making me much like a wreck, but all are forgotten when dinner's on deck! The dinner gong calls to the succulent roast, the scalloped potatoes, the tea and the toast. The dinner gong sounds and I've no time to waste, I leap over tables and chairs in my haste. Gone, gone the foreboding, the brooding, the dread, for I am an optimist when I am fed!

FOOD IS PLENTIFUL

The temporary and partial panic in Canada which, almost inevitably, accompanied the outbreak of war, did affect—indeed, it is still, in a measure, affecting—our living costs for a time. It resulted in a certain artificial rise in prices. But already, to a large extent, these are seen to be receding almost to normal levels.

The prime "necessaries of life" may, for the vast majority of us, be said to be foodstuffs. These consist of breadstuffs, meat, dairy produce, vegetables, and fruit. If we have a sufficient supply of these in this country, no matter how long or widespread the war, there is no reason why we need fear that we shall not be able to get them at a reasonable price.

We are large exporters of breadstuffs. Of wheat alone we exported last year one hundred and twenty-six million bushels, of a value of over $123,000,000. We also exported nearly five million barrels of wheat flour, of a value of over $20,000,000. On the other hand, our imports of wheat and wheat flour are practically nil, as are those of oats and barley.

This year, while the harvest in Ontario is good, that in the West is said to be less than last year's by something like a third. About nine-tenths of our exported wheat, six-sevenths of our exported barley, and two-fifths of our exported oats go to Great Britain.

Roughly speaking, we are more than self-supporting so far as our supply of meat is concerned. Last year we exported approximately $5,000,000 worth of meat of various kinds, and imported about $6,500,000 worth. Our principal imports in the meat line were bacon and pork—to the tune of about $2,500,000 worth — mutton and lamb — about $566,000 worth—and beef — about $448,000 worth, mostly from the U. S., which source of supply is still open to us.

Taking account of both fresh and canned vegetables, while we exported, last year, approximately, $1,588,000 worth, we imported, approximately, $2,871,000, so that here we have an excess of imports over exports of something like $1,283,000 worth. But nearly the whole of our imported vegetables came from the United States, and, with so many European ports closed, many other countries will not make their normal demand on the United States, and the price is unlikely to rise.

When we turn to dairy produce, we see that we have nothing to fear here. Last year, we exported, roughly, about $23,500,000 worth of this, and imported only $1,650,000 worth. So that we produced in the country nearly $22,000,000 worth more than sufficed for our own needs. Almost the whole of our export dairy produce goes to Great Britain. Our production this year will be normal, and we shall not have to furnish Great Britain with more than usual.

Nor is there any logical reason why there should be a rise in prices here in other food commodities by reason of the war—such commodities for instance, as fish, rice, sugar, etc. Thus, as regards foodstuffs and their price, there is no reason for gloom on the part of the average citizen.

German Patents In Canada.

In connection with the suspension of German patents in Canada the following is of interest:—

Patents and trade marks granted to a subject of any state with which Great Britain is at war are not declared to be void, but may be voided or suspended in whole or in part on application to the Board of Trade. The applicant must put up a fee of two pounds with the application, and a fee of half a crown for depositing foreign documents or other papers for the purpose of record. The Board of Trade may then suspend or void the patent in whole or in part if it appears that the person applying intends to manufacture the invention and if it appears to be in the general interest of the country or a section of the community or of a trade that such article should be manufactured or any process carried on. The Board of Trade may at any time in their discretion order the voidance or suspension in whole or in part of any patent as they may see fit without special application being made to them

CHANGING GENERALS

German War Office Will Try Some New Strategists For a Change.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—A Central News despatch from Bordeaux says that that following important changes in German army commands have been announced:

Gen. Von Mogen replaces Gen. Von Hindenburg in eastern Prussia; Gen. Eberhardt becomes military governor of Strassburg, capital of Alsace-Lorraine; Gen. Von Gerek is appointed governor Ulm Wuerttemberg, and Gen. Ludinghausen replaces Gen. Von Luckwald in command at Coblenz, Prussia.

Prisoners Should Mend Roads.

KINGSTON, Oct. 7.—Reeve Hawkey, Kingston Township, has a proposition for the utilization of the German prisoners in Fort Henry. He thinks their services should be utilized on the roads in the nearby districts, in an effort to get a lot of work done this fall which is much needed.

Kingston had 140 applications for war relief. They will be provided for out of the $50,000 raised by citizens for the Canadian patriotic fund.

Bigger Crops Needed.

The Ontario Provincial Government is making a special appeal to Ontario farmers to enter upon the fall sowing season with the needs of the Dominion first in mind. In consideration of the fact that the predominant demand of the empire while engaged in the present international conflict is for food in abundance, Hon. James Duff is calling upon the Ontario farmer to place greater areas of land than ever before under crops that may be utilized as foodstuffs. The growing of fall wheat is especially urged, also of other cereals and standard vegetables. In view of the temptation now facing the farmers to sell their cattle across the border at fancy prices, they are exhorted to pay serious attention to conserving their live stock.

Mr. Duff said: "I recognize that the amount that can be sown this fall must be somewhat limited by the plans which have been made during the summer. At the same time I think special plans should be made to increase the acreage of the crops to be put in, in the spring as well. There will undoubtedly be need for foodstuffs along many lines in addition to wheat, such as potatoes, beans, oats, dairy products, live stock and poultry. I would like to point out that during the past season there were over 3,300,000 acres of land devoted to pasture. Now that there is every prospect of a good supply of labor, I think a great deal of this land could with advantage be broken up and put into crop."

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND

By RUTH GRAHAM

Henry Dickinson and Arthur Treat, both gold hunters, met in California years ago, when the country was wild, and after a life of hardship owned together a hole in the ground that promised to make them rich. Within a mile of them a man named Barker kept a store. Barker had some money, and the partners told him of their find and asked him to put in capital to develop it, offering him an eighth interest.

Barker learned all he wished from them about their mine, then said that mining was too risky a business for him; he wouldn't invest. In talking matters over Treat let Barker into a secret concerning his past life. He had become indebted in the east and so involved that he had taken French leave and gone to California to make a fresh start. If his mine panned out well he would pay his debts.

One day Treat went to Barker's store for some provisions and on the way back to his mine was kidnaped, taken to San Francisco and thence to Philadelphia. There his creditors, who had captured him, kept him in jail on various charges, because it had been reported to them that he had made money which he was concealing. But Treat finally convinced them that all he had in the world was an undeveloped mine in California. If they would give him a chance to develop it they would get their money. They freed him, and he succeeded in getting some capital from a relative. When he returned to California after an absence of five months.

There he found his partner in jail charged with his (Treat's) murder. Dickinson was released at once, and the two held a conference. When their stories were put together it came out that Barker had laid out a plan to get possession of their mine. He wrote Treat's creditors that he had made money, and they arranged for his kidnaping, getting him away so secretly that no one knew what had become of him. Then Barker through paid stool pigeons manufactured evidence to show that Dickinson had murdered his partner.

The first impulse of the partners on seeing through a scheme by which both had suffered and Dickinson had been sentenced to be hanged was to punish Barker legally. But after investigation they found that he had covered his tracks so adroitly that he would have every advantage. Besides, the law was not well administered, and even if they could convict Barker they would find it difficult to get him punished.

They therefore decided to fight him in the way he had fought them. Treat had brought money with him to develop the mine, but this they concealed from Barker. They pretended to be discouraged and begged Barker to visit their mine, see for himself what it was worth and invest on his own terms. They had no difficulty in convincing him of the mine's value, and after much haggling he agreed to let them have $10,000 if they would cede to him a half interest.

They at once engaged a lawyer to draw up an agreement and submitted it to Barker. He was satisfied with it, and Dickinson copied it. Then all signed it, and one of the copies was delivered to Barker on payment of the money.

For a time after that the mine did well, but the partners soon told Barker that they must have more money. He grumbled, but agreed to give them $5,000 more for half their interest, making his own three-quarters. The transaction was completed, and Barker, who knew what the ore was paying, was well pleased. But the partners soon wanted more money and got it from Barker for half of their quarter interest, giving him all the mine except an eighth. The partners begged him not to be so hard on them, but he was relentless.

When the partners once more called on Barker for more money he denied them, but offered to buy their remaining eighth interest. They finally assented, but with great apparent reluctance. The money was paid and a bill of sale made out and signed by Dickinson and Treat, who were given a month to settle up their affairs and turn over the property.

The month passed, but the partners, instead of settling up their affairs, seemed to be developing the mine. On the thirtieth day Barker got out all the bills of sale they had given him and went to the mine to demand possession.

"We own this mine," said Dickinson, "and we propose to keep it."

"We'll see about that," was Barker's reply, and he opened his documents.

What was his surprise to see nothing but blank paper.

When the miners had laid their scheme to circumvent Barker, Treat, who before coming to California had been a manufacturer of ink, knew of a mixture that would look like ink, but would fade entirely out within a few days after being used on paper. Before making any papers for Barker he had gone to San Francisco and procured some of this ink, and every document given Barker had been written with it.

Barker, who was ruined, threatened criminal proceedings, but the partners had covered their tracks as well as he had covered his in his diabolical scheme to get their mine. Dickinson & Treat sold their property for $200,000 and a half interest. Treat paid his debts in full.

PLANNING A HOUSE.

Some Hints For Convenience In Its Arrangement.

If you are preparing to build a house plan first for an airy, sunny cellar. It is quite true that a high cellar, as it is usually treated, is an eyesore. But if the cellar foundation is faced with cement or shingles or brick or whatever the material of the house may be it is not out of harmony with the rest of the house and does not have the stilted, ungainly look that a high cellar of different construction from the rest of the house gives. Remember that a dry, sunny cellar means health.

Be careful to have all electric lights where they can be easily reached. In many houses the pantry light, for instance, is where it is hidden when the swinging door is fastened open.

Arrange the lights to illuminate the bureaus, chiffoniers and dressing tables or other pieces of furniture which boast mirrors. These must be placed so that the light shines to some extent on the face that looks into them.

Plan the bedrooms with an idea of the placing of the beds. Put the windows where drafts directly across the beds can be avoided.

Have a door that closes easily and securely on the back stairs, either at the head or at the foot, so that the odor of cooking in the kitchen will not penetrate throughout the house.

Plan to have the bedroom closets in the walls between the bedrooms which are to be occupied by persons easily disturbed. If the closets separate the bedrooms they serve to deaden noises. This arrangement occupies interior space, of course, when closets can be put in the eaves, but it insures quiet bedrooms.

Button Bags.

Pink and blue gingham button bags with one or two members of the button family embroidered on the outside, with a bone button for their heads, are convenient for the family workbasket.

Inspecting Fruit In British Columbia.

Far from the least important work undertaken by the British Columbia Department of Agriculture is the inspection, and condemnation or fumigation when necessary, of all important nursery stock, fruit and vegetable produce. The coast province is remarkably free from orchard pests and diseases, and the credit for this happy state of affairs must be given principally to Mr. Thomas Cunningham, provincial fruit inspector, and the officers of his division. Besides exercising constant oversight over the orchards of the province, stamping out immediately on first appearance fire blight or other trouble, the force passes on all of the immense quantity of produce shipped in from the United States.

One week's record illustrates the scope of their activities. Within seven days recently there was condemned at Vancouver 889 boxes of apples, 1,492 boxes of pears, and 2,395 boxes of peaches, a total of 4,776 packages. All this was returned.

ENERGY OF THE SUN.

Intensity of the Light and Heat It Sheds Upon Our Universe.

By a series of curious experiments scientific men have gained a fair idea of the intensity of light and heat from the sun as compared with earthly instruments.

When the sun is at the zenith, or directly overhead, its light is equal to seventy-five electric lights placed only three feet from the observer. Yet an electric light is too dazzling for any one to gaze steadily at it. And as compared with Sirius, which is the brightest in the heavens, the light of the sun is 20,000,000 times more brilliant.

The intensity of solar heat on our globe varies greatly, in a way that sunlight does not, the former being affected by locations, altitudes, changes of the atmosphere and many causes.

It has been estimated, however, that the total quantity of heat which the earth receives from the sun each year is enough to melt a layer of ice covering the entire globe and having a thickness of a hundred feet.

But this is only a very small portion of the whole amount of heat given out by the sun. The total solar heat is enough to melt every day a layer of ice ten and one-half miles thick, about the entire sun, or, to take Professor Tyndall's comparison, the sun's heat emitted in one hour is equal to that produced by burning a seam of coal sixteen and one-half miles thick.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Cableway to Span Niagara.

An aerial passenger cableway is soon to be built across the whirlpool at Niagara Falls to enable visitors to get a close view of that marvel of Nature and to experience the thrills connected with such a view without incurring any danger. The system is similar to one recently installed at San Sebastian, Spain, for spanning a chasm between two mountain resorts, and to the one that climbs the first stage of the Wetterhorn, in Switzerland. The whirlpool is situated in Canadian territory about six miles below Niagara Falls. The cableway is to be about 1,770 feet long, with the cables stretched at an elevation of about 250 feet above the whirlpool. The car, which has already been built in Spain, has capacity of fifty passengers.

Good form

At the Family Hotel.

The wide diversity of nursery methods in this country is nowhere more noticeable than at the family hotel. Here one sees children, who, if they were not born with the idea that courteous attention should be accorded their elders, have had this truth instilled into them so early that it seems a part of them.

In a certain family hotel one table exhibits two girls, in the rosy flush of their teens, accompanied by a mother to whom they pay delightful little attentions. They remain standing until she is seated, or if her entrance to the dining room has been delayed, they always rise as she draws near.

Equally pleasant to watch is the devotion of a very fat, chubby, ten-year-old son to his mother. The glorious appetite of youth drives him to the table the minute the meal is served, but the entrance of his mother is the signal for her son's graceful drawing out of her chair, a service performed with the manner of a Chesterfield.

It is also refreshing to watch a third table, at which a father and son—the latter probably in his thirties, though he looks like a younger brother—take their meals. The younger man always stands until his father is seated and never fails to rise should the father be the last to enter the room.

When the meal is over he may be observed to step aside to allow the older man to precede him. He has done this from a mere child, and it has now become a part of his being.

National Entertainments.

The fashionable hostess in her endless search for a novel way in which to entertain her guests has paused a moment to enjoy what she chooses to call "national" functions.

These include the Russian tea, the Japanese and Chinese breakfasts, Italian, French, German and Hungarian dinners, Holland and Spanish luncheons and last, but not least, the Bohemian late suppers.

SEVENTY-FIFTH PICTURE.

This Closes The Series In Our Famous SUMMER PASTIME

THERE IS PLENTY OF TIME TO BEGIN NOW.

Many of our readers, admittedly, have been keeping their Rebus Pictures and Answer Forms until now, with the determination to study the series at one time. If any in the series of seventy-five have been lost or mislaid, thy can now be easily replaced.

No Sets Received before Nov. 2nd

So many contestants have requested a reasonable amount of time to work out their answers, now that the cooler weather has set in, that we have decided to receive no sets of answers before Monday, Nov. 2, and none after Saturday, Nov. 7th.

Thus ample time is allowed for compiling the sets of names. None are to be sent before Nov. 2nd, and all sets must be delivered at the office of the Peterborough Review in accordance with our special rules. These will be published just before the date arrives for sending sets in.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING

The marchout of the 57th Regiment last evening was largely attended. There were 233 men on parade. Accompanied by both bands the volunteers presented a fine appearance. The "boys" of the 46th of Lakefield drove to the city and paid the local regiment a visit. They were very much impressed with the large turnout, also, the splendid manner in which the men went through their drills.

The bowling alleys will be open on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights of each week from 7.30 p.m. until 10.

Orders were read as follows:

CHARLOTTE STREET YOUNG PEOPLE READY FOR SEASON'S WORK

The organization meeting of the young people of Charlotte Street Methodist Church was held last night and was well attended. A central organization was formed with in which each society retains its antonomy. Officers for the central executive and each individual society were elected. A number of details were left to the central executive to deal with in a report which will be discussed at a future meeting. The social department announced a "tramp" to be held next Friday night at 8 eight o'clock, refreshments to be served on return. A program of literary and endeavor work will likely be announced at the next meeting.

C.P.R. Forwarding Laborers To Points Where They Are Required

Mr. C. H. Baillie, the employment agent for the C. P. R. at Montreal, states that he is busy forwarding groups of laborers to the various points along the C. P. R., where they are needed most. Many requests have come to him, for while, in all the district there is a certain amount of unemployment, the idle material is not sufficient to meet the new demand created by the decision of the C. P. R. executive to put on 6,000 men to give work at a time when work is so much desired by many deserving men, who have been thrown out of regular employment. Over 1,000 men have been taken on locally to work at terminals; others are employed as they are wanted at a distance.

Mr. Baillie stated that the order was a Godsend to the idle men in the city, of whom there are so many. "Of course, we do our best to sift them out a bit," said Mr. Baillie. "We give the preference to British subjects; after that, the allies. Russians and Belgians; but no Germans or Austrians. The men are grateful for the chance. There are many fellows down on their luck who have been accustomed to different conditions, and duties, yet these are only too willing to take the job that offers.

"Of course the C. P .R. has a lot of laboring work to do in any case, and it came in handy that the order should be given at such a time. It ought to make other corporations willing to find employment for men to do work—work which might not be absolutely necessary, and yet which would be of value, if not now, later on. The example of the C. P. R. is encouraging in this regard."

No Diphtheria at King Edward School

Despite reports and much apprehension on the part of parents of pupils attending the King Edward School, in a statement from the best of authority is to the effect that there are no cases of diphtheria at the school and there are no pupils ill with the disease.

FAIR BY PUPILS OF COUNTRY PROVES SPLENDID SUCCESS

Children Display Results of Their Work in the Home and the Garden

The fair held under the auspices of the travelling agents of the Ontario government on the farm apposite the Gilmour Memorial church, in Smith, on Tuesday, was a great success. These fairs mark a new era in rural progress. The officials take in a number of rural schools in a district, give out seeds to the scholars and request them to look after the fruit, vegetables, etc., and to make a return the following year. This children's fair has become a great institution, and on Tuesday the bread, the beet root, the farm produce of various kinds and domestic articles of food, raiment and ornament were a great credit to the children who grew them and exhibited them, and to the township. In addition a prize is given for collection by boys of insects that attack the farmer's crops. The result of this system of education is that the rising generation will grow up fully equipped as competent farmers and farmers' wives, and the result will be better farms and better farm life.

A Large Attendance.

The attendance was very large, several hundred being present, and the tent in which the exhibition was held was full at all times. Mr. Burnham, M.P., was present and by request of the officials addressed those present. He said that the necessity for improvement, especially in cooking, was well known, and he could not imagine anything better for children than a practical education in the uses of the farm. To see how true this is, we only have to look at the reverse side where children grow up not only ignorant of the farm and all that is on it, and ignorant of farm life, but despising it and making ready to get to the town as soon as possible. If that continued much longer, farm life would be a thing of the past, but, thanks to a renewed spirit of activity and ambition, this was being changed, and all knew that people without ambition and spirit were of no use to themselves or anybody else. When they got down to that point where everything was all "rot" except bare existence, it was time for those people to die. Their lives were a standing reproach to the Creator for ever having made them. We must be up and doing all that we can, and the best that we can, if we are to be any good and life is no to be a failure and as much of a desert as the country would be which such people would inhabit. He was greatly pleased to see the magnificent response of the school children and their splendid activity, and felt that at least a note had been struck that would produce the greatest improvement and success.

He also pointed out how the war had demonstrated the superiority of the farmer's calling over all others. It is satisfactory to notice that there was no snake charming and pluguglies or any other peep-show that didn't belong to the farm, on the ground, and yet it was a perfect success. Among those present were Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Coulthard, Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, Mr. J. H. Garbutt, Mr. Mann, the Rev. Mr. Ireland and many others.

RECORD PRICE FOR CHEESE

Buyers Climb to High Mark at This Morning's Sales

Fifteen and one-eighth cents was the price paid for the cheese on the Cheese Board this morning and incidentally a new record was created. Fifteen and one-sixteenth was the highest mark up to this morning. Mr. Cook paid 15⅛ for his selection and 15 1-16 by Mr. Gillespie secured the remainder. The buyers present were Messrs. Morton, Cook, Flavelle and Gillespie.

The cheese made on September 30 for the Patriotic Fund was sold with the other cheese and at the next meeting it is expected that the total amount will be made known. Mr. Cook paid 15¼ for the "Patriotic Cheese," or one-eighth more than he paid for the other purchases.

The following amounts were boarded:—

Keene 95, Warminster 64, Shearer 110, Selwyn 90, Villiers 60, Warsaw 90, Westwood 130, Oakdale 75, Daisy D. 60, Myrtle 100, Ormond 45, Young's Point 45, Lang 115, Indian River 75, East Emily, Trewern 70, Norwood 125, Fleetwood 71, Killarner 70. Total 1,650.

INFORMATION RELATIVE TO CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

Extracts From Circulars Explain Organization and How Fund Will be Distributed

Under date of October 6, the assistant-secretary of the Canadian Patriotic Fund has forwarded several circulars relating to the fund.

An extract from the message of the Duke of Connaught is as follows:—I sincerely hope that in every city and town throughout the Dominion branches of this organization may be formed. By co-ordinating and harmonizing benevolent efforts in this way, the danger of overlapping on the one hand, or neglecting deserving communities on the other hand may be met and overcome."

Another circular says:— In the County of Peterboro, branches have been formed at Havelock and Peterboro. It is essential that there should be some committee to which we could refer applications for assistance from any part of the County and I have already written to the County Clerk with regard to this."

Who are Entitled to Assistance.

To have a just claim on this Fund, it must be shown that at the time of reporting for duty, the soldier was a resident of Canada and was supporting in Canada the wife, family or dependent relative who now applies for aid.

Aid can be granted only when the soldier is on active service. It may commence, however, from the time that he gives up his employment or leaves his home and be continued so long as he is with his regiment, allowing reasonable time for his return journey to his home in Canada.

How to Determine What is a Reasonable Amount of Relief.

Not many families will be left in total destitution. The British Government grants to each married man a separation allowance amounting to about 15 shillings per week. The Canadian Government will adopt a similar course and provide an amount relatively the same. Again, there are often wage-earners in the family who do or can contribute in part towards its support. Further many employers are continuing to pay to the family of a soldier on active service, the whole or part of the amount which such soldier as an employee had been accustomed to earn. All these sources of income should be enquired into by the local Relief Committee and carefully considered when calculating what amount a family may justly receive from the fund. For example, in the city of Montreal, if a woman applies for herself and three children, ages respectively 13, 7 and 3 years, she is regarded as entitled to receive, if she has no other sources of income whatsoever, the sum of approximately $45.00 per month. This would be made up by allowing her $1.00 per day on her own account and adding 25c. per day for a child between the ages of 10 and 15 years, 15c. for a child between 5 and 10 years of age, and 10c per day for a child under five years. If, however, she receives a separation allowance of $15.00 or $20.00 per month, the Fund should be relieved to that extent and should give her only the difference between $45.00 and $20.00, that is to say, $25.00 per month. In some cases where reservist families have relatives or friends in Great Britain, it may be wise to allow passage money to return home.

The Local Relief Committee may also be asked to provide for the families of officers. A special confidential memorandum on this matter will be furnished on application to the Honorary-Secretary of the Fund. (Ask for Form B.)

Limitations of the Fund.

N.B. It is asked, can this fund be used to relieve a family whose breadwinner has not gone to the front, but who is out of work and in need through the indirect effects of the war? The Central Executive realizes that this is a danger which threatens at many places throughout Canada, and must be adequately met, else great hardship will ensue during the coming fall and winter. But, whatever might be their inclination, the administrators of the Fund cannot legally go beyond the powers granted by their act of incorporation, and to relieve incidental distress arising from non-employment is not of their powers. Several cities, however, are taking up what might be called double-purpose subscriptions. They are first setting aside an amount for the Canadian Patriotic Fund and then providing a further sum for the relief of the locally unemployed. In the expenditure of these latter monies the local authorities act independently of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, for obviously with conditions differing as they do in various parts of Canada no central organization can adequately deal with this additional problem.

Subscription Lists for the Belgians in the Banks

The meeting of the board of trade held in the council chamber last evening was rather poorly attended, the few present being B. H. Hall, A. N. Allison, D. W. Dumble, Jas. Bell, C. Rishar, H. E. McGill, F. E. Roy, F. Dawson and Mayor Buller.

The first item of business discussed was the C. P. R. removing the Bobcaygeon train a few weeks ago. The railway committee will be authorized to try and make arrangements with the railway to continue the train.

In connection with trains, it was reported that the efforts of the local board and the Lindsay council have been successful in obtaining an early train from Toronto, permitting the morning papers to arrive in this city at a few minutes after eight.

Radial Railways.

Mayor Buller brought up the question of the board of trade putting forth extra efforts along the line of connecting all the towns in this section of Ontario with a radial railway system. His worship urged that the board of trade endeavor to bring Hon. Sir A. Beck to this city and have the citizens hear that distinguished member of the provincial government on the subject. The meeting decided to act on the suggestions of his worship, and passed a resolution to that effect.

Relief for Belgians.

The question of co-operating with the board of trade of Montreal in the work of raising a relief fund for the people of Belgium, was given a great deal of discussion, and the result was that subscription lists will be placed in the banks of the city. The board will also approach the city and endeavor to secure a donation.

Universal Peace.

A letter was received from Jos. S. Bell, outlining a possible step which would bring about universal peace. It was placed on file.

BISHOP O'BRIEN ON DIRECTORATE OF ST. AGUSTINE'S SEMINARY

The Ontario Gazette gives notice that Archbishop McNeil, Vicar General McCann, Rev. Dr. Kidd, Toronto; Bishop Dowling, Hamilton, and Bishop O'Brien of Peterboro, have been incorporated "to acquire, erect and carry on seminaries or institutions for the training of priests of the Catholic Church and to maintain in connection therewith all necessary farms or farm lands and buildings for the purposes thereof; and to determine the subjects to be taught to students in any such seminary or seminaries and to appoint and remunerate the presidents thereof and the teaching staffs; the Corporate name of the Corporation to be St. Augustine's Seminary of Toronto." The above named clergy are the provisional directors. The seminary will be situated at Toronto.

ALLIES AND ENEMY AT AISNE IN DEADLOCK

French War Office Communique Reports Operations on a Wider Scale Than Heretofore With Gains at Some Points and Retirements at Others---Bodies of German Cavalry South of Lille.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The sixty-third day of the great war of Europe saw a repetition of what the peoples of all the countries have forced themselves to expect, perhaps for months to come—no decisive conflict on land or sea.

From Berlin to London came nothing in the way of Germany's claim to progress or reverses. From Petrograd came what has flowed without interruption for weeks — consistent claims to the progress of Russian arms.

From Paris at the usual mid-afternoon hour was issued the usual communication, so-called, interpreting the situation along the battle line of the western theatre of the war, in the light of those opposing the German invasion. There were in the closely worded communication, cryptic to an extent, as always, hints of a greater diversity of operations than it ordinarily contains.

Above all stood out the presence of what was described as large masses of German cavalry near Lille, as the crow flies, hardly ten miles from the Belgian frontier, and behind them German forces moving on a line between Tourcoing and Armentieres, the latter point right at the Belgian border.

At the same time the official communication makes it plain that the allies have not been idle and have been extending their lines on the left wing more and more widely. Blow for blow around the Arras, the scene of sanguinary fighting recently, is evidently still in order there. The same may be said of the region between the Somme and the Oise, for it is noticeable that the allies have claimed nothing there to-day except a see-saw advance and retirement. They do maintain that they have repulsed the enemy near Lassigny, upon which the Germans made a violent attack.

At Soissons, where the allies recently cleared the German trenches, they have, according to the announcement, pressed their advantage by making a slight advance. It is Noyon which forms the elbow from which the allied line sweeps eastward. Some advance for the allies is also reported at Berry au Bac. From Belgium comes nothing to indicate any change in the situation around Antwerp, except a brief line tucked at the bottom of the Paris official statement asserting that the German attacks along the River Rupel and the River Nethe have failed.

The British press takes occasion to emphasize that while the battle of the Aisne holds first claim in the matter of sentimental interest, the gigantic operations of the Russian, German and Austrian armies in the east may first bring the solution of the war.

The Standard's correspondent in Paris, wiring last night, says: The situation to-night continues favorable. The battle on the Aisne is gradually moving northwards of the Somme, and the enemy is now occupying nearly the same ground as he did in the middle of August. The moral position is, however, radically changed, and the German invading army, instead of promenading against a retreating foe, is desperately making what may be its last stand in France. The Belgian army is again playing a role of the greatest importance, and all efforts of Germany to prevent the Belgians from taking the offensive and threatening the rear and the communications of the army fighting for its life against the Allies have failed.

Prussian Diet To Re-open.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co., from Berlin, by way of Amsterdam, says:

"By special decree issued at Imperial headquarters, the sessions of the Prussian Diet, which have been in adjournment since June 15, will be re-opened Oct. 22.

GERMANS IN EAST PRUSSIA RETIRING BEFORE RUSSIANS

Petrograd Despatches Say Gen. Von Hindenberg's Defeat is Due to the Muddling of the Kaiser, Who Has Told Grossly Exaggerated Stories of Victories in the West —Next German Stand at Lyck.

LONDON, Oct. 7. — Petrograd official statements continue to repeat in a general way what has been accepted here as a fact for days—that the German army along the east Prussian frontier has been more or less routed and cut to pieces, but as this is only a small portion of the front it is exceedingly hard to get anything like a clear-cut perspective of the conflict. The Petrograd correspondent of the Havas News Agency transmits the following official statement:

"The German retreat continues along the frontier of East Prussia. The Germans have been forced to evacuate their fortified positions between Wierzblow and Lyck."

"The Russian offensive campaign continues. The fortified positions on the frontier are under a heavy artillery fire. The enemy has received reinforcements from the garrison at Koenigsberg. There has been particularly desperate fighting in the Valley of Dakalargewo.

"Railroads in East Prussia are crowded with troop trains, and our aeriel scouts report an uninterrupted movement of Germans in a westerly direction. German columns and German troop trains are withdrawing across the frontier."

A news agency despatch from Petrograd says:

"During the Russian retreat through the Mabur Lake District, in East Prussia, a Russian battery was surrounded on three sides by the enemy's quickfirers. The infantry was on the other side of the lake and the Russian ammunition was exhausted. In order to avoid capture the commander ordered the battery to gallop over the declivity into the lake. His order was obeyed and he himself was among the drowned.

"During an assault on the fortress of Ossowitz, a German column got into a bog. The Russians shelled the bog and the single road crossing it. The Germans in trying to extricate themselves sank deeper and deeper into the mire, and hundreds were killed or wounded. Of the whole column there were only about 40 survivors.

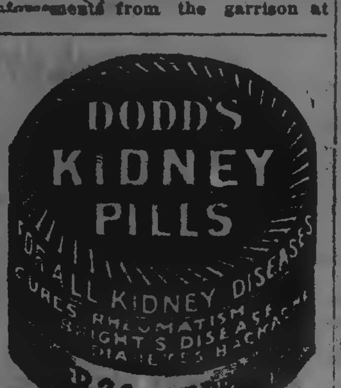
A correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

"The German debacle on the Niemen was due to the mistakes of the Kaiser, who is responsible for the sudden shifting of German forces. It is declared that the Kaiser misled Gen. von Hindenberg with exaggerated reports of German victories. Gen. von Hindenberg, therefore, decided to adopt the offensive, with the result that all he obtained was new losses, new transferences of troops, new vacillations and a new creation of insecurity and mistrust."

The next German stand is expected to be made at Wirballen and Lyck. Gen. Rennenkampf, in command of the Russian forces, is pushing rapidly forward, and it is believed he will soon begin the invasion of East Prussia in earnest.

The town of Marmaros-Sziget, capital of the Hungarian County of Marmaros, has fallen into Russian hands and the seat of local government moved to Huszt, 28 miles northwest of Sziget, where Cossacks were reported to have cut the railway line yesterday.

It is stated that the Russians have met with repulses at Muramaroszige and Tarokocz. Engagements are in progress at Poleno and Aknos. None of these battles are really conclusive but have developed the Russian advance in good shape.



CANADIAN BONDS

Trading in Securities Has Picked up in London

LONDON, Oct. 7. — Business in Canadian securities has been carried through with greater freedom during the past few days. Yesterday there were many enquiries on the part of prospective investors for overseas government securities, though the matching of buying and selling orders presented somewhat of a difficulty. Particularly noteworthy was the demand for colonial stocks. Canada four per cent. changing hands at 94 1-2.

Business in bills continues on a small scale.

Fought In Bare Feet.

Le Matin of Paris relates that on the arrival of a train bringing wounded Sanegalese riflemen nearly all were found smoking furiously from long porcelain pipes taken from the enemy and indifferent to their wounds.

Though their arms and bodies are hacked by sabers, the Senegalese complain of nothing but the obligation to fight with shoes on. Before going into battle at Charleroi they slyly rid themselves of these impediments and came back shod in German footwear to avoid punishment for losing equipment.

A colonial trooper among the wounded brought to Paris from the front declared that he felt nothing when his arm was shot off by a shell until he saw it lying on the ground. Not being able to bear the thought of leaving it, as he expressed it, as "meat for the Prussian dogs," he picked it up and ran several yards with it before he was overcome.

"Don't Forget the Clocks."

"Don't forget to bring back the clocks," is the request of the crowds in Paris and the provinces to all troops leaving for the front. Firmly convinced that the French soldiers are to march on Berlin, all are admonished not to forget the timepieces.

The demand of the French for German clocks grows out of the war of 1870. During the Franco-Prussian conflict the Germans entering France took a fancy to the French bronze clocks and when the war was over scarcely a single clock could be found in the country.

Monogrammed China.

The hostess who entertains largely cannot do better than fill her china cupboard with handsome monogrammed sets. In no other way is one's individuality so marked, and, while not any more expensive, there is an air of exclusiveness about such china that goes far toward making a success of any formal affair where a table is to be filled with distinguished guests.

Perhaps of all offered, the gold and white china, with gold monogram, is the most to be desired. There is an air of refinement about such a set that no tinted ware, however delicate or expensive, carries. This refers, of course, only to the tableware. For candlesticks, pitchers and the many small pieces for decorating as well as for their usefulness Limoges, Dresden, Sevres and all the charming makes will always be in demand.

ADRIATIC MINED

Austrian Tactics Force Republic Into Action

BORDEAUX, Oct. 7—The Ministry of Marine issued the following notice yesterday:

"The Austrian navy having laid mines in the Adriatic, the French fleet has been obliged to do likewise. But in order to avoid damaging neutral shipping as the Austrians have done, the French have laid their mines according to the rules of Chapter VIII. of The Hague Convention of 1907. The danger zone comprises all Austrian water and channels between the islands and the coasts of Dalmatia."

Message From "Leafield."

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Oct. 7.—"Nov. 9, 1913, steamer Leafield. No hope, farewell to all, in God we trust. (Signed) Officer."

The above message was found written upon a small piece of discolored paper which was found in a glass flask by two duck hunters upon the shore of Lake Superior, half buried in the sand.

The steamer Leafield belonged to the Algoma Central Steamship Line and was lost during the great storm of Nov. 9 last. She was carrying steel rails.

The entire crew were lost and no sign as to where has ever been found.

Fill Lancaster's Seat.

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 7.—It has been decided to call a Conservative convention for the riding of Lincoln on Nov. 2 to choose a candidate for the Dominion House in succession to E. A. Lancaster, M.P., who will retire at the end of the present term. It is expected that James D. Chaplin, of the Welland Vale Mfg. Co., this city, will be the candidate.

PRISONERS ILL-TREATED

Advices From Austria Say British Have Had Hard Usage

VENICE, Oct. 7.—(Via Paris.)—Reports from various parts of Austria-Hungary indicate that British prisoners of war have been subjected in many instances to harsh treatment. They have been insufficiently fed and badly housed amid unsanitary conditions.

Many prisoners have been transferred to various points in the interior. At first they were made comfortable and those with money were permitted to buy all the extra comforts procurable, but later all prisoners were treated alike.

A batch of these prisoners were engaged for a time in building torpedo boats for the Austrian navy at the Montfalcone dockyards, near Trieste, but have recently been transferred to a fortress in Hungary.

The American consul at Trieste is endeavoring to find a way to alleviate the unhappy condition of the prisoners.

FRENCH HOLD ALSACE.

Germans Concealing the Fact That They Have Lost Disputed Province.

LONDON, Oct. 7. — The London Daily Mail's correspondent at Belfort, writing on Saturday last, says: "I have spent to-day in Alsace, in conquered German territory, where the French flag is floating again after forty-four years of exile. For the French are in Alsace. There is nothing in front of them, and if they wish they can walk right through to the Rhine.

"The Germans try to make the world believe they hold Alsace still, for they cannot bear to have it known that the French have won their province back. But I have seen the French in thousands in Alsace, and well established, too — so well that the Germans have not dared to attack them for weeks.

"You have to watch a Frenchman's face as he looks at the tricolor floating in Alsace to realize what it means to him to have regained that lost province after forty-four years of bitter waiting—to have Alsace again. Already French soldiers are repainting names on sign posts."

Heroic Gen. Leman Better.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Miss Marguerite Leman, daughter of Gen. Leman, the defender of Liege, has received word, according to an Ostend despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., that her father, who is now at Magdeburg, has been cured of the wound he sustained from shrapnel during the German bombardment. He still suffers, however, from the effects of inhaling the poisonous gas given off by the picrite of the shells.

Two Vessels Captured.

BREST, France, Oct. 7. — (Via London.)—The German bark Martha Geckahan, from Punta, Costa Rico, and the Norwegian ship Bennestveet, of 1,600 tons, bound from New Caledonia for Hamburg, have been captured by French warships and brought to this port. The Bennestveet has a cargo of nickel.

Timber Trade Picks Up.

The off-shore trade of Vancouver is beginning to show signs of activity. A Vancouver lumber company has contracted to ship a cargo of lumber to Cape Town, consisting of 1,250,000 feet. A lumber cargo will be shipped to Australia by the same company early in the new year. There are marked indications of revival in this branch of Canadian industry.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Notwithstanding that wheat at one time today showed a substantial upturn, the bears had the advantage during most of the session. A heavy total for the stocks in hand in the United States and Canada was made much of against the bulls. Prices closed weak, 1½c to 1⅝c under last night. Other leading staples, too, all suffered a net decline—corn ⅝c to ¾c, oats ½c to ⅝c, and provisions 5c to 55c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 6.—Winnipeg wheat opened higher on strong cables, general bullish news and a good cash demand, but selling pressure proved too much in the absence of speculative trade and hedging in Winnipeg and Chicago. The close showed a decline of ⅝c for December and ½c for October. Oats were dull to ½c lower.

Cars inspected Monday numbered 1151, and in sight were 200 cars. Cars inspected of all grains during the month of September were 34,526, against 37,943 in September, 1913.

The weather was generally fine and colder, with traces of rain and snow in Southern Alberta.

Deliveries thru the clearing house were: Wheat, 777,000 bushels, and flax, 21,000 bushels.

Winnipeg cash: Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.06½; No. 2 do., $1.03½; No. 3 do., 98¼c; No. 4, 92¾c; No. 5, 87½c; No. 6, 82¾c; feed, 79½c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 6.—Considerable grain was offered by local exporters over the cable last night, but the acceptances were few and far between today, as only sales of a few loads of wheat were made. The local market for coarse grain was also quiet, the demand for all lines being limited, but prices show no further change. Business in flour is quiet, both for local and export account and the demand for mill feed is limited. In baled hay the feeling is easier and prices have declined 50c per ton.

Cheese is firm, with a fair demand from local exporters for all offerings.

The butter market is more active, with sales of some round lots of finest creamery to local houses. The trade in eggs is fairly active.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 6.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.08¾; No. 1 northern, $1.06¼ to $1.07¾; No. 2 do., $1.03¾ to $1.05¾; December, $1.07½.

Shooting Accident In Woods.

SAULT STE MARIE, Ont., Oct. 7.—While looking up timber woods eight miles from Marksville yesterday morning Alex. McCarty, 38, was shot in the neck by Thomas White, a companion. Dr. Hart of Bruce Mines was hurriedly summoned. Little hope is held that McCarty will live. McCarty was formerly a captain on a tug in the Soo, where he was employed by the Ganly Tug Co. The unfortunate man lost his only child three weeks ago.

THE SPORTING WORLD

NUMEROUS MANAGERIAL CHANGES ARE EXPECTED

Naps, Phillies, White Sox and Cubs May Have New Leaders Next Season

New York, Oct. 7.—When President Farrell, of the New York American League club, accepted the resignation of Manager Frank Chance, he ushered in the season for the gathering of managerial scalps in the major leagues. No sooner had the "Peerless Leader" been handed his passports than rumors of other prospective changes among big league pilots began to travel thick and fast.

It is said that in addition to the new boss of the Yankees there are likely to be new managers leading the Cleveland Naps, the Phillies, the Chicago White Sox and the Chicago Cubs. Rumor has it also that Manager Fred Clarke of the Pirates would not be grieved to bid adieu to Smoketown and retire to his Kansas ranch. Naturally Clarke is a bit discouraged over the showing made by his team this season. Starting like winners last spring, the Pirates suddenly cracked and dropped out of the running. As the Pittsburg manager is reputed to be worth a large wad of several varieties of regular money, it would hardly be safe to bet that he will not blow the job before training time next year.

From Cleveland comes stories of a tinware shower in preparation for Joseph Birmingham. The stories are to the effect that John Ganzel, former Cincinnati manager and for several years a successful pilot of the Rochester club, is to succeed Birmingham as manager of the Naps. Cleveland fans are manifestly displeased at the showing of the Naplanders, and their clamor may lead to a change in management.

The present situation in Philadelphia is due chiefly to the failure of the hard-hitting Phils to procure the goods. Manager Charley Dooin is a hard worker and one of the most popular managers in the big league. But the fact that the Phils are not upthere fighting for the flag has disgruntled the fans of Quakerdom and as a consequence it may be that Dooin will get the axe.

A big question mark symbolizes the situation in regard to Hank O'Day and his chances to remain as manager of the Chicago Cubs. Windy City scribes have been firing Hank at least once a week all season, but Henry is still on the job, which helps some.

Like the Pirates, the White Sox started the season as though they intended to make a runaway race. But the Sox faded when the going became hot, and their failure to keep up the pace naturally has led to rumors that Manager James Callaghan may be dropped before the beginning of another season. It is said that in case Callaghan is shown the gate, he will be succeded by the veteran William ("Kid") Gleason. The "Kid" is now coaching the White Sox. Though a quarter of a century has rolled around since he first became actively interested in the national pastime, he is still there with the ginger.

President Ebbets, of the Brooklyn club, has spiked the yarn that Manager Wilbert Robinson is to be let out. "Bobby" has a three-year contract with the Superbas and will be given further opportunity to produce a winner.

Cincinnati is to retain its present leader, Charley Herzog. It was freely predicted that Herzog would be handed the pink slip when the Reds failed to keep in the running, especially as Cincinnati has been in the habit of changing managers about as often as it changed players. But, contrary to expectations, "Herzy" will stay in Redland and try his hand at producing a winning outfit next season.

Along with Herzog there are a number of other major league managers who have no cause to worry over their immediate future. Heading the list of hold-overs are the old guard composed of Connie Mack of the Athletics, John McGraw of the Giants, Clark Griffith of the Senators and Hugh Jennings of the Tigers. Without this quartette of veteran pilots, the good old game of baseball would be about as exciting as a roque tournament.

The Braves have made 196 doubles, sixty triples and twenty-seven home runs, the extra bases totalling 397.

The Fattest Race.

How is it that the Danes as a race are fat? Professor Lyde states that "from one end of Denmark to the other you will not find a really thin man." And he gives rather a quaint reason for it. "The growth of dairy farming in Denmark tends to make men lazy. The private houses adjoin the byres, which are kept at a uniformly warm temperature, and the people are employed in warm buildings, living chiefly on milk and cereals. The men get so lazy that they will not take the trouble to cut up their food." And then comes this delightful conclusion: "This state of things has produced a nation of housewives who excel all others in varieties of sandwiches, which can be munched all day long." And thus is produced the fattest race in Europe, and we get a hint for a real rest cure.—Manchester Guardian.

ROUTE FOR ROAD RACE ON HOLIDAY

The route for the ten mile cross country run in connection with the Thanksgiving Day field day will be as follows:—once around track at Riverside Park; west from the Park on Hunter Street to George; up George to Smith; Smith to Water; Water to Nassau; across the river; River Road to Concession; Concession to Douro; Douro to Rogers; Rogers to Hunter and to the Park. On entering the Park the contestants will run around the track four times. The prizes for the race will be exhibited at Warne Bros. window.

COMMENT

As You Like It

John A. McNeall of Minneapolis holds the world's mile motor cycle record. He made a mile in thirty-five and two fifth seconds on Sunday at Omaha.

"What caused the Giants' downfall?" a fan inquires. We claim the answer to be, "the loss of McCormick and Herzog and the failure of Marquard and Demaree.

A comparison of the pitching records of 1913 and 1914 show that Mathewson and Tesreau are the only New York flingers who have been able to duplicate this season their performance of last year. Mathewson has not quite equalled his 1913 mark but Tesreau has surpassed his record of last year.

Another apparent weakness in the Giants' game is in the pinch-hitting department. Harry McCormick, who managed the Chattanooga team this season was the pinch hitter of 1913 and had an average of .275. This year Mike Donlin, performing similar duties for McGraw, met the pill for a mark of .200.

The foregoing are the facts and figures in regard to the slump of the Giants. But in some quarters other causes are advanced for the fall of the old champions. Some say that the winning of three pennants caused the team to become "chesty." Believing they had a cinch on the flag this year, they took things easy and when the time came for them to show the punch or lose—they lost.

New York fans will not be surprised if several of the present regulars are either benched or released when the 1915 season opens next April. Manager McGraw has a dozen promising recruits waiting the chance to get into the regular lineup, and it is more than likely that he will give some of them an opportunity to show what they can do. At present the old Giant machine looks to be on the rocks and it evidently is up to McGraw to rebuild the outfit with some of the material now doing bench duty.

In contrast to the good work of "Matty" and "Big Jeff" the pitching of Demaree and Marquard has been a bitter disappointment to Gotham fans this season, since great reliance had been placed on this pair of heavers to add to the list of victories.

Last season Demaree and Marquard pitched wonderful ball, the former winning 23 out of 29 games and the last-named copping 23 out of 32 games pitched. The records of the pair for this season show that they have lost double the number of games they have won.

"Chief" Meyers, who hit for .312 in 1913, has hit around the .270 mark this year. Fletcher also has hit for about 270, with a last year's average of .297. Snodgrass, with a mark of .291 last season, has been hitting for .264 this year, while McClean has droppel from .286 in 1913 to .259 in 1914. The stick work of Captain Larry Doyle also has suffered a slump. Doyle's batting average of .280 last year has shrunk to .266. Murray and Merkle are two more of the Giants regulars who have failed in effective batting. The former's mark of .267 last season has dropped to .213, and Merkle's average has fallen from .261 to .249.

Of the three Giants who have bettered their batting averages this year, the greatest climb has been made by Grant, who has advanced from .211 in 1913 to .307 this year. Burns has boosted his figures from .268 and Bescher has gone up from .258 to .277.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

SPRIGGS—HASKILL.

In All Saints' Church this morning, Miss Leila Florett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Haskill, was united in marriage to Mr. Frank K. Spriggs. Miss Olga Haskill was bridesmaid and Mr. W. A. Spriggs of Picton, was best man.

Rev. R. B. Grobb officiated.

After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Spriggs will reside in the city.

W. J. Moody, Berlin, is here on business.

Mr. W. R. Fish, Hamilton, is visiting friends here.

Mr. J. W. Mowbrag, Toronto, is here for a few days.

Mr. J. C. Cook, Belleville, is visiting friends here.

Mr. J. C. McLeod, Toronto, is a guest at the Snowden House.

Mr. G. E. Wright of the Bank of Ottawa was in town this week.

Mr. Jas. Kendry left for Toronto on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Charles Brownlee, of the Minden Echo, is visiting in the city.

Miss Jean Neill spent a few days in town this week, but has returned to Stoney Lake.

Mr. Arthur Stevenson entertained a number of the younger set last Saturday evening, in honor of the boys from T.C.S., who were successful in defeating the Collegiate rugby team.

Mr. Harry Fair, Brantford, and R. J. Feady, Montreal, are registered at the White House.

Messrs. H. Cooper, and H. E. Stewart of Toronto, are here for a few days.

Mrs. Hazen Ritchie spent a few days in Ottawa last week and will leave shortly to join Mr. Ritchie in British Columbia.

His Honor Judge Hayes has been in town this week to make arrangements for the removal of his family, which will take place shortly.

Mr. Francis Mason and his family left on Tuesday morning by the 5.25 train and expect to arrive at their destination on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Alex. Gordon's many friends are glad to see him about after the unfortunate accident which occurred this week. They all unite in wishing him a speedy recovery.

Amongst those at the Golf Club on Saturday afternoon, who were taking advantage of the beautiful autumn days were Mr. and Mrs. Mulholland, Mrs. Deade, Dr. and Mrs. Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Smith, Mr. and Miss Dobie, Mr. McElderry, Miss Aylmer, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Tomlins and Miss Dumble.

The centre of interest at the present time in the city is the Better Baby Contest which is being held in the Public Library. A stranger in the city on passing the building would most naturally conclude from the array of baby carriages, that a day nursing was included in the attractions contained in the library. The contest is attracting a widespread interest and the number of babies enrolled is most gratifying to those who have organized the contest.

Tea or Coffee Hurt You?

No need to get mad now, tear up the paper, or shout "nonsense, good tea or coffee never hurt anyone."

You know better than that, for you can point out all around you folks who are the worse for their slugging.

Think over a few tea or coffee drinking friends and casually enquire if they are entirely and perfectly well and just how tea or coffee treats them.

If it hurts others, isn't it just possible—?

Catch the drift, don't you?

In fact, after having studied the matter a bit it will become plain that if you are a tea or coffee-drinkers, the chances are that some form of incipient or perhaps fixed organic disease due to tea or coffee has set in, headache, biliousness, constipation, nervousness, sleeplessness, heart flutter or others of the well-proven tea and coffee ills. One can refuse to look the thing squarely in the face and peg along with the tea or coffee.

Some day Nature will haul him up short.

It's a Poor Bargain

to swap health and a clear, business-like head for a few cups of tea or coffee each day.

Every tea or coffee toper tries to wiggle round and charge his aches and ills to weather, overwork, too much or too little food, this, that or the other thing, but how he hates to admit that the real enemy is his Master, tea or coffee.

A Sure Personal Test

will locate the exact cause of your steady destruction of health, if that cause be tea or coffee. It's worth knowing the plain, sober fact before organic heart trouble or other disease sets in, which perhaps cannot be cured.

[illegible] is pleasant, accurate and satisfying—

Quit both tea and coffee absolutely for ten days and in their place use POSTUM.

Postum now comes in two forms. Regular Postum must be boiled. Instant Postum—soluble form made in the cup instantly, with hot water. Both kinds of this famous food-drink have a delightful flavor and are absolutely free from caffeine (the drug in tea and coffee), or any injurious substance.

If in a few days you begin to sleep soundly at night, digest your food better, stomach and bowels show signs of recovery, or the old feeling of weakness at the heart leaves, or head works clearer, (the ails of tea and coffee drugging are multitudinous), the facts will be before you, and

You Have the Answer---

I have arranged for all my accounts to be paid here, and all accounts not settled by December 31st, 1914, will be handed to my solicitor for collection.

Yours truly,
WM. KEMP.

Off to Join Regiment.

Lt. Allan S. Rogers accompanied by his father, Edwin R. Rogers, Toronto, is spending the day with R. B. Rogers in Ashburnham. Lt. Rogers is on his way from India where he has been for the past five years in the King George's Own Pioneer regiment, an engineering corps. He is to report at once to the War Office in London, for service at the front.

Lt. Rogers has been on furlough for three months in Australia and New Zealand and has still nine months leave but of course when war breaks out all leave of absence ceases. He sails for England Friday next.

2400 PUPILS AT SCHOOLS

South Central Boys Permitted to Form Cadet Corps

SOME OVERCROWDING

At King Edward School Will Receive Attention From Board

The regular meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening with Dr. Morrison in the chair.

The attendance of the public schools for the past month was shown by report to be 2400.

A request was received from the boys of South Central, wishing to form a cadet corps. Col. Miller was the champion of this cause. He pointed out that the expense would be very light. It was moved by Col. Miller, seconded by Dr. Burnham, that the request be granted. The resignation of Miss Warner was accepted on motion of Messrs. Smith and Crane.

The reported overcrowding of King Edward School was referred to the Supervision Committee to report.

The appointment of a teacher to succeed Miss Warner was left to the committee on appointments. There were present, Messrs. Eastwood, Ackerman, Col. Miller, McGrath, Crane, Smith, Hill, and Dr. Burnham.

When You Want to Laugh---Eat!

And If You Want to Eat Without Food Fears Take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Each Meal.

Laugh, smiles and mirth never go with a "caved-in" stomach. Fancy a-man-afraid-of-his - food laughing! There is always that haunting feeling that a sick stomach is nothing to be mirthful about.

"My old grouchy days are funny to me now."

Just make up your mind to help nature help herself. Give your body a chance to make good. Heal the raw edges of your stomach and give your blood the tools to make digestive fluids with.

There is only one way to make the body well — give it the chance to make itself well. Harmful and strong medicines handicap the system. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the stomach just like food. They are dissolved and they strengthen the weakened juices of the digestive apparatus until the digestion is made normal.

There is nothing mysterious or magical about them. Science has proved that certain ingredients make up the digestive juices. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are these concentrated ingredients—that is all there is to it. One grain of a certain ingredient contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. This illustrates how you aid nature to restore her worn-out materials. When a stomach which is filled with food receives a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet, it is more able to digest the food than it would be without it. The work is not so hard nor the task so long.

When the meal is finally assimilated the entire system absorbs more nourishment and harmful food effects are eliminated easily, quickly and with the maximum of benefit.

Every drug store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. To anyone wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

GERMANS AFTER CITY FOR DEFENCE

Determination of Germans to Capture Belgian Stronghold Results in a Conflict Which Bids Fair to Eclipse the Great Struggle in France.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Antwerp, Oct. 8.—The unexpected fierceness of the German attack on Antwerp being made by five army corps, has caused the higher military authorities here to believe that Germany intends to establish a second line of defence, running from Antwerp to Brussels, Namur and Metz, upon which it would be possible to retreat in case the Germany army has to retire from its position along the river Aisne in France.

London, Oct. 8.—A grave view of the situation is taken by the authorities, wires the Antwerp correspondent of the Daily News. "The great guns have told a tale. Fighting around Antwerp has been a battle of Krupps against men. Every day and night the fight has continued with deadly effect against the forts, while shrapnel and shell have made many of the trenches untenable.

"As fast as the Belgians were compelled to withdraw from a position, the Germans moved up and occupied it."

The correspondent of the Chronicle at Antwerp, under date of Wednesday, takes a contrary view. He says: "There is an air of quiet confidence that the Germans will never capture the city." It is rumored that Emperor William has offered the iron cross decoration and 25,000 marks to the first man entering Antwerp.

SOUTH ATLANTIC IS SAFE

New York, Oct. 8.—Agents in this city of British steamship companies whose vessels ply between New York and ports in South and Central America and the West Indies, were notified in cablegrams from London that regular sailings might safely be resumed.

Agents of the Lamport and Holt Line said they had been directed to resume the sailing schedules which were interrupted by the activities of the German cruisers Karlsruhe and Dresden and the converted cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm in the South Atlantic. It was assumed by the agents that the German war vessels had been chased away, bottled up in some port or had disastrous meetings with the British and French cruisers known to be in South American waters.

CONFERENCE URGES SABBATH OBSERVANCE

Desecration is Condemned by Methodists at Ottawa

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—The closing session of the Methodist General Conference at the capital yesterday was notable for strong and unanimous expressions of disapproval of non-observance of the Sabbath and for a resolution carried enthusiastically in commendation of the work of Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent Emeritus.

The Exhibition Board of Toronto and Edmonton came in for strong criticism for work carried on by them on the Sabbath; Sunday golf, Sunday drug stores, Sunday business at restaurants and hotels, Sunday social teas and functions, and Sunday travelling, all came under the strong disapproval of the Conference.

That Sabbath observance is at present being menaced in a threefold manner was stated by the Committee on Sabbath Observance in its report; first, by the period of unrest through which the world is at present passing which the world is at present passing; second, by a feverish quest for material wealth and a hectic devotion to social duties, deadening religious sensibilities, and, third, by the great tide of immigration which has inundated Canada for the past decade.

"We would deplore the increasing tendency," said the committee, "to make church attendance a matter of convenience rather than of holy habit." The report was adopted.

Tribute to Dr. Carman.

The resolution relating to the venerable Superintendent Emeritus contained strong expressions of commendation for his long life of usefulness, of stainless purity, for his superb chairmanship in pulpit and Conference, and for his intimate intercourse with his people from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Every soldier in the battalion was either killed or wounded.

CANAL GUARD MEETS DEATH

Youth is Shot by Fellow Soldier After Dispute Over Trivial Matter

WOMAN MURDERED

Farm Hand is Fatally Gashed at Cheap Lodging House

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 8. — Pte. Theodore Burgoyne of the 19th Regiment was shot dead while on guard duty on the Welland Canal last night, in full view of several comrades, by a fellow-member, of the same detail, known as Pte. Frank Hartley, aged 25 years, who was immediately placed under arrest, brought to this city and lodged in the police station on a charge of murder.

The victim is a son of the late E. W. Burgoyne, and a nephew of Ald. Burgoyne, proprietor of The Daily Standard. In private life he was a clerk in the St. Catharines branch of the Bank of Toronto, 19 years of age, and a great favorite. Of Hartley little is known. He joined the regiment a few weeks ago, since the guard had been placed upon the canal, and as far as can be learned, has no relatives here. He came to St. Catharines from some place in the United States and gave his birthplace as England.

The tragedy took place just outside the lock shanty at lock 9, near Merritton, neither of the men being on sentry-go at the time. An altercation over some trivial matter took place between Burgoyne and Hartley, according to other members of the guard who were close at hand, but very few words of the discussion appear to have been heard. All however agree that with an imprecation, and with no visible provocation, Hartley raised his rifle, pointed it hurriedly at Burgoyne's face, and discharged it before Burgoyne, who was standing just a few feet away, could brush the weapon aside, the bullet passing through Burgoyne's eye. The shot was fired at 7.05, and the victim was dead in seven minutes. Four comrades who witnessed the tragedy, surprised and enraged, sprang upon Hartley before he could again use the rifle, wrenched it away from him, bore him to the ground and handled him rather roughly before he was formally arrested.

Murder and Suicide.

TORONTO, Oct. 8. — Lying side by side, in gruesome dishevelment, on the floor of the kitchen of their home, the police found a foreigner and his wife. The woman's throat had been cut from ear to ear. She was quite dead. The man lay unconscious, likewise slashed across the neck, bleeding to death.

The man, Frank Sakoski, a Polish butcher at 707 Queen street west, was hurried to the Western Hospital, where he died without recovering consciousness. The body of his wife, Caroline, was sent to the morgue.

Murder and suicide was the decision of the officers who investigated. A debauch was the cause.

Young Man Murdered.

HAMILTON, Oct. 8. — Andrew Richardson, a single man, 31 years of age, who gave up his work on the farm of William Nash in order to come to the city to enlist for the second contingent, died in the central police station about 7.30 o'clock last night as the result of a razor gash on the left side of his throat, said to have been inflicted in the Bethel Mission, a cheap lodging-house across the street from the police station. Thomas Brown, 48 years of age, well known to the police, is held in connection with the crime.

The dead man was a son of Mrs. D. Richardson, 172 Cardigan street, Guelph, and was born there. He bore an excellent reputation.

WANT GRANT FOR EMPLOYMENT BUREAU HERE

Committee Will Ask Finance Committee for $500

TO HELP UNEMPLOYED

If the local branch of the Industrial Association can secure $500 from the city to defray the expenses of a free employment bureau, the association expects to be of great assistance along the line of alleviating the hard times of the coming winter. This was decided at the meeting of the association last evening in the council chamber, at which a committee composed of the following was appointed: E. H. D. Hall (chairman), W. R. Travers, I. E. Brock, R. J. Soden, J. J. Hartley, Robt. Fair, H. Robertson, G. C. Gladman, Ald. Johnston and Ald. Duncan.

It will be remembered that on Sept. 1 Mayor Buller, Ald. Stratton and Messrs. B. D. Hall and V. Eastwood attended a meeting of the representatives of about three hundred municipalities of Ontario. It was decided at that meeting to form an Industrial Association and have branches in all the cities and towns. A committee was appointed to draw up details of the proposed work, and at last night's meeting the report was accepted. It strongly urged the formation of an employment bureau. A week or so ago a registration bureau was operated in the council chambers and 225 unemployed registered. The problem that now confronts the association is to get in touch with farmers and other prospective employers and endeavor to get the men work. It is the idea to get the reeves of the surrounding townships interested, and the members of the committee will try and make a personal canvass of the farmers.

A meeting of the finance committee will be held to-night, and Messrs. B. D. Hall, R. J. Soden and J. E. Brock will be present to ask for the $500. Last evening Ald. Johnston, the new chairman of the finance committee, did not appear very enthusiastic over the idea, but the members of the deputation are confident that the city will make the grant. The members of the association are unanimous in the opinion that if the employment bureau could be operated, the city would be saved a great deal of charity money.

If the money is secured, the association will hold another meeting and employ a secretary, who will look after the bureau. If the money cannot be secured, the idea will pass into oblivion.

PASTOR SLUGGED AND ROBBED

Assailant Got Away With Big Haul

London, Ont., Oct. 8.—Rev. Isaac Wilson, pastor of Marble Memorial Methodist Episcopal church at Miland, Mich., 35 miles from Detroit, was slugged and robbed of $4,500 in $100 bills on York street at the rear of the Grand Trunk depot last night.

He came to London in the afternoon and completed a real estate deal with a Mr. Comstock, who paid him. Later he went to his hotel and after supper started for the depot. He was slugged from behind and recovered consciousness when he felt the shock of a slash in his throat, from which he bled profusely. His money was gone, but his watch and other jewelry by which the thugs might be identified were not taken.

He was removed in an ambulance to the home of his cousin, William Piercy, of 769 Dundas street. His father is William Wilson, of Tullamore, Ont., near Toronto. For 14 years he has been in various Michigan charges.

FRENCH MAKE SOME GAINS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 8.—The following is the official announcement this afternoon : First—On our left wing, in the department of Nord, the enemy has made no progress at any point. He has been driven back at several points, notably to the north of Arras, where the fighting is developing under conditions favorable to us. Cavalry operations now extend almost to the seacoast on the north. Between the Somme and the Oise, although the enemy is still present in force, we have retaken most of the positions previously ceded by us. To the north of the Aisne the Germans' numerical strength seems diminished.

"Second—On the centre, between Rheims and the Meuse, there is nothing to report. Between Verdun and St. Mihiel the enemy has drawn back to the north of Hatton-Chatel. He still holds St. Mihiel and some positions to the north. In the Woevre district violent attacks delivered by the enemy to the west of Apremont have failed. On our right wing in Lorraine and the Vosges there has been no change."

TWO MILLIONS OF GERMANS

Sent Against Allied Forces in Belgium and France

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

At the battle front, Oct. 8—An official announcement was made known yesterday for the first time since the vast numbers of German forces have been fighting against the allies in Belgium and France. They are composed of 23 Army Corps of the active German army, eighteen Army Corps of Reserves, several divisions of Landwehr and large detachments of the Landsturm.

Under normal conditions this number of units would make a grand total of nearly two million men but losses must be deducted.

The number of allies facing the Germans has not been made public but it is known to be very large.

In an abandoned German tench opposite the British line, unvisited since Sept. 15, was found yesterday, a German regimental flag, beneath a heap of dead. The emblem was taken to the headquarters of Sir John French.

AERIAL DUEL TO THE DEATH

Two German Aviators Burned to Death

Bordeaux, Oct. 8. — Official despatches received by the French War Department give a graphic account of an aerial duel which was watched by thousands of soldiers of the French and German armies on October 5 at Joncher, in the region of Rheims.

A German aeroplane of the Aviatic type ascended with two men, and after circling over the French positions, was returning to its own lines when Sergeant Frantz, one of the most expert of French aviators, accompanied by his mechanic, Quinnault, sprang to a machine and gave chase.

By a skilful manoeuvre the French aeroplane took the German on the flank and wounded the pilot and put a bullet through the gasoline tank.

A sheet of flame enveloped the Aviatic, and the machine dropped rapidly, landing close to the French lines. In the descent the unwounded man continued to fire his pistol until prevented by the flames.

Sergeant Frantz came to earth in a series of magnificent spirals. Both Germans were found burned to death in the embers of their machine. Frantz was decorated with the Legion of Honor and Quinnault was awarded the military medal for their exploit.

Contracts for Hydro Lighting

Manager C. L. Howse of the Utilities Commission informed The Review today that 442 domestic, 58 commercial and 9 power contracts have thus far been signed. The total anticipated is 3876. Citizens are requested to sign as soon as possible and be prepared to have their residences fitted with the meters when they arrive.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Daily News has the following from its correspondent in Belgium:

"The siege of Antwerp is developing into a second Battle of the Rivers (the Aisne battle.) It is raging from Termonde on the west to Lierre on the east, along the banks of the Scheldt, the Rupel and the Nethe, which the Belgian army is defending against odds but with stubborn determination.

"The main attack at the moment is being launched against Lierre, the enemy having apparently determined to cross the Nethe at this point. But vigorous pressure is also being applied along the Termonde-Malines road, in the neighborhood of St. Amand, with the object of forcing the Belgian field army beyond what can best be described as "the elbow of the Scheldt."

It cannot be too clearly understood that there is a vital difference between the defences of Antwerp and those of Liege and Namur. While the 52-centimetre howitzers of the Germans may dispose of a Brialmont ring fortress, it by no means follows that they will be equally successful against a widespread network of flood, mine, and wire entanglements intersected by water courses, such as that which I passed through yesterday afternoon while I was in the western area of the operations."

The Telegraph publishes the following from its correspondent in Belgium:

"There is nothing, as the position stands at the present, to indicate the least possibility of the Germans being able to secure possession of Antwerp, or even to invest it successfully. Everything points in the opposite direction. Comparatively small results have followed the several days' pounding on the advance forts by the siege guns, and failure has met the successive infantry attempts to break through, carried out, as they undoubtedly have been, with bravery and utter indifference to the loss of life involved."

OSTEND NOW THE CAPITAL

Belgian Government Moves From Antwerp to Avoid Assault

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 8.—(Via London.)—The Nieuws Van Der Dag says that the Belgian Government yesterday was moved from Antwerp to Ostend.

The paper says that the German commander of the forces besieging Antwerp sent an officer carrying a white flag into the city yesterday morning to announce that the bombardment of the temporary capital would commence at 9.30 o'clock yesterday morning. Many refugees left for Holland, and at noon the Government was transferred to Ostend.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Ostend says: "Several Ministers with the personnel of the Ministers have just arrived here."

An Amsterdam despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. says: "Among the refugees who left Antwerp yesterday morning were Cardinal Mercier and the Minister of Justice and other high officials. They travelled by automobile to Flushing, from which point they proceeded to Ostend.

"More than 10,000 fugitives have arrived at Rosendaal, at which place the bombardment of Antwerp can clearly be heard."

Those Cincinnati Germans who are about to capture Canada, ought to have a dandy time laying siege to Medicine Hat, just about the time the January blizzards are in good form.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1914

THE NEW RITUAL.

THE NEW RITUAL adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Church marks an important step in the history of that church. The new recommendations which were adopted consist of the Lord's Prayer, the Apostles' Creed, the Ten Commandments, the questions and answers of the reception service, the general confession, and the service of the Lord's Supper. Time was when Methodists would have thought the world was going to the devil if some of these innovations were introduced in their service. Not so very long ago Presbyterians looked on organs and pianos as instruments of his Satanic majesty. What has brought about this change?

The history of nations shows that the greater they become, the more advances they make in art, literature and commerce, the more do they develop ceremony in their social and religious life. That is the reason for the change in Canada.

One hundred years ago educaion was necessarily low. Schools were scarce, universities were few in number, and many of the leading ones were not in existence then. At that time colleges were little better than advanced schools, the great development in laboratories and other equipment being of recent date. Even classic Oxford gave degrees for little scholastic attainments. The people were naturally of a ruder sort, wishing the simplest forms of service because ceremonies had no meaning to them. Besides, the commercial life of those days was narrower. Markets, roads, shipping facilities, were not highly developed, and organization came largely with new inventions. There are other reasons that can be advanced showing the difference between people then and now, and showing how culture has advanced. So far as religion is concerned, the building of churches illustrates this fact. At first worshipping in a log house, then in a larger but rough wooden structure, usually unpainted, church buildings have steadily improved, until today there are very fine cut stone edifices arising throughout the country. Many of them are distinctly artistic and express the development of the people in one of many lines of activity. The road of progress has led to ritual, and here at last we have it recognized.

That church services have been greatly improved by these innovations is generally admitted. Some of the most beautiful musical compositions are rendered in churches and express high religious feeling. The imagination is appealed to, and church services have been made attractive in many ways. Music and singing have been helped. a taste for finer compositions is being developed in the people. Preachers, too, require more training than they used to, and better sermons have resulted, although this side has not shown as much improvement as it should.

There is always this criticism of highly-developed or ritualistic religious services, that they tend to draw away from the mass of the people. There is always the danger that ritual may become over-emphasized. The charge has been made already that the churches do not express the religious convictions of the people as they should. Be that as it may, the definite adoption of a more ritualistic service expresses the progress of the church and the growth of culture, but whether it expresses a deeper respect for the church or a more earnest conviction of religious principles is another matter. Ritual is inevitable in the condition of things as they exist; the chief concern is with the principles which forms express.

PROTECTION AND FREE TRADE.

FREE TRADE, like nearly every other plan evolved by philosophers for the improvement of human conditions, has gone by the board. The reason of that is that, like all other plans up to the most recent, it has proceeded through certain assumptions instead of through experience. It is a well-known fact that experience upsets all theories that are not drawn from experience. The basis of free trade is freedom of competition. Freedom of competition means that the worker, being without capital, is at the mercy of the captalist, and experience has shown it to be so. Protection, although it appears sometimes to be the protection of the monopolist against the consumer, is of course not for that purpose at all, and that fault can be cured by legislation. Protection really is the protection of the worker against the strong, so that he may have a fair chance to get both employment and decent wages. If capitalists were at the mercy of the worker, the capitalist would become a thing of the past and would become as the worker has been up to recent years, the victim of the mass of the people, but such has not been the case, and the consequence is that the worker has been the victim of the capitalist. This is the natural result of the let-it-alone policy, a policy of non-interference.

The policy of Adam Smith has not been adopted by Russia, Germany, France, United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, China or Japan because these countries are self-contained countries and can develop under protection. A country like England can develop under protection, but not so well as it can under free trade, because the agricultural area of England, or the food-producing area, is not sufficient for a large population, so that Britain has said, "Give me cheap food, and with my advantages I will be able to supply the world with manufactures." Having the start in this respect, she progressed in a one-sided way accordingly. Her capitalist employers—her great middle class—has become immensely wealthy. The mass of her people has become distressingly poor and has relieved its distress by fleeing abroad to countries which are protected. If it had not been for immigration, England would have been in the condition she was in after Adam Smith wrote his Wealth of Nations, and after many of its principles have been applied, namely, that of extreme poverty. The farmer in the earliest times was his own manufacturer. The people of his household did all his manufacturing. He produced his own food and his own manufactures and therefore could never be starved out, nor did he ever become rich, unless he produced more than he wanted and stored it away.

In the course of time a plan was evolved by which the small farmer was wiped out and was forced to the town, where he became the victim of the capitalist factory employer, and when mechanical power was applied in the factory he was squeezed out of that also and had to take what he could get anywhere. Now, then, if the monopolist in land, in money and in manufactures is to have his own way, the mass of the people must go to the wall. Protection is restriction or control.

Strange to say, Adam Smith agreed that his policy must be modified by the introduction of the Navigation Act, that only English vessels and English crews should be employed. This very act of protection developed England's marine supremacy, and it is England's marine supremacy which has given her her prominence in the world, and it is this she is fighting for at the present date, for she well knows that if she ceases to control the carrying trade she will have to institute protection at home, and, having a small area, she will eventually succumb to the great and more powerful nations of the world.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"Nobody seems to be on Germany's side except the Almighty, and we have only the Kaiser's word for that." In justice to the Kaiser, it must to-day be added that he is corroborated by at least one of his generals. "I owe the victory to God," says General von Hudenberg, "and to my brave troops." We recall with gratitude the advice of the newly elected Pope when he bade the Cardinals to go back and pray to God, without "dictating" to Him on Whose banners victory should rest.—Westminster Gazette. If the Allies keep on smashing the Germans, they will understand that they have no special pull with the Almighty.

THE SCARCITY of real war news was well illustrated in Wednesday's Toronto Globe, when a French economist's opinion of the cost of the European war was made the subject of a Canadian Press despatch. This statement is a mere theory or opinion. It may be miles from the actual figures, and is really nothing more than an opinion. Before long newspapers may be paying telegraph tolls on nothing but "bunk." It's about time the telegraph agencies cut this stuff out.

OWING to the fact that the soldiers in Europe are falling in seventy thousand lots, the Canadian Government will recruit another contingent.

FROM THE CHRONICLE OF THE DRUM

(William Makepeace Thackeray.)

Last year, my love, it was my hap
  Behind a grenadier to be,
And but he wore a hairy cap
  No taller man, methinks, than me.

Prince Albert and the Queen, God wot!
  (Be blessings on the glorious pair)
Before us passed. I saw them not;
  I only saw a cap of hair.

Your orthodox historian puts
  In foremost rank the soldier thus,
The redcoat bully in his boots
  That hides the march of men from us.

He puts him there in foremost rank,
  You wonder at his cap of hair,
You hear his sabre's cursed clank,
  His spurs are jingling everywhere.

Go to! I hate him and his trade.
  Who bade us so to cringe and bend,
And all God's peaceful people made
  To such as him subservient?

Tell me, what find we to admire
  In epaulets and scarlet coats,
In men because they load and fire
  And know the art of cutting throats?

* * * * *

And what care we for war and wreck,
  How kings and heroes rise and fall?
Look yonder, in his coffin black,
  There lies the greatest of them all.

To pluck him down and keep him up
  Died many million human souls;
'Tis twelve o'clock and time to sup,
  Bid Mary heap the fire with coals.

He captured many thousand guns;
  He wrote "the Great" before his name,
And, dying, only left his sons
  The recollections of his shame.

'Though more than half the world was his,
  He died without a rood his own,
And borrowed from his enemies
  Six foot of ground to lie upon.

He fought a thousand glorious wars,
  And more than half the world was his,
And somewhere now in yonder stars
  Can tell mayhap what greatness is.

A Satisfying Estimate.

(Windsor Record.)

The Manitoba Free Press publishes its annual estimate of the crop yield of the three prairie provinces, the feature of which is the total wheat yield of 134,500,000 bushels, and a selling value of all grains of $100,000,000.

THE UNHAPPY WARRIOR

By Walt Mason

I'm not a Happy Warrior; I don't find scrapping pleasant, and no one could be sorrier when I find trouble present. I do not think it glorious on snorting steed to ride, and rant around, uproarious, demanding someone's hide. I'm fond of peace and piety, I hope to spend my life, afar from mixups rioty, afar from foolish strife. I'd do my stunt laborious, and draw my humble wage, and those who think war glorious may grind their swords and rage. I'd spend my lifetime happily, good friends with men and kings ; alas, some neighbors, scrappily insist on mixing things. Because I treat them smilingly, they think I have no spunk; I greet them so beguilingly they climb upon my trunk. They'd fain assault and batter me, because it's safe, they say; they'd punch my head and scatter me to make a holiday. And then I swat them mightily, and lacerate their hair, and black their eyes so vitally they wish they were not there. War's garments are not wearable while peace remains in sight ; but, gee whiz, I am terrible, if folks must have a fight! Some countries are like men, I guess, they seem so meek and mild, until you prod them—then , I guess, you'll see them running wild!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE LION AND THE PREACHER.

Editor Review,

Sir,—The lion is not a very useful animal but its teeth are very sharp. Now who created the lion? Was it man? Has humanity anything to do with the lion as a product? Nothing whatever. The lion is the handiwork of the Creator, made with sharp teeth for the purpose of fighting and tearing its prey. It is not intended in any sense for peace. The totem of the German Empire is a double-headed eagle. Now the eagle is made by the Creator and in no sense by man. The eagle is the very symbol of ferocity and pitilessness. It is made for tearing and rending and lives chiefly on the murders it commits. Being double-headed it has been appropriately assumed by Germany. The Russians have the bear which is not really a flesh-eating animal. The totam of the French is the lily which—poor, innocent thing!—is a great contrast to those other products of the Almighty. But I am not speaking in derision. No man who contemplate the facts of creation would venture to deride them unless he considered himself equal to or better than the Creator. But that doesn't lessen the importance of the facts as they are and for the preachers to cry out that the time will come when there will be peace in the world and that these horrible things are all a nightmare is to cry out too loudly and in mistaken tones. It is to reproach the Creator who has furnished, outside of Man, every evidence of being desirous that the world should consist of tearing, rending and fighting. The dream that some men have of everything being like a Sunday School tea meeting — quiet, nice, respectable, orderly — with a moderate amount of successful business during the day, a quiet evening wound up by prayers and peaceful slumber may be all very well and very desirable but it isn't the order of Nature and Nature was created by God. It isn't due to malignance that Man suffers by disease nor really of his own neglect. The source of disease, as we call it, is merely the effects of the germs to make a living on their own account which is detrimental to the human race. That, however, refers only to the malignant germs. There are benignant germs which fight it out with the others and I am afraid it is just so with the world. There are good people and what we call bad people that is to say, people who have one way and people who have another and these two like the germs and the lion and the tiger and the rest of it are bound to fight it out and I do not think that the efforts of the preachers will make after all anything like the difference that they think it will. We are doomed if you like to call it so to follow the order of Nature set out by God as in the case of the lion and the tiger and we needn't grumble about it or reproach God for the cold, hard, relentless facts are there that the world outside of Man altogether is a terrible pit of conflict.

Yours truly,
READER.

(But, does the reasoning that applies to germs and lions apply to man?)

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

Editor Review,

Sir,—It is a privilege as well as a duty for all to contribute to the patriotic fund but the burden should fall upon the rich. Such has been recognized generally, but not so here. The Germans and those of German descent in Berlin, Ont., who are rich have responded nobly to our cause, their contributions ranging from $250 to $10,000, while only one of our rich men subscribed as high as $75, but did not reach the century figure. It does not become us to speak disparagingly of the Germans as a whole when those who share our citizenship surpass our rich men in their contributions.

Yours, etc.,
CITIZEN.

LET THE DEAD AWAKE!

Editor Review :

Sir,—I read with approval a communication in your paper a short while ago calling attention to the fact that the Patriotic Fund committee had not put themselves in touch with the farmers for the purpose of securing their surplus crops or some part thereof, for the dependents of those who have gone to the war or are destitute in consequence of the war. If the dead committee would kindly wake up and do something, or resign and let some willing persons act instead, it would prove a blessing where it is needed. It was suggested, also, to interview the farmers on the market on Saturdays, to that end, but that, too, was never done. It is a slur on the farmers to say that they have done nothing for the cause, or not as much as they should, when they do not know what is required of them. In speaking to one of our most respected farmers on Saturday last about contributing anything that he could spare ,he replied that nothing was too good for the boys at the front, and that the best his farm could produce was theirs, if he only knew where to take it.

Yours, etc.,
SYSTEM.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The keeper of his Majesty's purse, Lt.-Col. Sir William Carrington, was found dead in his bed yesterday morning. He was born in 1845.

It is reported that Rear Admiral Story, who is on the retired list, and a resident of Guelph, has been sent for by the Imperial Government, and has left for Ottawa.

Col. Septimus Denison, who is in command of the Montreal military division, was appointed yesterday to the headquarters' staff at Ottawa as acting adjutant-general.

The sum bequeathed by Mrs. Frank Leslie, of New York, who died recently, to Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the American suffrage leader, is in excess of $800,000.

Another milestone was passed in the history of hydro-electric power in Ontario yesterday when Sir Adam Beck pressed the button which turned on hydro power in the village of Beaverton.

The second session of the third Legislature of Alberta was convened yesterday with the usual ceremony. The speech from the throne gave but little indication of the business that will be considered.

There was a great gathering of Masons at Read's Cemetery in the Township of Augusta, near Brockville, yesterday at the unveiling of a monument to the memory of Dr. Ziba M. Phillips, a pioneer Mason of Eastern Ontario.

The Ontario Government has sold another township of timber. This went to Manley Chew, of Midland, former member and defeated Liberal candidate for East Simcoe, for $8.50 per thousand feet and $2 per thousand feet timber dues.

Outlook Is Not Serious.

LONDON, Oct. 8. — David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a speech yesterday to a deputation of the workers' national committee, said it was not at all sure that they were not premature in anticipating a very considerable amount of unemployment as the war progressed. The demands on the industries in this country, the Chancellor said, would be enormous, but in the cotton trade the distress undoubtedly would be severe. This was the only trade, he added, which had completely broken down so far.

Sir Alfred Thompson Dead.

LONDON, Oct. 8. — Sir Alfred Thompson, formerly of the Dominion Line, is dead at his Belfast home. Sir Alfred had latterly been in private practice at Cape Town and he returned to Britain three months ago to seek medical advice. An operation became necessary and it had a fatal issue.

Berlin has already raised $50,252 of her proposed $75,000 gift to the Patriotic Fund. Lord Kitchener has complimented the citizens for their patriotism.

The 75th Picture In the Review's SUMMER PASTIME Was Published Yesterday

Each picture represented a name—the name of a player of outdoor sports known in Canada. Yet no knowledge of sports and their players is needed; for the pictures are such as to lead to the formation of a name—and a name is a name. The class of names was chosen as mentioned, simply for the sake of setting a limit.

The person sending in correct answers to the largest number of pictures will win first prize. Others will rank accordingly, and any person may win as many as four prizes.

The Prizes total

$150.00

One Hundred and Fifty Cash Dollars

There will be eleven prizes, and a grand first award will be fifty dollars.

No sets of answers will be accepted before Nov. 2nd, nor will any judgment be made until after the final date for sending in answers, which is Nov. 7th.

All pictures (the entire series of 75) are obtainable free by possessors of the Handbook.

The Handbook is a wonderful aid to winning, being guaranteed absolutely to contain 75 correct answers.

The Logbook positively furnishes twenty clear clues to finding, without fail, the answers to as many of the pictures.

The Handbook and Logbook together contain four complete answer forms or coupons, one of these sets being equivalent to the coupons which appeared in this newspaper.

Price of Handbook, 25 cents. Price of Logbook, 50 cents. Either or both of these very valuable books may be bought at our office or will be mailed postpaid upon receipt of price.

Now is the time for old Pastimers to concentrate, and for you new ones who read this notice to get busy at once. Plenty of fun in store for all, young and old, both sexes; and it certainly pays to strive for a share of the

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson II.—Fourth Quarter, For Oct. 11, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xiv, 12-25. Memory Verses, 22, 23—Golden Text, 1 Cor. xi, 26—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The record of this last evening on which He kept the passover and instituted what we call the Lord's supper is found more or less fully in each of the four gospels. Luke says that He sent Peter and John, saying, "Go and prepare us the passover," and that they said unto Him, "Where wilt thou that we prepare?" (Luke xxii, 8, 9.) So should we ever ask Him concerning all our goings, and there is another question we should ask Him concerning all our doings, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" (Acts ix, 6), for we have no wisdom concerning anything, but Prov. iii, 5, 6; Ps. xxxii, 8; Isa. xxx, 21, are a very great comfort. They needed no instruction to reach the city, so He said, "Behold, when ye are entered into the city there shall a man meet you bearing a pitcher of water" (Luke xxii, 10).

They were to follow him into a house and say to the good man of the house, "The Master saith, where is the guest chamber where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?" (Verses 13, 14; Luke xxii, 10, 11.) It does not seem that the man bearing the water vessel knew what he was doing, but that he all unconsciously guided the men to the right house.

We are often unconsciously guiding people rightly or wrongly, for "Doth He not see my ways and count all my steps?" (Job xxxi, 4.)

The owner of the house must have been a disciple, for he understood and showed them the upper room furnished. Thus they found as He had said unto them (verse 16; see also Luke xix, 32).

So shall we always find it to be just as He has said. The words translated "guest chamber" are found in only one other place besides this incident, and that is in Luke ii, 7, "No room for them in the inn." There they made ready the passover. What a privilege and honor and pleasure to make anything ready for Him! Do you find it so? As He sat down with them in the evening He said that He had greatly desired to eat this passover with them before He suffered, but that He would not eat of it again until fulfilled in the kingdom of God (Luke xxii, 15-18). He Himself is our passover sacrificed for us, but as there was a great deliverance of Israel from Egypt at the first passover there will be a greater deliverance of Israel at His second coming to set up His kingdom (I Cor. v, 7; Jer. xxiii, 7, 8). After lesson verse 17 and this portion from Luke there should come in the incident of the feet washing, found only in John xiii, by which He taught them humbly to serve one another and the necessity of constant cleansing from earth's defilement. Then as they ate the passover He said that one of them would betray Him and it had been good for that man if he had never been born. No one seemed to suspect Judas Iscariot, for they said one by one, "Is it I?" Simon Peter asked John, who was leaning on Jesus' bosom, to ask Jesus who it was. He replied, "He it is to whom I shall give a sop when I have dipped it." He gave the sop to Judas Iscariot, and then Satan entered into him.

Then Jesus said to him, "That thou doest, do quickly."

Judas went immediately out, and it was night and has been night with him ever since. Before he went out he said, "Master, is it I?" And Jesus said unto him, "Thou hast said" (verses 18-21; Matt. xxvi, 25; John xiii, 25-30). According to our lesson, there followed the institution of the supper, by which, according to I Cor. xi, 26, we show the Lord's death till He come. The bread represents His body given for us and the wine His blood shed for us, and by believing we eat Himself as is explained in John vi, 47, 54, where in the one verse eternal life is the result of believing on Him, and in the other it is the result of eating His flesh and drinking His blood, so that eating His flesh and drinking His blood is just believing on Him or, according to John i, 12, receiving Him.

He said again in this connection that He would not drink any more of the fruit of the vine till he should drink it new in the kingdom of God (verse 25).

He also spoke of appointing to the twelve (some one taking the place of Judas Iscariot) a kingdom that they might eat and drink at His table in His kingdom and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel (Luke xxii, 28-30). Compare Matt. xix, 28.

While He had before Him, knowing all things, the sufferings of Gethsemane and Calvary, they were selfishly talking of who should be the greatest, and Simon was saying that he was ready to go with Him to prison and to death, not knowing his utter weakness nor that Satan was asking for him to sift him (Luke xxii, 24-34).

In His reference to swords He seems to me to be saying to them that if they could not trust Him when invisibly as well as when visibly with them they had better buy swords and take care of themselves. When He said that two swords were enough it is evident that He did not mean that each should have one.

Connect John xiii, 36-38, and xiv, 1, as if there were no chapter divisions and see how marvelous it is.

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, JAN. 27th. 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

DUPLICATE EQUIPMENT

War Office Asks Canada for 100 Per Cent of Extra Outfits

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—The War Office has asked the Canadian Government to provide 100 per cent. extra equipment for the Canadian troops. There had already been provided 70 per cent. The securing of the additional 30 per cent. for the first contingent of 33,000 men and also the double equipment for the second contingent of 22,000 men is giving the Militia Department a busy time, and will keep the mills all over the country going day and night in order to turn out the equipment in time.

The second contingent will consist of regiments organized in the regular way. There will be no regiments organized as independent units.

Many requests are still coming in from members of the Northwest Mounted Police to be allowed to enlist and go to the war.

Men even from the Yukon have asked to be permitted to go, but the Government still holds to its decision made some time ago that no members of the force can be spared.

PLOT TO INVOLVE ITALY.

Engineer on Stolen Submarine Chafed at Country's Neutrality.

SPEZIA, Italy, Oct. 8. — (Via Rome.—The authorities have received a letter from the engineer who disappeared with the Italian-built submarine while the vessel supposedly was having her trials in the Gulf of Spezia and later landed her at Bastia, France.

The letter was written before the submarine left her moorings here. The writer says that he considers Italy's attitude of neutrality a mistake and that it is the duty of every Italian citizen to act individually in an effort to ignite the spark which will render Italian intervention in the war inevitable.

It is supposed that the engineer has placed himself in the hands of the French military authorities.

Pillagers Sentenced To Death.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—Charged with pillaging houses between Chantilly and Senlis, four captured German soldiers were sentenced yesterday by a drum head court-martial. Jewelry, money and watches were found in their possession. Two of the men were sentenced to death, one to hard labor for life and the fourth to ten years' imprisonment.

Two of the men pleaded that their actions were in accordance with an actual official order, and another said: "If I had not taken the things, my officers would."

"Scribo is a rising young author."

"Rising, did you say?" asked his landlady, with the tone of one who knew.

"That is what he is."

"Well, he is fooling you. Some days he don't get up till noon."

Certainly.

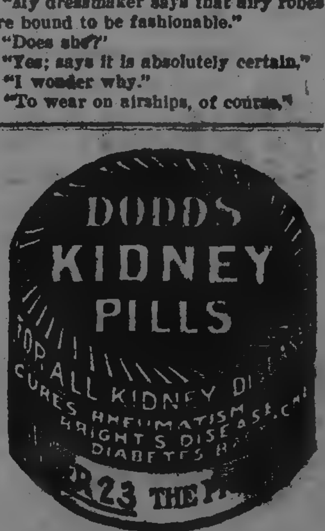
"My dressmaker says that airy robes are bound to be fashionable."

"Does she?"

"Yes; says it is absolutely certain."

"I wonder why."

"To wear on airships, of course."



"E 9" SINKS DESTROYER

British Submarine Torpedoes One and Possibly Two

HER SECOND SUCCESS

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Admiralty announces that the British submarine E9 has returned safely after having torpedoed and sunk a German torpedo-boat destroyer off the estuary of the River Ems, between the Netherlands and East Friesland in the North Sea. An earlier report of the sinking of the destroyer, from Amsterdam, said that the vessel had struck a mine.

The British submarine is commanded by Lieut.-Commander Max K. Horton, and this was her second successful raid in German waters. Earlier she sank the German cruiser Hela in the North Sea.

The action took place at 1 o'clock Tuesday and was witnessed by the Dutch coastguards on the Dutch island Schiermonnikog, in the North Sea, off the province of Friesland.

The weather was clear and the sea calm, and the destroyer could plainly be seen cruising before the mouth of the Ems. Suddenly the observers saw a column of water rise near the bow of the destroyer. The vessel immediately turned over and sank in three minutes.

Shortly after the explosion the periscope of the submarine came above the surface of the water for a moment, but as soon as those on board the plunger saw that their torpedo had struck its mark the vessel was again submerged.

A German cruiser and torpedo boats came quickly to the rescue of the crew of the ill-fated destroyer who could be seen swimming about in the vicinity of the disaster or clinging to the wreckage of their sunken ship. As Schiermonnikog is close to the Island of Borkum, where the Germans have a naval base and within 60 miles of Heligoland and the naval arsenal at Wilhelmshaven, the dash of the submarine is considered here a particularly daring one.

A despatch to the Central News from Harwich, England, says that a rumor is in circulation there of the sinking of a German cruiser in addition to the German torpedo-boat destroyer.

GERMAN STAFF IS IN CHARGE

Officers Have Arrogated Control of Austrian Army

MILAN, Oct. 8.—(Via Paris.)—A despatch from Vienna to The Corriere della Serra, confirms a previous report that the Austrian army in Galicia has been placed under the control of the German staff, despite the opposition of Emperor Francis Joseph.

The despatch adds that Maj.-Gen. Conrad, chief of the Austrian general staff, has virtually been deprived of all power on account of his alleged condition, resulting from the death of his son, who was killed in action.

Dealing with the removal of Gen. Auffenberg from his command the correspondent asserts this action was taken ostensibly because of the general's ill-health, but that in reality it was due to his move on Lublin, which was considered an ominous mistake, and responsible in great part for the Austrian defeat.

Japs Occupy Chinan.

PEKIN, Oct. 8.—According to advices received here, the railroad station at Chinan, in Shantung Province, west of Kiaochow, has been occupied by 30 Japanese soldiers. One hundred and fifty more are expected today.

A despatch received here by the Associated Press from Chinan says no trains are running over the Shantung Railroad. The rolling stock has been mostly collected at Chinan.

Germans from along the line, including women and children, have taken refuge in Chinan.

The Japanese legation here says siege guns are now ready for an attack on Tsingtau.

Another Lie Nailed.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 8.—(Via London.)—An official statement declares to be "absolutely without foundation" the report from Vienna that a formidable Russian anti-movement was in progress in Persia, and that the Russians had been defeated in a battle there. It is asserted that only insignificant skirmishes with brigands from Turkey have taken place, and that the brigands were driven across the frontier.

Pope's First Encyclical.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—The Echo de Paris is in receipt of a despatch from Rome which declares that Benedict XV. will issue his first encyclical letter on All Saints Day, Nov. 1. It is to follow the general form set by Leo XIII. and Cardinal Rampolla, and it is stated will contain an allusion to the war.

Almost.

"Ma, is pa a hero?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"Well, he never done nothing but support his family."

Himself, of Course.

"Every married man knows one person who thinks he is a good husband."

"Has some one nicely fooled, hasn't he?"

Island of Yap Taken.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. — At the Japanese embassy here yesterday the seizure by the Japanese Pacific squadron of the Island of Yap was said to be only one development in the general plan agreed upon by the British and the Japanese to seize all of the German naval stations in the Pacific. This is regarded as necessary in order to terminate the activities of the German cruisers, which have inflicted serious injury upon British commerce.

LIGHTWEIGHT WRAP.

Modish Little Coats of Silk Are Suggested For Fall Needs.

TAFFETA WRAP.

A lightweight wrap is useful for fall. The one pictured here is an attractive coat of black pussy willow taffeta for afternoon or evening use. An accordion plaited flounce of the taffeta trims the lower part of the coat. A high flaring collar of velvet with deep silk revers is used. The flare of the cuffs is accomplished by the use of shirring and pipings.

ELECTRICAL NOVELTIES.

Many Conveniences For the Bachelor Man or Maid's Room.

Electrical devices of various sorts are a boon to the bachelor man or woman. A little electric water heater—simply a metal rod that is thrust into water to make it boil—is a convenience for the man that wants shaving water in out of the way places, as well as for the woman who always uses hot water for washing the face.

An electric iron is equally convenient, and one is sold that folds into a compact little case.

The most interesting convenience of all, however, is a combination device which consists of an electric iron that, turned upside down, is a stove.

The case in which the iron is carried becomes a pan in which water can be heated. There is a hole in one end of the iron in which a curling iron can be thrust to heat.

WITNESSED CROWNING OF QUEEN VICTORIA

Stouffville, Oct. 8.—A pioneer of this village has passed, at the age of 88 years, in the person of George H. Silvester. Born in London, England, he came to Canada in 1851. He engaged in the general store business at Ringwood, carrying it on for almost half a century, and retiring some 12 years ago and removing to this place. He saw Queen Victoria crowned and making her first grand public entry into London.

Sixty years ago Mr. Silvester married Adelaide Jones, a sister of Sir Lyman Melvin-Jones, who predeceased him. Three sons and two daughters survive: William and Frederick, hardware merchants of this place; George, a mining engineer of Copper Cliff; Alice, wife of S. Philips, P. S. I., Minden, and Fannie, wife of A. S. Leaney, Stouffville, with whom Mr. Silvester spent his last years.

GREAT BRITAIN'S "CONTEMPTIBLE LITTLE ARMY"

Quantity, to Say Nothing of Quality Shows Kaiser as Poor Guesser

THE NEW FORCES

England Will Have Army in Field of a Million Men and More

It is only about eight weeks since Lord Kitchener took charge of the war office, and he has accomplished some remarkable work. Canada has had, in the despatch of her expeditionary force of rather more than one division, some idea of what an undertaking the fitting out of an army is. Some paragraphs from a recent issue of London Truth gives some idea of what the mother country, under Lord Kitchener's guidance, has been doing.

The army council have now completed the framework of the new army organization, says Truth, and this is how they have done it. The 6th division has at last gone abroad, leaving Sir John Jellicoe to take care of invasion. Thus two new divisions, the 7th and 8th, are being formed out of regular troops unallotted to Sir John French's six divisions, together with the units which have been brought home from South Africa and the Mediterranean. When the artillery and transports for those two divisions are ready, the field marshal will have a fourth army corps under his command, the 5th corps and a third cavalry division being on their way, if they have not already joined him, from India. Judged by the quantity alone, to say nothing of quality, this force of 200,000 men hardly answers the German Emperor's description of a "contemptible little army."

Now about the new armies. The army council have got some half a million or more recruits of the best raw material to play, and this is what they have done with them. Six divisions were organized on August 21, six more on Sept. 11, and another six on Sept. 13—18 divisions in all. Here we have the framework of three new expeditionary forces, amounting in round numbers to 260,000 officers and men, with another 150,000 more remaining at training centres to replace casualties. As Lord Kitchener pointed out, men are easier to get than arms, ammunition or equipment, but the new war minister has plenty of driving power in his nature, and he is making the best of it now. The spring will soon come round.

In addition to these three new six-division armies is the prospect of a fourth army, which is to be formed out of reserve battalions created when the expeditionary force embarked for foreign service, these battalions being brought up to war strength by new recruits. This will give us another six divisions of what Kaiser William calls "mercenary" troops, or 32 divisions altogether, yielding a total of 640,000 officers and men, who are increased to 710,000 by the Indian contingent. As this figure does not include Colonials, Territorials or the local corps now to be raised in large numbers throughout the country, it is safe to say that within a year or less we shall have an army in the field amounting to a million of men, with plenty more behind them.

DOING GOOD WORK.

The president of the Kitchener Club requests all those who would kindly knit for the club to call at the home of Mrs. Knox, Gilmour Street. The club is in need of helpers and cordially invite all ladies who are interested in the work for the soldiers, to join.

Another box was sent yesterday morning from the club containing 50 pairs socks, 2 doz. handkerchiefs, 18 pairs knitted wristlets, 57 helmet caps, 3 mufflers.

WRONG VIEWS OF GOD ARE DISCUSSED

By Evangelist Crossley at St. James' Methodist Church

KAISER DENOUNCED

Another very large congregation greeted Mr. Crossley at the St. James Methodist church last evening, to hear his discourse on "Wrong Views of God." His text was taken from Psalm 9, verse 10: "And they that know Thy name will put their trust in thee; for Thou, Lord, hast not forsaken them that seek Thee."

Many people, he said, view God as an abstraction instead being divine; because they cannot see, they do not believe. The crudest part of man is that which is visible, hence should God permit himself to be seen by mortal eyes, he would also become crude. Things not visible to mortal eye are more real than those visible, thus Christ is more real, more divine by being in the spirit.

Another view is the harsh view. The class of people posessing this view are as the child whose parents say, "If you're naughty, God won't love you." For a while the child is kept from wrongdoing by the very thought of God not loving him, but in the course of time he shakes off the fear and exclaims, "Well, I don't care whether he does or not." God loves man, even though he has fallen into sin. It is the love of a father for a son.

The presumptious view is that which the Kaiser of Germany holds. He imagines he is assisted by God in his work of sending millions to eternity. He has the gall and presumption to claim God as a helper. "There isn't a hell hellish enough for the Kaiser," declared the speaker.

A very common view of God is that view that might be termed narrow. Roman Catholics show they possess that view when they claim that they are the only people who will enter Heaven. Even some good Methodists have this view. Mr. Crossley recalled being asked by a friend if he thought the late Pope went to Heaven. He claimed he had no doubt about it. There are people in the Methodist church, the Baptist church, the Roman Catholic church and every other church who will be saved, and there are members of those churches lost for eternity. There will be people saved who never heard of a church, and in the bye and bye there will be the one fold and one shepherd.

The distinguished speaker urged his listeners to give up their harsh views of God and yield to that impulse of the heart which is Jesus Christ knocking for admittance.

DREADNOUGHT GUNS AIMED AND FIRED

In London Answers is an interesting description of the operations that enter into the discharge of the great guns of a Dreadnought, those terrible 13.5 inch guns that can hurl a 1,250-pound shell a distance of fifteen miles, and that can penetrate the thickets armour at a distance of 5,000 yards. In the conning tower stand the captain, his navigating officer, a midshipman or two and several other officers and men. The conning tower is protected by 12-inch armor. Above it is another protected chamber, and here are the gunnery lieutenant and half a dozen officers and men. Surrounding them are the range-finders and other instruments essential for marksmanship when the object is far distant. The man at the range-finder, with his eyes at the rubber eye pieces, keeps monotonously chanting out the distances as the ship approaches the target. Inside the turrets themselves the men are grouped around their guns. The gun-layers, the men who sight and fire the guns every now and then, twitch little brass handles and the great breaches rise or fall slightly as the sights continue trained upon the target.

Firing the Guns.

A minute or two later, after an order has come through from the control position, the lieutenant in charge of the foremost turret suddenly raps out the order: "Bring both guns to the ready!" The men standing by the breeches flick over their small levers. "Right gun ready!" "Left gun ready!" they report in rapid succession. The range, meanwhile, is decreasing rapidly, and about ten seconds later there comes the strident rattling of an electric bell. It is the signal to open fire. The gun-layer holds his breath, sees the cross wires of his telescope cutting the lattice work of the target, and then presses an innocent looking brass thumbpiece. As he does so there is a roar and, with a blaze of orange flame and a pall of brown smoke, a projectile weighing more than half a ton is sailing through the air on its way toward the target. Outside the turret the concussion is terrible, but inside it is barely felt, and the only means the gun's crew have of knowing their weapon has gone off is by the rocking of the turret and the recoil of the gun. Back she slides, with the water whistling and gurgling through the hydraulic valves far below. She stops, and then, as the running-out springs exert their strength, is driven back to the firing position.

Loading the Guns.

The men meanwhile are working like demons. Someone, by moving a small lever which actuates a hydraulic engine, has opened the breech. A cloud of acric cordite smoke fills the turret, but another man, turning a cap, sends a jet of water spouting into the chamber to extinguish any still-burning fragments. Everything seems chaos, but everyone knows what to do—they have done it time after time, and in less than 30 seconds we hear a sharp order, "Right gun—load!" A man moves an upright lever and an arrangement looking like a miniature lift climbs into view through the floor. It has come up from the shellroom below laden with the new charge and projectile, and stops dead in the rear of the gun. Reposing in a tray is the shell itself. Another lever is worked and a flexible chain hydraulic rammer, looking like a snake, darts out of its resting-place and pushes the shot before it into the breech of the gun. It is driven home with a dull thud. The rammer is withdrawn, another handle is pulled and two enormous brown cylinders of cordite fall into the tray just vacated by the projectile. They, too, are rammed home, and before we quite realie what has happened the hammer and lift have disappeared, the breech of th egun has been swung home and the great weapon is ready for firing. In the fire-contral position the gunnery lieutenant has seen the first shot tear a jagged hole in the target and promptly whispers an order to a man at his side. The latter moves a small handle and 30 seconds later there is another discharge.

The Range-Finder.

Probably the most important of the instruments employed in naval gunnery is the telemeter or range-finder. The accuracy of the shooting depends wholly upon the accuracy of judging the distance, for in long range shooting the shell does not travel in a straight line, but in a curve. It drops upon the target. Not only is it absolutely essential to get the proper range, but it is of vital importance to get it before the enemy, as experience shows that the guns that first gets the range and first sends a shell against the enemy has secured a great advantage. The range is found by triangulation, and is a mathematical problem worked out rapidly by the experts. The length of the telemeter which is precisely determined, forms the base of the triangle, of which the point whose distance is to be measured is the apex. An optical arrangement serves to measure the angle at this apex, and a simple formula then gives the distance shot.

Batteries of Range-Finders.

This optical arrangement is rather a complicated affair, and important parts of it are two mirrors, but its operations are rather too technical to be described. However, it may be said that the length of the base employed is an important element and that the longer it is the less is the chance of error. It is said that at the present time experts are at work upon a new telemeter of which the base used shall be the total length of the ship, instead of the six-foot base most comomnly employed. In the British navy "batteries" of several telemeters are used so connected that the operation of one moves the others and a single reading gives the mean distance.—Mail and Empire.

COLONIES RISE TO THE OCCASION

SPY DOGS CAUGHT.

Paris, Oct. 8.—The Figaro tells of the capture of some highly trained German spy dogs. The animals are wonderfully educated, the Figaro says, and have been taught to rear at the sight of the red trousers of French soldiers. The dogs are said to have been highly useful in reconnoitring.

THANKSGIVING AT THE TEMPLE

Interesting Services for Three Days.—Envoy Brown to Speak

A very extensive programme is being carried on at the S. A. Temple Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Envoy Browr Brown, whose presence packed the Temple on several occasions before is spending the week end in Peterboro.

He will give special addresses on Saturday evening and on Sunday beside the telling the thrilling story of his life on Monday night.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon on Monday the united Sunday Schools of the Army at Brownton Brayley's school house and the Temple will enjoy a fina tea.

The 5 o'clock service will be a special one given by the children. There will be a Thanksgiving Supper for older people at 5.30.

Prices Not Very High.

That the war has not unprecedentedly affected prices of foodstuffs in Canada is indicated by a statement of the Labor Department, which covers 57 localities and includes every town of over 10,000 inhabitants.

There is a rise of 2.2 points in the index number of wholesale prices for August.

In practically every city flour has gone up two-fifths to three-fifths cents a pound. Sugar has gone up one to two cents. Bread has gone up in thirteen Canadian cities. Cheese has gone up one cent per pound in a few localities. Butter is generally firmer. Milk has gone up in only one locality. Bacon has risen in 26 cities, fresh pork in 22, beefsteak in 15 and cheap roasting beef in 21. The the rise in tea is general. In most localities it is 5 cents a pound.

In wholesale prices wheat has risen about 20 cents; oats have risen 10 cents, and barley 6 to 10 cents. The flour advance averages 70 cents a barrel. Lemons, raisins and currents are up. Coffee is up 3 to 4 cents following the increased duty.

One German general says the Prize Song from the Meistersingers is the finest song ever written. But he's ignorant. He hasn't heard of the long road to Tipperary.

The New Patriotism

There is more than one way of serving your country. We cannot all go forth to fight on the blood-stained fields of France and Belgium, but it is within everyone's power to help crush the monster that threatens Europe.

Modern warfare is a battle of resources, financial resources most of all.

Every dollar you spend for goods "Made in Canada" is increasing the wealth, the resources, of the Empire, it is giving employment to Canadian workmen, it is contributing to Canada's welfare, and it is supplying the sinews of war to Britain, it is helping to fight the enemy.

The new patriotism seizes every opportunity to help— the enlightened patriot insists that everything he buys be "Made in Canada."

Belgian Officer Writes From The Front

The following letter, written by a Belgian cavalry officer at the front to Miss J. R. Drummond, 207 William street, Kingston, will be of interest. The letter has just reached Kingston after passing through the hands of the censors. It is written in the officer's own English and is not a translation.

The following is the letter in its entirety:

"Ghent, Sept. 2, 1914.

'Dear Miss D———,

"I thank you so much for your kind letters. Yes! We are in terrible days for our poor little Belgium. The papers say the truth. Germans are acting like fierce and savage barbarians against us. They burn, bombard old towns like Malines and Louvain, and many villages are old ruins to-day. But they also kill poor innocent people who did no harm. They destroy their homes and steal what they can. This is the truth.

Thousands of Refugees.

"I have seen thousands and thousands of refugees. You cannot imagine what a cruel and awful sight it is. They are all penned up like cattle in public buildings, kept by the Garde Civique, and every day are sent away. England, which has been so kind, so generous to us, will take some of those ruined creatures. Many have lost all they had, everything is burned or destroyed by the cannons. A family of jewelers had run away from Malines—the father showed a little bag of jewels, all he had a live with now. And you can see the refugees, lying on straw, hundreds and hundreds, and still they always arrive. All those people run away because the Germans are plundering their town or village. If this goes on, the country will be entirely ruined. I do not know how we held it, and yet we have not lost courage. We are sure to win the war, and our best hope is England. Everybody hopes because England is with us! We all keep courage! * * * For me, till to-day I have been very lucky in the war—many of my good friends are wounded or killed. Oh! We have lost so many, so very many men and officers!

Has Part in the War.

"My squadron did not come into direct action in a battle, yet ——— If I had not been an only child I should have been in the front and the action willingly. If I must do it, it will be of all my heart.

"The Germans tried long cavalry raids; we had to stop them, and made also raids against them. They nearly always run away, unless they are very much stronger. Our horses worked for us and suffered much in the hot weather, for we did hundreds of kilometres. We had our cantonment in Eetterbeek, near Brussels, and went to the south, near Charleroi, and near Louvain. One day we were going to fight, but to save the useless loss of a hundred lives, our commander ordered retreat. We had one squadron, the Germans before us an army! Of course it should have been a battery, but I had tears in my eyes during that retreat, for we had to leave our beautiful town of Brussels to the barbarians. The army which defended Brussels got cruelly destroyed after an heroic resistance in Louvain and Aerschot. Brussels being an open town, they did not fight nearer ———

Now in Ghent.

Happily, we are now in Ghent ———. The Germans are not here and I do scarcely see any during the little raids we have to do every day, rather far from here, to purchase the gray rascals of the Kaiser. Scouting is my business. It is nothing beside the action in a battle. We could hear the terrible noise of the guns, just like a thunderstorm, and above it the report of the nearer cannons, and at each shot, think—"so many are killed again of the soldiers."

And then comes the lamentable procession of the wounded ——— One who has seen that, can never forget.

Germans Fear Artillery.

Some of our gunners told that they reached German companies, just in the middle, with shrapnels, throwing nearly all the men to the ground. Our artillery is beautiful and the Germans fear it terribly; they know why. In some places the Belgians resisted so fiercely that there were really heaps, high heaps, of killed and wounded Germans, and the blood was pouring. Our friends were brave, very brave, but ———Now many are dead! We have paid our tribute, and a heavy one, too. Just think, before this war we did not dislike Germany, we did nothing but good to her, and she destroys our whole country with rage! And that without a serious reason.

Yours very sincerely,
JEAN DEL.

CANADIANS IN BRITAIN.

They Will Be Landed To-day—Half a Million If Needed Says Hughes.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Canadian troops will be landed in England today and sent to an inland training camp.

Col. Hughes at New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Canada is willing and able to furnish 500,000 picked men to fight against Germany, if the British Government needs them, according to Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia, who sailed for England yesterday on the steamer Cedric.

Col. Hughes follows in the wake of the first Canadian contingent of about 33,000 men, who left Valcartier, Que., for England about two weeks ago.

"They are all crack shots,' 'he said, "and trained to the minute. When we supplement their numbers with the additional volunteers who are now in camp at Valcartier we shall have about 50,000 men at the front, and good men, too—the best in the world."

GERMANS FIGHT HARD.

Russian War Office Reports Tenacious Resistance to Advance.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 8. — The Russian general staff yesterday issued the following statement:

"On the East Prussian frontier the Germans, having brought reinforcements from Koenigsberg, continue to oppose tenacious resistance upon battlefront of Vladislavoff and Ratchka, profiting by the defiles, lakes and marshes in the region of Tchernoganja.

"Beyond the Vistula advance guard battles have occurred in the region of Opatow and Sandomir.

"In the Carpathians, west of the River Sanok an Austrian detachment was defeated and machine guns and prisoners captured.

"At Saliva, 20 kilometres from the city of Munkatch, we have captured an artillery park and numerous convoys."

Anti-German League Formed.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—For the purpose of exterminating German thought, commerce and science, an organization has been founded at Marseilles, known as the Anti-German League, which hopes to make it impossible for a German to live in France, either now or after the war. It is planned to completely ostracise the Germanic race.

Pope's Secretary Very Ill.

ROME, Oct. 8.—(Via Paris.)—The condition of Cardinal Ferrata, papal secretary of state, was worse yesterday, and his physicians were discussing last night the advisability of a consultation on his case with other physicians.

Litany for Army and Navy

God of our fathers at whose call
We now before Thy footstool fall;
Whose grace hath made our Empire strong.
Through love of right and hate of wrong,
In this dark hour we plead with Thee,
For Britain's cause on land and sea.

Not for the lust of war we fight;
But for the triumph of the right;
The strife we hate is on us thrust,
Our aims are pure, our cause is just;
So strong in faith we plead with Thee
For Britain's cause on land and sea.
Asleep beneath Thine ample dome
With many a tender dream of home;
Or charging in the dust and glare,
With war-bolts hurling through the air;
In this dark hour we plead with Thee,
For Britain's sons on land and sea.

If wounded in the dreadful fray,
Be Thou their comfort and their stay;
If dying, may they in their pain,
Behold the Lamb for sinners slain;
In this dark hour we plead with Thee,
For Britain's sons on land and sea.

And soon, O Blessed Prince of Peace,
Brng in the days when war shall cease,
And men and brothers shall unite
To fill the world with love and light;
Meanwhile, O Lord, we plead with Thee,
For Britain's cause on land and sea.

THE SPORTING WORLD

ONLY FIVE PLAYERS IN BIG SERIES IN BALL GAME TEN YEARS OR MORE

Many Young Players Will be Brought Before the Spot Light of Sport in the Coming Series — Strand is bat 19 Years Old

When the Philadelphia Athletics and the Boston Braves go into action in the twenty-third series for the world's championship baseball honors, tomorrow, the diamond campaign will be fought out by teams which represent the old and new in the national sport. Although the average age of the leading players of the two combinations is not widely separated, the Athletics' machine is so famous and its success so striking that it appears old by comparison with the squad that George Stallings whipped in shape in midsummer, and thus won a pennant for Boston. Taking twenty-odd players of the two teams as a basis, it will be found that the average age of the Athletics is 26½ years and the Braves 24¾ years.

While less than two years in average age separates the teams the extremes are more marked in the Athletics than the Braves. Plank, Bender, Coombs, Oldring, Lapp and Thomas are past thirty, but the majority of those who will figure in the daily line-up are several years or under this age. The three youngest players in the squad are the pitchers, Bush, Pennock and Wyckoff. The American League representatives have the advantage in years of baseball experience for the Philadelphia club pluayers average fully a year more in time spent upon the professional than the Boston players. The Braves' average is approximately five years, with Johnny Evers heading the list with twelve years of play. The point of professional servce, Plank leads the Athletics with thirteen years of baseball play and experience at his back. Bender is but one year behind, and several others just fall short of double figures in their diamond career. As a result, the Athletics average is six years, notwithstanding the fact that a number of comparative youngsters are marshaled under the Philadelphia flag.

The team which will act as the standard bearers of the National League, is an interesting combination of the youth and the age of the diamond. In some cases extremes have been blended by Manager Stallings in artful manner to make of the Braves a winning team. This fact is illustrated in two notable cases. Principal figures in the scheme of attack and defense which enabled the Braves to win to the front of the stirring race in the National League, Johnny Evers, veteran of nearly 2,000 games, a figure prominent in the recent history of the sport, has worked in effective colaboration about second base with "Rabbit" Maranville, barely more than a boy, playing his second season with a major league club. The same combination of old and young is found in the records of the men of the outfields, and of the pitching staff. These figures show the oldest member of the team to be Otto Hess, with 33 years behind him. Almost a boy Paul Strand, at 19 years, is the baby of the team.

MILAN BETTER THAT TY COBB

So Says Tris Speaker Who Also Picks Washington Flychaser Over Jackson

Washington, D.C., Oct. 8. — Tris Speaker, center fielder on the Boston Red Sox, regarded as about the best in the game, is one of Clyde Milan's warmest admirers.

When the Red Sox were here a few days ago the subject of fielders was brought up during a fanning bee, which was held in the lobby of the Ebbett House.

"They can talk about Joe Jackson and Ty Cobb," said Speaker, "but there's a gentleman in Washington named Milan who is some pumpkins as an outfielder. He is every bit as good as Cobb on fly balls and has a better arm. Nothing flashy about his work, either, but he always gets there and in addition is a dangerous man at the bat."

In discussing the great outfielders of the present day, Speaker, unlike some persons of his ilk, refused to talk about himself, and everybody knows that Tristam is about the best little fielder the game ever produced. He is said to be the highest-priced outfielder in either league, drawing down this season a salary greater than that paid Ty Cobb by the Detroit Tigers.

JUMPS IN THE SPORT EVENTS

Results of the P. C. I. sports yesterday afternoon were:

Jr. High Jump—G. Clarke, 4 ft. 2 in., A. McLeod, W. Common.

Sr. High Jump—C. Elliott, 4 ft. 7 in., J. Greene, H. Carmichael.

Jr. Running Broad Jump — W. Fuller, 14 ft. 1 in., W. Common, G. Clarke.

Sr. Running Broad Jump — A. Huycke, 17 ft. 1 in., H. Lewis, H. Carmichael.

Jr. Standing Broad Jump—W. Fuller, 6 ft. 10 in., W. Common, G. Clarke.

Sr. Standing Broad Jump — Thompson 8 ft., Harstone, O'Brien.

Jr. Running Hop Step and Jump —McLeod, 26 ft. 6 in., Clarke, Common.

Sr. Running Hop Step and Jump—Lewis, 33 ft. 11 in., Harstone, Huycke.

The remainder of the sports will be held Friday afternoon at Riverside park.

Some have predicted that the crowds will be small at the world's series. President Shibe, of the Athletics, said yesterday that the demand was never so great. "If anybody can tell me how to make 22,000 tickets satisfy 100,000 fans, I wish he would come forward," said Shibe. "Until baseball parks are built to hold 100,000 or more there will be kicks at every world's series."

COMMENT As You Like It

Bill Carrigan has been signed to manage the Boston Red Sox for two more years.

Roger Breshnahan is down to succeed Hank O'Day as manager of the Chicago Cubs in 1915.

President Ebbets, the Brooklyn boss, has signed eight new pitchers, all of them right-handed.

The Federal league has made an offer to Frank Chance to manage a club in that league next season.

The Boston Red Sox are the only team in either major league with a chance of winning every season's series.

Until this fall, Providence has not had a pennant winner since 1905, the year Jack Dunn piloted the Greys to the Eastern league championship.

Pitcher Joe Engel, of the Washingtons, has been in no fewer than 29 games this season, in which he shared the flinging with from one to four men.

When it is remembered that a National league pennant has not been raised in Boston in 16 years, it is easy to understand what a big hit the Braves have made in the Hub.

Captain Johnny Evers, of the Braves, will get into his fifth world's series whe nthe Braves meet the Athletics this week. As a Cub John was in the big money in 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1910.

Keating and Fisher, the Yankee pitchers, had it on Ty Cobb when the Yanks met the Tigers in the last series of the season. Ty faced the New York pair seven times and failed to connect with a single hit.

It will be tough sledding for Manager Miller Huggins should Wingo, Magee and Dolan, three of the Cardinals' brightest stars, jump to the Federals. The desertion of this Card trio would wreck the speedy machine developed by Huggins this season.

Johnny Evers says the Braves simply decided they wanted the pennant, and then went and won it. We never like to offer advice, but if Johnny doesn't wish to be disappointed, he should induce his mates to refrain from deciding they want the world's series title.

Jack O'Connor, serving in the role of agent for the St. Louis Feds., plans to depart in a few days for Richmond, Va., the home of Joe Boehling, the young Washington southpaw, to make an offer to the pitcher for 1915. Boehling was sent to his home several weeks ago by Manager Griffith. Different stories were told about Boehling's ailment. One was that he was not in shape, and the other that he was ill. O'Connor hopes to line up the youngster for next season.

Boston Mayor to Lead Royal Rooters

Boston, Oct. 8.—Mayor Curley will lead the Royal Rooters, a band of 300 baseball enthusiasts, when they go to Philadelphia to cheer the Braves in the world's series contests there on Friday and Saturday, he announced to-day. The Royal Rooters have followed the fortunes of every Boston team that has taken part in an important series in the past 20 years. They have yet to support a loser.

VISITING EXPERT HAS HIGH PRAISE FOR CANADIAN RAILWAY

Mr. A. E. Goff, of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, has just concluded a tour of the Dominion. He declares that he has been greatly impressed with the progress made by the Canadian railroads, and by the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific, in particular.

The immensity of the Grand Trunk System's mileage and the unlimited possibility of further extension first impressed him, he says:—

Next, the remarkable engineering obstacles of bridging and tunnelling that have been overcome in linking up so huge a system, apart from the venture of the undertaking at a time when the present rapid development could hardly have been foreseen.

I was particularly struck with the good understanding which exists between the executive and the staff. The result of this mutual confidence was manifest in the local enthusiasm and efficiency of the various departments of work at headquarters in Montreal, as well as elsewhere, and made for a general esprit de corps which is not often met with. Outside the office atmosphere the same spirit was evinced between the travelling public and the staff. The hotels of the Grand Trunk are wonderfully homelike and surprisingly cheap. The "Chateau Laurier," one of the finest hotels in the world, is suitably located and a truly magnificent building. The method of dealing with passengers' luggage strikes one as remarkably simple and effective, and is a real time and labor saver. On the commercial side, the grain elevator added to the many things that interested a stranger, and so did the large freight terminal I had the privilege of going over. Another noticeable feature that impressed me not a little was the unsolicited efforts made by one and all to see that traffic, not merely in a concrete sense, but in individual merchandise, was expeditiously transported. This regard for commerce has evolved itself into a system known as the "Manifest freight service," whereby it is within the region of possibility to keep an eye not only on each whole train-load of important merchandise, but on each car load as well, from the moment of despatch from shipping point, as they term it in Canada, to destination."

MILITARY UNIFORMS

In many houses in the city there are uniforms, belts, some rifles, side arms, and other equipment belonging to the 57th Regiment. These in some cases have been left by soldiers now out of the city. The equipment is urgently needed and will be called for if a card is sent to Capt. A. G. Carruthers, 138 Hunter St.

Persons unlawfully having these articles in their possession are liable to a fine of $20.

"As General Superintendent Emeritus," the resolution read, "we trust that he will be long spared to promote in various ways the interests of the Church he loves, and it shall be our prayer when the shadows lengthen that the Christ whom he loves and serves will give him light, inspiration, joy and eternal felicity."

The Conference also asked that its Christian greetings be conveyed to Mrs. Carman.

The resolution was moved by W. H. Heartz, and seconded by George Bell.

He Thinks for Wife and Church.

"No man in this country has experienced such kindness from the people," said Dr. Carman, deeply moved, "such intelligent sympathy from the people as I have. I prize highly the allusion to that faithful woman who has stood by me through trials that have been hard to bear at times. What can I do? What can I say? I must look around and see what can be done for the Church of God. The Church must be strong and faithful."

The Conference was closed by prayer offered by Dr. Carman.

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—"What we want to-day is social evangelism," declared Rev. A. E. Smith, of Brandon, Man., at the Methodist general conference yesterday. "When are we going to recognize the fact that dramatic evangelism by professional evangelists has had its day? There is not an evangelist to-day in the employ of the church who has made the proposition pay. If evangelism is put into the hands of the social service department the finances will take care of themselves."

Amalgamation of Departments.

Rev. Mr. Smith's remarks followed the recommendation of the evangelization committee to merge the department of evangelism with that of social service.

Rev. Dr. Chown, general superintendent, favored the merger, and a big majority supported what the committee proposed. This means that the former departments of temperance and moral reform and of evangelism will in future be known as the department of social service and evangelism.

Rights of the Indians.

The following motion, respecting the Indians, was passed:

"Inasmuch as negotiations with this end in view are now in process between the Indians and the government, we recommend that a committee of five, to be nominated by the general superintendent, be appointed, whose duty it shall be to assist in securing for our Indian brothers a full and fair consideration of their claims, and through whom all representations to the government on their behalf by the Methodist church shall be made."

Division of Alberta Conference.

A special committee was opposed to approving of the request for dividing Alberta into two conferences, but Rev. Dr. G. W. Kerby, of Calgary, moved the following amendment, which was carried:

"That the general conference special committee be empowered during the quadrennium to divide the Alberta conference into two or more conferences, if, in the judgment of the Alberta conference, it be in the interests of the work."

COOKERY SCHOOLS.

Not Such Modern Institutions as Some People Imagine.

Schools of cookery are not modern institutions, as most people appear to think, for they existed in Queen Anne's reign.

Then a clever girl's accomplishments consisted in knowing how to make possets, candles, surfeit waters, pastry, sweetmeats and sauces. All housewifery gifts were thoroughly appreciated.

Here is a cookery school advertisement which appeared in a periodical published in London in 1713: "To all young ladies at Edw. Kidder's Pastry School in Lincoln's Inn Fields are taught all sorts of pastry and cookery, Dutch hollow work, and Butter works on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays in the afternoon."

Saddlebag Purse.

A novelty in a purse to carry with light dresses is a style known as the saddlebag. This is very attractive and is made up in many colors.

One is of tan faille ribbon, with the two bags snapped together, having on one side a small mirror and a place for powder and on the other a place for change. The bottom of the bag is trimmed by a silk tassel. A short handle is of the faille ribbon.

For the Children

A Cute Little Dog With a Funny Name.

Copyright by American Press Association.

Hedley Tango is the name of the smart looking little dog herewith pictured. Rather an odd name for a dog or any other thing for that matter. This little animal is a Scalyham terrier and was exhibited at a recent dog show in England. The Scalyham is a rather new kind of dog and is related to the Irish and Dandy Dinmonts. He is very bright and alert, as his picture shows, and is much liked in England and this country where known. Terriers from time immemorial have been trained to kill rats, rabbits and other small rodents. As household pets they have lost much of their desire to kill, but the sight of a rabbit sets them jumping. They are very clever and handsome dogs, and whoever owns one is sure to prize him highly.

The Torch Fish.

There is a kind of fish that swims in the deep sea which is very rare and a great curiosity, says the American Boy. Its common name is the torch fish. Its jaws are filled with long, slender teeth. It has a cartridge shaped tongue and a body very much like a wornout old shoe that has become so limp that it cannot hold itself up in shape any more.

The most remarkable thing about this strange fish is that on the tip of its long, pipestem nose there is an egg shaped object that the fish can light up like the bullseye lantern whenever he wants to and put it out again when he so pleases. This lantern does not serve as a guide to him in his wanderings, but is used as a trap to entice unwary and innocent little food fishes. When this deep sea lucifer is hungry he just lights his lamp, which is a peculiar kind of lip with phosphorus on it, opens his mouth and waves before it a slender, cordlike appendage that grows from beneath its lower jaw. The small fishes mistake the light for a certain kind of toothsome firefly that is down in the sea, and in their scramble for this dainty they sail right into the lucifer's mouth, which is gaping wide open to receive them. When he has had all the dinner he wants he turns off the light and goes away about other business.

Man's First Wings.

The first effort to equip man with wings that he might fly through the air seems to have been made by Watson E. Quinby, a Delaware inventor, who patented a flying machine over forty years ago, says the American Boy. The inventor used the bat as his model in designing the wings. Previous flying machines had been constructed on the balloon principle, but Quinby's apparatus consisted of wings twelve feet in diameter and semicircular in form. The wings were attached to the limbs of the persons flying, and the motions used were very similar to those used in swimming. The wings refused to work, however, and no one ever succeeded in flying with their aid.

Making Rice Paper.

The so called rice paper is not made from rice, as one who knows its name would think, but from the pure white pith of a little tree belonging to the aralia family. It flourishes in Formosa and, so far as naturalists have been able to find out, nowhere else.

The stems are laden on boats and sent to China, where the rice paper is made. It is used, aside from ordinary purposes, by the native Chinese for water color drawings, and sometimes it is dyed in various colors and made into wonderfully natural looking artificial flowers.

Ambergris.

Ambergris, which is used as a basis for much standard perfumery, was first found, an unattractive mass, floating on the sea or lodged upon the shore. How so unlikely a substance ever suggested itself as a perfume is not known, but it has been in use for centuries. It is believed by some to be the morbid secretion of the liver of a sperm whale. It is described as a fatty, waxy substance, disagreeable to sight and touch, but even in its crude state exhaling a pleasant odor. The crude substance is subjected to chemical action to extract the active principle called amberine.

Local Musicians at Keene.

A number of Peterborough's citizens took in the Keen Fair yesterday. In the evening a patriotic concert was held in the town hall in aid of the Red Cross work. Items on the programme were rendered by local musicians. Mr. George Lightheart of St. Paul's choir, delighted the audience by a splendid rendering of the famous old song "The Veteran's Song," and was called on for an encore. Mr. C. H. Devey, of St. John's, acted as accompanist and also rendered a patriotic selection. It is understood that the proceeds were highly gratifying to those who had the enterprise in charge.

Change in Business.

Having disposed of my Meat Business, 686 George Street, to S. C. Kerneghan, owing to ill-health, and thanking my customers for past favors, I can assure them the same courteous treatment as in the past. I have arranged for all my accounts to be paid here, and all accounts not settled by December 31st, 1914, will be handed to my solicitor for collection.

Yours truly,
WM. KEMP.

Dainty Dessert.

An excellent dessert may be made from a pound of marshmallows, each cube cut in four pieces, and added to a fifteen cent bottle of maraschino cherries, drained and with each cherry cut in half. A teacupful of chopped nuts, a half pint of cream whipped stiff and two tablespoonfuls of sherry complete the dessert.

The ingredients should be stirred together and put in the icebox for three hours to give the marshmallow a chance to dissolve. It should be served with sponge cake or lady fingers.

Summer Fruit Salad.

A delicious hot weather salad is this: Boil three-quarters of a cupful of water with half a cupful of sugar for fifteen minutes. Cool it and add a few drops of lemon juice and a spoonful of vanilla.

Prepare fresh fruit—bananas, grapes, pineapples, pears, peaches or any other seasonable fruits—and place it on lettuce leaves. Pour the cold sirup over the fruit just before serving.

PEOPLE FLEE IN TERROR SO FIERCE IS BOMBARDMENT

Antwerp Forts Silenced

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

The Hague, Oct. 9.—The bombardment of Antwerp's inner forts and outlying parts of the city started at 12.30 Thursday morning. At noon the city was burning in four places. It is reported that inner forts Nos. 4 and 6 have been silenced. The exodus of panic-stricken people continues.

It is reported that the dykes have been opened.

London, Oct. 9.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Ostend, dated Thursday, says: "The Germans have occupied the southeast semi-circle of the third fortified line of Antwerp. The Belgians have made several sorties on the left bank of the Scheldt.

"The Belgian government is completely installed at Ostend."

ONE ZEPPELIN BROUGHT DOWN.

London, Oct. 9.—The Evening Star's Amsterdam correspendent says shells were falling in Antwerp during the bombardment Thursday night at the rate of twenty a minute, and killed many civilians. Eyewitnesses say one Zeppelin was brought to earth by fire from the forts.

London, Oct. 9.—The bombardment of Antwerp has been terrible, says an Ostend despatch to the Reuter Telegraph Co. "The Germans threw incendiary bombs," the despatch adds, "with the result that many parts of the town between the railway station at the south and the Palace of Justice are in flames. It is rumored that the Germans have been repulsed on the right bank of the river Neithe. A Taube aeroplane flew over Ostend at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon."

London, Oct. 9.—Borgerhaut, a suburb of Antwerp, is burning, according to a despatch from Amsterdam to the Reuter Telegraph Co.

JAPANESE MOUNT SIEGE GUNS.

Pekin, Oct. 9.—The Japanese have mounted siege guns on Prince Henry Mountain, completely dominating all three German forts at Tsing Tau, and the distance is less than four miles.

TAG DAY FOR THE CHILDREN

Donations to Aid Society Will be Collected To-morrow

The last appeal is made today by the officers of the Children's Aid Society, on behalf of the annual Tag Day. Arrangements have been completed for a thorough canvass of the city, under the same plan as has been followed in other years.

Small contributions will be appreciated just as much as the larger amounts and every one can help.

TRYING TO GET NEW INDUSTRY

Representative of Canadian Concern in the City

A representative of a Canadian manufacturing concern was in the city to-day, and, acompanied by Ald. J. J. Duffus, chairman of the manufacturers' committee, and City Clerk Armstrong, went over the city. Every effort is being put forth to have the firm locate here. It is said they will employ about 100 men.

BLACKLISTER FINED

In police court this morning a blacklister paid $10 into court for being drunk while on the blacklist. When put in the witness box he told of finding a flask under a lumber pile in his yard. His thirst was not quenched so he got a Mr. Price to procure a 60 cent flask for him. This was the climax to his spree.

SURRENDER OF PRZEMYSL

Rome Report Says Garrison Has Given up

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Rome, Oct. 9.—The Tribuna says it has received information that the garrison of Przemysl has surrendered to the Russians. The Russian embassy, however, denies this report and declares the investment continues.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 9.—Advices via Amsterdam of official announcements at Vienna tell of the repulse of the Servian northern column with the loss of a supply train and of a series of successful engagements against the Russians. Official announcement in Berlin yesterday claimed small progress around St. Mihiel and Argonne in the French war theatre; places the responsibility for the bombardment of Antwerp on the Belgian military governor; admits damage to an airship hall at Dusseldorf with the destruction of the cover of one airship and records the arrival at Lyck, East Prussia, of a Russian column.

Lt. Col. Burland Dies in England

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Montreal, Oct. 9.—A cable from England announces the death of Lt.-Col. Jeffrey H. Burland, recently appointed head of the Canadian Red Cross organization at the front. Col. Burland was known throughout Canada for his philanthropy as well as for his activities in various departments of the militia service. He left for England, September twenty-ninth.

BRITAIN WENT INTO THE WAR TO VINDICATE HER PLIGHTED WORD GERMANY'S LUST FOR WORLD POWER

Toronto, Oct. 9.—Seldom have the members of the Woman's Canadian Club of Toronto had such a clever and illuminating address than that given to them yesterday afternoon by Sir George E. Foster.

Taking as his subject: "The Causes of the Present War," the speaker said he would not undertake an exhaustive analysis of the causes or issues from an economic viewpoint. They were all satisfied that this was a just war they were engaged in, and they must all stand behind the Empire and see it through.

A match had been ignited and applied to tinder. Without this match there would be no conflagration. But this tinder was ready, it was dried, before it was dried it had to be gathered, before it was gathered it had to be grown, before it was grown it had to be planted. So it was a great string of causes that led up to the crisis of today.

To make himself clear Sir George said he would divide into four causes the situation as he viewed it: First, the Franco-German situation since 1870. The victories of the Germans were thorough and rapid, bringing to them an appreciable monetary result. It left France weakened, with the abstraction of a vital part—Alsace and Lorraine. The conqueror was arrogant and, in the minds of the conquered, was the thought of getting back what was lost.

The second situation was the Ger-

The Balance of Power.

More complex was the fourth situation, which the speaker called man-British. Here were no memories of wars or thoughts of revenge, no suspicion of a reckoning to come. But there arose an active and keen rivalry. Germany emerged from her victories as a strong military power, ambitious for a stronger and prouder power in Europe. She started a period of industrial and commercial prosperity with Britain.

SAYS RETAILERS DID NOT USE GOOD JUDGMENT

Newcomer Was Fined $50 Because He Had not Taken Out a License

A few weeks ago a suggestion was brought up at a meeting of the finance committee whereby the Transient Traders' license would be reduced. The retail merchants came through with a complaint and a deputation waited on the money guardians It was decided that before any case would be prosecuted Secretary Cameron of the merchants association would meet the finance committee and discuss it At all events the deputation decided to use good judgment in bringing a man before the court should he start to do business without a license. The other day a prospective merchant was fined $50 for not having a license and in the Mayor's mind the retailers didn't display "good judgment" in making the man take out a license.

At last night's meeting Mayor Buller aired his complaint and remarked that he was not bucking the merchants association or sticking up for a Jew but he wanted to see the poor man get a chance every time.

Ald. Langford added a little fuel to the fire, when he remarked that there are a lot of merchants in this city at present who never would have started business, had they been asked to pay $100 for a license. The result was that the chairman of the committee will meet the retailers and if they maintain they used good judgment in the recent case the committee will bring some other kind of judgment into prominence.

FAITHFUL WIFE REMAINS AT LEPER'S SIDE

Tragic Circumstances of Wilkesbarre Man and His Family

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 9.—In one of the two houses which they own Joseph Norman, aged thirty-two, with his wife and two children, are shut completely off from the world. The wife and children are prisoners because they chose to risk leprosy to be with the afflicted husband and father. For experts have declared Norman to be a leper. Already the skin on his face bears unmistakable evidence of the dread malady.

When convincing proof had been obtained that Norman was a leper the door of his home was opened for the escape of wife and children. Mrs. Norman was instructed to cut away from her husband forever. She left the house because she believed she must. Next day she took her little sons and with them went to the city officials and begged to be allowed to return. They endeavored to dissuade her.

The Wife's Prayer.

"I canont live without my husband," she cried falling on her knees. "I was happy as his sweetheart. I was happy when he made me his wife. I have been happy during the eleven years that we have lived together and struggled to lay aside a little money for the rainy day. My love has been fanned into a big flame by his goodness and his care of me. I became his wife for better or for worse. I have tried to be a kind, dutiful and loving wife. I have borne him children, whom we both love.

"When doctors told me that he was a victim of leprosy I fully realized that it meant a life of exile for him. But I determined at once that his fate should be my fate, and as his wife it was my duty never to desert him 'until death do us part.' I thought that perhaps I might be allowed to live in exile with him, but I feared that the children would be taken from us. But while my heart will break at separation from my children I canont see my husband go

"HOLD UP" STORY INVENTED MICHIGAN PASTOR SAYS

Made up the Yarn Because of Financial Embarrassment His Explanation

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 9. — Rev. Isaac Wilson, pastor of Marble Memorial Methodist Church of Milan, Mich., who told a sensational story Wednesday night alleging to have been held up and robbed, now admits that he invented the story. Wilson was found in an alleyway near the Grigg House on York street with knife gashes in his neck, and was taken to a relative's and a doctor was called in.

His claim was a reflection on London's good name, but last night there was no longer any mystery about the alleged real estate deal by which he claimed he secured $1,600 and later had it stolen, for Detective Egleton has succeeded in getting the Michigan clergyman's signed confession that he invented the yarn on account of financial embarrassment. One of the clues was found in his pocket, being several bogus checks he had torn up.

WAR BULLETINS

A German fishing vessel has been destroyed by a German mine, north of Denmark.

The Central News says the German attempt to insert a wedge between Antwerp and the Allies' left wing has been practically defeated. Fierce fighting continues around Lille and south of Ghent. German prisoners have been taken to Dunkirk and Ostend.

Amsterdam reports another raid on Zeppelin Hangars at Cologne and Dusseldorf with damage inflicted at the latter point.

Berlin announces the Germans have crossed the flooded area before Antwerp and continue to progress.

The Australian parliament will be asked to vote half a million dollars for Belgian relief.

The Italian Minister of War has resigned.

LICENSE HELD BY SEVERAL WOMEN TO COMMAND VESSEL

At least half a dozen women in America hold licenses to command steam vessels, says a writer in the Strand Magazine. Two of them have been granted authority to sail on any ocean and all have the title of "captain" and are as capable of handling a ship as any man who ever hung to a wheel in a tough nor-wester.

Several years ago Miss Jane Morgan, of Philadelphia, became the commander of the steam yacht Waterus, with the full authority of the United States Government to sail on any ocean on the globe. She was a fearless master, yet cautious and capable. Another woman whose license permitted her to sail any ocean was the Countess Festetics de Tolma, of California. She was the master of several yachts, and no captain of a full-rigged ship knows the art of navigation better than she. Brooklyn also has had its woman "captain" in Miss Maude Jensen, of the tug-boat Major Ulrich, at the wheel of which she daily plied about the waters of New York Bay. Captain Maude is the daughter of Captain Julius Jensen, who many years ago sailed the bay, supplying the [illegible] York Yacht Club [illegible] [illegible].

PROVIDE NURSE FOR SCHOOLS

Sanitary Drinking Cups Also for Separate Schools

At the meeting of the Separate School Board held on Wednesday evening it was decided to employ a temporary nurse to look after the children of the School of the Sacred Heart and a committee was formed to look into the matter of employing a permanent nurse, whose duties would be to look after the children attending the separate schools of the city.

It was also decided to install sanitary drinking cups in all the schools not at present equipped with them, Dr. McPherson, M.H.O., and Dr. Clinton, District M.H.O., were present at the meeting.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1914

THAT VOTE OF CENSURE ON THE BOOK-ROOM.

A REMARKABLE FEATURE of the recent General Methodist Conference was the vote of censure moved against Rev. Dr. Briggs, of the Methodist Book-Room. The vote was not carried, but that it was merited seems scarcely beyond doubt. Why it was not carried, or, rather, why a majority voted it down, cannot be definitely stated. The Book-Room is putting up one of the finest printing buildings on the continent, largely financed through bonds or debentures, and it is rumored that a good many preachers have invested savings in these bonds. The sale of these bonds, at any rate, has been widely advertised in Methodist publications like the Christian Guardian, and it is reasonable to suppose that many ministers and adherents of the church have bought bonds secured on the new building. Hence it would not do to disturb the corporation that must earn the interest on these debentures.

Whether this is so does not so much matter now. What is curious about the affair is that such a move did not come years ago. It has been notorious that the Book-Room has adopted methods, if not of exploitation, at least those that could not be highly recommended to self-respecting business concerns. For example, a common practice was this. Some country pastor, filling his limited sphere of duties no doubt well, became possessed of an erroneous idea that he could become a great author and forthwith produced a book. The effort at composition is not to be discouraged—the practice is good—but, the writer at once thought it ought to be given to the public, and proceeded to the Methodist Book-Room. The manuscript should never have passed the first interview, but no, the officer in charge compliments the writer on the "work" offered, tells him it will sell like hot cakes, many inquiries have been made for such a book, and any other flattering mush calculated to increase the chest measurement of the "author." However, he is informed that the finances of the Book-Room are not as prosperous as they might be, and that it could not undertake alone the great expense of "producing" the book, but if the writer would pay merely "the first cost," just a matter of possibly $500.00, the publication of the book is assured. The gullible applicant for literary fame agrees to advance the money, the book is printed, and the writer watches the newspapers for several days for reports of the people tumbling over themselves to buy it. Alas! for his glowing hopes, no reports appear; there is not even a criticism, friendly or otherwise, in the newspapers, and the poor, beguiled bidder for recognition by a rude public realizes that his best seller is an abject failure as well as a pecuniary loss.

The Book-Room does, however, do something for the poor man. It prints the books well, and binds them in nice attractive covers. They are advertised occasionally in its own publications, a few are foisted on Sunday school libraries, and, once in a while, some searcher through the stock gets stung by an attractive title. The fact remains that the Book-Room has published many books that never could and never should pay for their printing. They must always remain lumber, impediments, of the worst kind, and incidentally figure in the assets of the concern. These inaccurate, inconsistent, insipid books are recommended to Sunday schools when they should be cremated. If the manuscripts were offered to any other publishing house, legitimately publishing books to sell on their merits, they would have been unhesitatingly refused. That is only one phase of this Methodist Book-Room business that has reached huge proportions, and gone after business which its founders declared at its inception it had no intention of soliciting. Its methods have been within the law and highly profitable, but it does not speak well for a publishing house representing a religious denomination to eat with such an avidious appetite at the table of Mammon.

THE NEW PREMIER'S FIRST MESSAGE.

MOST OF OUR READERS have read in a previous issue the first message of the new Premier of Ontario, the Hon. W. H. Hearst, to the people of the Province. Conservatives have every reason to feel gratified at the Premier's profession of faith. He made extended and sympathetic reference to the work of his late leader, Sir James Whitney. He declared sympathy for, and support of, the Hydro-Electric policy of Sir Adam Beck, praised the Hon. Dr. Pyne, and promised a progressive policy for the development of agriculture and of natural resources. But he frankly stated that, being different from Sir James Whitney, the progressive policy he favoured might find it necessary to break new ground. This indefinite prediction is well. Sir James Whitney has passed from the scene of action, and to inaugurate a policy of imitation would doubtless lead to ridicule and failure. Much as people may have admired the bluff leader who has retired from the conflict, his policy cannot be actively continued. Mr. Hearst must impress his own personality on the house he leads. That should cause some changes, should mean the breaking of new ground. If Mr. Hearst starts out to follow a policy of his own, calculated to be in the best interests of the Province, we have no doubt that success will attend the new political leader of Ontario. Mr. Hearst has taken the first step in the right direction.

CHINESE LABOUR.

LAST WINTER our Federal member devoted a large share of his time at Ottawa to drawing the attention of the House to the necessity of devising a tariff that would protect Canadian against Chinese labour. He showed from the Chinese yellow book how rapidly China was developing as an industrial nation and how cheap Chinese labour is. China is twice the size of the United States, has an equable if somewhat hot climate, plenty of water-power, immense arterial rivers, numerous canals, rich soil, abundant forests, few railways, a docile but energetic people, content to work for from five to thirty cents a day, and every mineral known to industry, including coal. China lacks nothing to make her the supreme industrial power of the world but capital, and that is going to her rapidly. In a few years it will be "made in China" instead of "made in Germany" or "in Canada." This problem is the greatest before not only Canada but every other nation. Canada, however, is near by, and unless we protect our labour it will have to fall to the level of Chinese labour. The Federal Government has just issued the commissioner's report, and it makes interesting reading.

WHAT CANADIANS SHOULD DO.

WRITING in Industrial Canada, Sir George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, gives some sensible suggestions to Canadians. He recognizes that Canada cannot become master of the trade hold Germany had in Canada without much patient work. Here is what Sir George says:

> "First, let us fill as far as possible the call for the $16,000,000 worth of goods with which Germany and Austria provided us last year, and which will this year be absolutely debarred. And what we cannot supply ourselves, let us purchase from Great Britain and the other parts of the Empire. Let us covenant together to buy goods 'made in Canada,' 'made in Britain,' and 'made in the Empire.' Thus we shall give employment and the profits of production to the Empire's home workers.
>
> Then let us find out the details of what Germany and Austria have produced and sold to other countries and set ourselves to supply as large a part of this as possible.
>
> Whilst our soldiers and sailors preserve our homes from attack and our ocean highways open and secure for transport, let us enter upon these abandoned markets and possess them as far as possible.
>
> Here are markets for hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of products, the making of even a portion of which will keep our industries going and give employment to hundreds of thousands of our people. If consumers determine to buy only Canadian and Imperial goods, and producers to provide them at lowest prices and of good quality, a co-operative work of inestimable value will have been begun."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

LA PRESSE, of Montreal, thinks the French in Ontario are persecuted because there is no French-Canadian in Mr. Hearst's Cabinet. What does La Presse say to the statement that British in Quebec are persecuted because the Premier of Quebec is a Frenchman?

The Empire's Rally.

(New Westminster British Columbian.)

The King's stirring proclamation to his empire, thanking the dominions for the splendid energy with which they have rallied to the cause of freedom, comments the London Daily Mail, and the Viceroy of India's thrilling account of the magnificent outburst of loyalty among the Indian Princes and peoples will be read wherever English is spoken with emotions too deep for words and with gratitude that no language can express. This is the answer to the German militarists who told the world that the British Empire in India was a house built upon the sand, which would collapse in utter ruin at the first shock of war. This is the reply of the Indian rulers and races to those who declared that they would rise and overthrow British rule at the first opportunity. They have risen, indeed, as one man, but it is to support the King-Emperor and to vindicate the just cause for which he has drawn the sword.

A Beneficial Cornering.

(Hamilton Herald.)

It transpires that soon after the war began the British Government made arrangements to corner the visible supply of raw sugar—and, what is more, succeeded. The whole supply was bought up and re-sold to the refiners on such conditions as will guarantee the consuming public against unduly high prices. So you see there is such a thing as a beneficent cornering of the supply of a food product. The only difference between an evil cornering movement and a good one is that the object of the former is to make big gains for the few at the expense of the many, and the object of the latter is to save the many from being robbed by the predatory few.

India Pays the Bill.

(London Telegraph.)

On past occasions on which troops from the Indian army have been employed outside their own country the whole cost has been met out of the revenues of the United Kingdom; and that would most willingly have been done in the present case. But the offer to relieve this country of the charge having been made, as we are assured, with the enthusiastic approval of all India, the Government has wisely decided to accept it. It did not need that act of generosity to convince this country of the depth and sincerity of the Indian desire to stand by Great Britain in this gigantic struggle for life and freedom.

Incidental Conquests.

(Montreal Herald.)

"It is rigorously forbidden for any woman to cast an eye at the text of a proclamation which has been issued by the military governor of Stuttgart. Evidently the victories of the allies are not all confined to the battlefield.

A Hero of Peace.

(St. John Telegraph.)

Not all the brave men of the empire are leaving for the front. Up in Ontario a day or two ago a farmer was killed by an express train after rescuing from death a child that had strayed on the line.

THE PILGRIMAGE

By Walt Mason

Life is a weary road to travel, and hard upon the feet, if we are bound to snarl and cavil at every one we meet. We ought to bow to strangers passing, and not knock off their tiles, for they will answer sass with sassing, or give us smiles for smiles. If you are quarrelsome and scrappy, nor prone to gain a friend, you'll find the pilgrimage unhappy and dismal to the end. But if you wear a smile that's winning, a smile eight inches deep, some other chaps who see you grinning, will straightway cease to weep. A smile like yours or mine's contagious; folks seeing it will say, "This life can't be so blamed outrageous, if pilgrims smile that way!" A scowl, alas, is just as catching; afar its influence goes; folks seeing it will soon be hatching another brood of woes. This life's a tune that's full of jangles, a discord, lame and halt, if we go seeking rows and wrangles, and keep on finding fault. But it's an anthem, grand, inspiring, sweet as the angels' song, if we go down the road inquiring whom we can hel palong.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MAN AND NATURE.

Editor Review,

Sir,—You ask me to extend my reasoning to man. Well! If nature is not a state of peace, how is man going to live in it and be at peace? If you can't explain it and say it is all a mystery you are an agnostic.

Yours,

READER.

(You should define nature. Do you mean the lower kingdom—animals, or the world as a whole? Does not the fact of sacrifice entirely change the application of your reasoning to mankind? Does it not distinguish the two, one as being in a state of war, the other if not in a different at least as emerging from such a state? It is no small matter to explain man's purpose in and relation to the world or universe.)

GERMANS ARE WAR MAD BARBARIANS

Dr. Seaman Has Seen Huns in Training

Dr. Louis Livingston Seaman, of New York, it will be remembered, cabled to New York from Antwerp an indignant protest against the bombardment of that city by Zeppelins. Dr. Seaman is a well-known figure in New York; he has figured conspicuously, for instance, in the work of the American committee for the celebration of the Century of Peace. An English journalist had an interview with Dr. Seaman, part of which may be quoted:

The doctor (says the interview) is a typical product of the United States with a hobby for rushing out to wars—officially, when his country is engaged, unofficially otherwise. With means enough to pursue his hobby and with a surgical skill which makes him welcome in any hospital, he has seen every war of his generation "from the inside." He came to Antwerp instinctively, and the next day was tending the Zeppelin wounded and working to rouse the United States to a sense of the atrocities of German war methods.

"It is not exactly news to me," he said, "and I reckon it won't be exactly news to America, that these Germans are war-mad barbarians. I have seen a good deal of them before this. The other day in Potsdam I saw proudly displayed the astronomical instruments which the Germans, under Von Waldersee, stole from Peking. That was a vandal trick, against which our General Chaffee in China protested at the time. The German general sent his letter back to him without any reply.

"In that Boxer campaign (I was there) the Germans practised on the Chinese the game they are playing now on the Belgians. Their army came when all the real fighting was over. By August 15th there was no more fight left in the Chinese than in so many jack rabbits. The Germans arrived November 20th, and for want of any fighting began a policy of systematic murder. They'd send punitive expeditions all round the country levying on each village they encountered a war tax. If the tax were not paid, the village was fired, and the inhabitants fired upon. From accounts which came in to us, the native population was in some cases almost exterminated. That was to give the German soldier his taste of blood, to fit him for the work he is doing now in Belgium, and might be doing in England if the luck had gone that way.

"I saw more of the Germans in their colony in East Africa, in 1904. I was out there investigating sleeping sickness. The Germans had imposed a most oppressive hut tax on the natives, a tax which could only be paid by six months' forced labour each year; and the natives were stirred up by their priests to revolt. German atrocity in reprisal was something incredible. One incident: The priests, or magic men, to encourage the natives, had told them that the German rifles shot out nothing but water, which would not hurt them. Well, one day, before my very eyes, the Germans collected 208 of the chief men of a village, assembled all the rest of the inhabitants, including women and children, strung the men up to trees, and then fired volleys into their hanging bodies. The firing went on until the bodies were riddled with holes."

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Hon. W. J. Roche, Minister of the Interior, arrived in Winnipeg yesterday morning after a lengthy sojourn at the Mayo Hospital in Minnesota.

The barn and contents of Ross McLennan, of Bruce Township, were entirely destroyed by fire, caused by lightning. The building was filled with the season's crop.

Rev. E. E. Sayles resigned the pastorate of the Oshawa Baptist Church. He went to Oshawa two and a half years ago, after graduating from McMaster University.

The electrification of the London and Port Stanley Railway, London's road to Lake Erie, will not be delayed on account of the war, and rehabilitation work is being rushed ahead.

A man, later identified as William Burbridge, Malton, committed suicide at Grewson's Corners, between Acton and Rockwood, by throwing himself in front of a Grand Trunk passenger train.

Wilfrid Laverdure, a long-term prisoner at the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, was instantly killed yesterday morning by falling from a pile of lumber to the ground, a distance of 20 feet.

P. Corkey's barn, near Harwood, with the season's crop, implements, calves, chickens and hogs, was burned, entailing a severe loss, for he had only a small insurance. It is supposed that children playing around a straw stack started the fire.

BOYCOTTING GERMANY.

Canada Preparing To Refuse German Manufactures.

While Canada is sending a powerful army of trained soldiers to oppose the Germans, the seven millions remaining at home are lining up for an assault on German trade. The destructive force of the movement to "boycott Germany" has enormously more scope in Great Britain, where German goods to the value of $145,000,000 are purchased every year, than in Canada, where German imports are slightly under $15,000,000, with about $1,600,000 from Austria-Hungary.

Three public bodies, the city of Winnipeg, the Board of Control and Public Utilities Commission of London, Ont., have already taken steps to strike Germany off the list of business acquaintances. Decisions such as these are bound to be contagious and it would not be surprising if by the end of summer the whole country has been swept into united action.

The large retail stores in Toronto and Montreal, according to statements of responsible officials, have stripped their shelves of German goods, and where sales of such goods were held since the war began, all identifying marks had first to be obliterated.

"From the first days of the war," said one of these officers, "women customers commenced to make close examinations of articles for foreign marks, and the repeated question: 'Did this come from Germany?' roused our managers to the new turn in public sentiment. We took action immediately, and either rid our warehouses of German goods by the quickest route or sold them as bargains, covering up signs of their foreign source."

The women of Ottawa have been the first to start aggressively on the trail of German trade by a local propaganda. They are losing no time in equipping recruits with the new ammunition. The object of attack is not so much the actual German goods now in Canada, for to kill such commodities would merely embarrass Canadian importers and wholesalers, but rather to attach the stigma to the name of "Germany," which will probably stick long after peace has been restored. Meanwhile incidental hardships to loyal Canadian merchants are liable to follow. To mention only one instance—seventy-five per cent. of the cheaper forms of cutlery used in Canada come from German factories. Stocks now on hand were laid in during times of peace and the holders of them are innocent parties. So serious was the declaration of war to Canadian wholesalers in hardware lines that the cutting off of German supplies has deprived them of a source of import which cannot be duplicated in any part of the world. One Toronto firm has sent a representative to England with samples of German cutlery to see what can be done in duplicating them for this country's demand. It is feared that several years would be required in making patterns and perfecting the product, but the Canadian dealers are willing to transfer the business even by scaling up their former range of cost prices.

BOWSER, HUSTLER

He'll Do the Housecleaning in an Hour by the Clock

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

WHEN the rest of the world cleaned house last spring, Mrs. Bowser decided to let the job wait until early fall. The other day she also decided that the propitious moment had arrived, and as Mr. Bowser sat reading and smoking she asked:

"Would you mind if we had breakfast half an hour earlier than usual?"

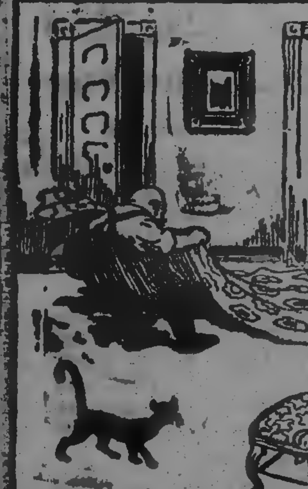
"I guess not. But why?" he queried.

"Well, I thought I'd begin housecleaning tomorrow. I've got two women and a man coming to help me, and I want to get an early start."

"Two women and a man, eh?" mused Mr. Bowser as he laid down his paper. "Two women and a man, and it will take you a month!"

"Oh, no; I hope to get through in three days."

"In other words, Mrs. Bowser, this house is to be upset from cellar to garret for the next three days in order that a man and two women may loaf around and charge you $3 a day apiece for it! That's your way exactly. I don't believe there's another woman like you on earth!"



HEAVED AND TUGGED.

"Haven't I got to clean house?" she asked.

Will Do the Job Himself.

"Yes, things have got to be tumbled over once a year, I suppose, but I don't propose to be upset for three or four days nor pay out $50 in cash. What housecleaning is wanted around here can be done in one hour by the clock, and I'm the person to do it. I want exercise to work off about three pounds of superfluous flesh. I'll change my clothes and be ready in five minutes."

"But you can't clean house!" pleaded Mrs. Bowser as she barred his way upstairs. "Just let it go. I've thought of another plan. I'll do it, one room at a time, and all by myself."

"What's the matter that I can't clean house? You watch my smoke and see. We won't have any puttering around about it. There's no use for you to spend a week over what I can do in an hour. I'll take the parlor first, and you needn't worry."

Mrs. Bowser dropped into a chair with a groan, and Mr. Bowser jumped into an old suit and was downstairs with the stepladder in ten minutes. The family cat came up from the kitchen and saw him in his shirt sleeves and a grim look on his face, and she quietly slipped under the lounge to be in a safe place when the splinters began to fly.

"A man and two women, eh? Three days and $50 expense to clean a house! Kindly keep track of my motions."

Mrs. Bowser Retreats.

And with five twists and a yank Mr. Bowser had the furniture out of the parlor into the sitting room. The casters chirruped and the dust flew, and Mrs. Bowser dodged the dancing chairs and made her way upstairs. There were pictures and wall ornaments to come down. It would have taken Mrs. Bowser half a day to remove them, but the time consumed by Mr. Bowser was a little short of twelve minutes. That was a saving of eleven hours and forty-eight minutes to begin with. In taking the pictures down he grabbed them by the corners and gave a flirt and a twist and snapped wires or hooks and started the molding from the wall, but he was working against time. As the last picture came down the corner struck and knocked the nose off a marble bust of Shakespeare, and Mrs. Bowser called down to know what had happened.

"Nothing—nothing 'tall," replied Mr Bowser as he picked up the nose and flung it out of the window. "You just keep quiet, and I'll show you how to do this housecleaning. I don't think we'll have to put breakfast ahead of the usual time."

In carrying the ornaments into the living room he struck a vase against a chair and shivered it, but the shiver didn't reach Mrs. Bowser, and he had nothing to complain of.

The cat purred and grinned as she looked out from her lair. Things were getting interesting. They got more interesting as Mr. Bowser, loaded up with rugs, came staggering in to trip over his own feet and come down on his knees and roll over on the broad of his back.

"I—I thought you had gone through to the cellar!" said Mrs. Bowser as she came hurrying downstairs.

"And suppose I had!" he demanded as he struggled up. "I'm bossing this job and if I want to break through the floor that's my business. You see what I've accomplished, don't you? In twenty-two minutes I have done more housecleaning than you and your crowd could have accomplished in three days. Don't come interfering. I know my gait."

The rooms having been cleared of furniture, the next thing in order was to take up the carpet. Some folks waste time by prying out the tacks, but there is another way, and Mr. Bowser caught on at once. Having got a corner loosened, he seized the border with both hands and heaved and tugged, and there was a rip, rip, rip, all along the baseboard. All he had to do was to walk around the room and heave away. Some men would have folded the carpet over and rolled it up when it was free from the floor, but Mr. Bowser didn't. No, he drew it along like a haystack. As a sort of grand windup and to reduce the height of the pile he fell on it. Two yells and a whoop followed, and the sounds jumped the cat from under the lounge and brought Mrs. Bowser downstairs on wings. He hadn't meant to yell when he fell foul of the tacks and imagined for a minute that he had kicked over a bumblebees' nest, but he was taken by surprise. However, Mrs. Bowser found him on his feet and struggling to preserve a calm and careless demeanor.

"It must have been cats fighting in the back yard," she said. "I see you've got the carpet up. The next thing is to dust the ceiling. I'll get you a feather duster."

Ups and Downs of Housecleaning.

When she had handed him the duster and disappeared Mr. Bowser advanced and kicked that heap of carpet about forty times as hard as he could swing his legs. A hundred tacks had jabbed into him and left smarting wounds, but he felt easier after the kicking. All that was needed now to finish up was to use the duster. He carried the stepladder over to a corner and mounted it and began work, and as he worked he chuckled. Mrs. Bowser had figured on standing the house on its head for two or three weeks, but he had got the best of her. Breakfast and dinner would be served at the usual hours, and he wouldn't have to climb over scrub brooms, mop sticks and pails of water to get in or out of the house.

He was using the duster about as a laborer uses a crowbar and flattering himself that the house would soon go to rack without him when some movement caused the foot of the ladder to slip. Mr. Bowser let fall the duster and grabbed something, but it was too late. He felt himself going, and he yelled "Murder!" He heard the cat pattering in over the bare floor, and he heard Mrs. Bowser on the stairs, and then he landed somewhere and saw stars dancing before him and the sound of many wheels going around was in his ears. He wasn't dead. He hadn't even broken a leg. He opened his eyes to find his head and shoulders up on the floor and his feet slanting up on the haystack of a carpet. As he lay thus for a moment he heard the cook asking in an awed voice:

"Is he dead at last?"

And Mrs. Bowser's voice was also plain as she answered:

"I don't think so. I think he turned over twice on his back. Keep the cat away while I fan him."

He Knows Who Did It.

Then Mr. Bowser lost sight of stars and suns and moons, and sound of wheels died away, and he returned to consciousness. He took one leg down at a time and then slowly and with becoming dignity stood up and leaned against the wall. The cook withdrew and the cat walked away, and Mrs Bowser was left face to face with whatever might come. It was not long coming.

"I see. I understand," whispered Mr. Bowser, as he nodded his head.

"You—you had a fall."

"Yes; attempted assassination. Who sneaked down here and kicked that stepladder from under me? Who I say, who? who? who?" and, pointing the accusing finger of justice at Mrs Bowser, he slowly and laboriously climbed his way upstairs and left her with her conscience.

No Occasion For Delay.

Patience—They say a girl can learn to swim much quicker if she has a woman instructor than if she has a man.

Patrice—Well, I don't blame her.—Yonkers Statesman.

Human History.

There is no such thing as human history. Nothing can be more profoundly, sadly true. The annals of mankind have never been written, never can be written. We have a leaf or two torn from the great book of human fate as it flutters in the storm winds ever sweeping across the earth. We decipher them as we best can with purblind eyes and endeavor to learn their mystery as we float along to the abyss, but it is all confused babble, hieroglyphics of which the key is lost.—Motley.

This One Did It.

"Tell me, honestly," said the novel reader to the novel writer, "did you ever see a woman who stood and tapped the floor impatiently with her toe for several moments as you describe?"

"Yes," was the thoughtful reply, "I did once."

"Who was she?"

"She's a clog dancer." — London Tit-Bits.

Fun In the Family.

"See, darling," and Mrs. Justwed held up for her husband's gaze three mirrors arranged so as to give as many reflections, "I can get a triple view of myself."

"Hump!" gurgled her brute of a man, struggling with his collar. "You seem to be quite popular with yourself!"

Feeds Out Rubber.

To keep the eraser perfectly clean, it is now supplied in a small case with a portion of the rubber fed as desired from one end.

Never Did Better.

Conspicuous in clean linen and a flaming tie, a Toronto newsy found time during the busy rush of an afternoon recently to say that he was coining money at the rate of $2 a day. A pearl crescent tiepin further evidenced the newsboy's claim to prosperity. He said that business had never been better than during the last week. Since the outbreak of war he had been making an average of $12 a week, and the rapidity with which he was disposing of "extras" gave the impression that the claim was borne out.

Interesting to Gardeners.

A French chemist attributes to carbonate of manganese, in very minute quantities, the power of rendering fertilizers more readily assimilable without undergoing any change itself. Experiments have tended to show that with the use of an ounce to about seven square yards germination was more free, growth more rapid, and yield better—that is, used with other fertilizers. By itself it is supposed to have no effect whatever. —London Express.

SALAD COMBINATIONS.

Here are some good salad combinations:

Lettuce, tomatoes cut in halves, sprinkled with powdered tarragon and parsley or chives.

Lettuce and peppergrass.

Lettuce, shredded pimentos, sliced pecan meats or almonds.

Lettuce, tomatoes stuffed with peas or string beans and chopped chives.

Lettuce, asparagus tips and sliced radishes.

Lettuce, shredded tomatoes and shredded green peppers.

Shredded lettuce, English walnuts and almonds.

Lettuce, Neufchatel cheese in slices and shredded pimentos.

Shredded cabbage and shredded green peppers.

Watercress, diced boiled beets and olives in center.

Beets stuffed with cucumber and dressing or celery.

Tomatoes stuffed with veal or tongue, peas, gherkins and olives.

Woman's World

Queen of the Belgians Heads Country's Red Cross Work.

QUEEN ELIZABETH OF BELGIUM.

Women of rank and wealth have volunteered to aid the wounded in hospitals or on the battlefield during the war in Europe, but that a queen should step down from her throne and join the ranks of ministering angels is scarcely to be expected. Elizabeth, queen of the Belgians, is, however, no ordinary queen. She is a regularly graduated physician. When it was announced she would head the Red Cross work in Belgium those who know her best hinted that it was work more to her liking than the keeping of royal state in the palace at Brussels.

She is a daughter of the famous royal oculist, the late Duke Charles Theodore of Bavaria, and a niece therefore of the murdered Empress Elizabeth of Austria. She is also a niece of the ex-queen of Naples.

In the present trouble the queen has thus to take sides against her royal relatives, the king of Bavaria and the emperor of Austria-Hungary.

In addition to being a duly qualified physician and trained sick nurse, Queen Elizabeth is a fine musician, excels as a violinist and, like the late empress of Austria, possesses a strong influence over horses and, in fact, over most animals.

She is the mother of three children, two handsome boys and a very pretty little girl.

Her labors as a sick nurse in the Belgian capital have endeared her to rich and poor alike. One of her many good works before King Albert's accession was the founding of the Albert-Elizabeth dispensary for the consumptives of Brussels. She was often in daily attendance at her dispensary, giving personal attention to the patients. Indeed, her goodness of heart and philanthropic disposition have earned for her the title of "the people's queen."

BASQUED FIGURES.

Fall Fashion Designers Find In Them Much That Is Attractive.

The basque is individual, distinctive, though borrowed from the past. And in its loose, semifitting lines fall will find her most popular expression. It is not designed for the slender woman alone. Surprising lack of figure line is achieved in its quaint though strictly up to date simplicity. But those who have accepted it in its summer adaptation have already resorted to the close fitting brassiere (preferably of strong net), in accordance with its demands.

Now the corsetieres are providing corsets which measure a height of at least five inches above normal waist line—quite a change from the one or two inches or perhaps no inch at all of the past season.

These new corsets not only differ in this respect, but for the stout woman there is quite an ample spring over the hips. No longer is she doomed to the impossible straight lines so alien to her figure, and by allowing the latter a natural freedom she obtains most commendable results in comfort and appearance.

While high and at first uncomfortable, the best corsets will still retain the elastic top, so that a snug fit may be insured with sufficient comfort.

Some of the newest models are slightly fitted in at the waist line, though this is as yet rather a threat than a likelihood.

The Red Haired Girl.

Ruddy locks are a delight to the eye, a feast of artistic color, full of lights and shades, but they are often a sore problem to their possessor. She feels at a loss for guidance in the wearing of color, especially in the matter of jewelry.

These few simple hints may prove useful, for they have been tested time and again:

An auburn locked girl with brown eyes should wear gold, pale coral, amethysts, topazes, pearls and garnets.

Red hair, accompanied by gray or even greenish eyes, should choose pale amber, amethysts, pearls and topazes.

If the eyes are really blue, then amber, amethysts, topazes, green chalcedony or chrysoprase and emeralds are allowable.

The somewhat sandy haired type, with light eyelashes and eyes, will find becoming pearls, amber, gold, onyx and jet.

Horse Shipment Plans.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Oct. 9.—The first definite announcement of the plans of the remount department of the imperial army was made here yesterday by General Sir Frederick Benson, head of the department in Canada. He said both St. John and Halifax will be used for horse depots and shipping. He expects to see 3,000 horses a week handled.

Food of the Chickadee.

The food of the chickadee is made up of insects and vegetable matter in the proportion of seven of the former to three of the latter. Moths and caterpillars are favorites and form about one-third of its food, while beetles, ants, wasps, bugs, grasshoppers and spiders make up the rest. The vegetable food consumed is composed of seeds, largely those of pine, poison ivy and weeds.

Culinary Notes

Putting Up Rhubarb.

The end of the season rhubarb may be preserved for winter pies without being cooked at all. It will retain its freshness until the new supply comes on in the spring.

The rhubarb should be cut into three-quarter inch pieces and put into quart jars. When the jars are full water from the cold water faucet should be run into them until all the air is forced out. After all the air bubbles have come to the top the mouth of the jars should be wiped dry and the covers screwed on with a can tightener. The jars should be kept standing in a cool place and the covers tightened each day. They should then be wrapped in paper and put in a dark closet not too near the heating pipes.

To make pies the water should be drained off and the same amount of sugar used as for fresh fruit. If the cans have been tight the fruit will be hard and solid.

Cantaloupe Pickle.

Firm, hard fruit should be selected for cantaloupe pickle, which is very good and very inexpensive. The fruit should be cut along the ridges and peeled. The softest part of the inside and the seeds should be cut out and the sections put into a quart jar lengthwise. The jars should be steamed in a steamer until they are hot, but before the fruit is cooked they should be taken out and filled with a hot sirup made of two pounds of sugar and one quart of vinegar to each four quarts of fruit. The spices—cloves, stick cinnamon and allspice—should be tied up in a piece of cheesecloth before being put in the jars.

Jars, covers and sirup should all be very hot before they are closed and should be sealed very tight. The pickle may be served with meat.

Delicious Tomato Sandwich.

Sandwiches will, with the opening of school, be in demand for the children's luncheon.

The tomato sandwich is piquant and appetizing.

Select large, smooth, meaty tomatoes, with few seeds. Slice very thin and place on ice while the other ingredients are being prepared. Mix together with a silver spoon till thick and creamy one tablespoonful of olive oil, a quarter teaspoonful of finely minced clove of garlic, two tablespoonfuls of thick sour cream, the yolk of one hard boiled egg, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonful of black pepper. Cut white bread thin, leaving the crust on; spread with the dressing and place the cold tomatoes between the slices.

A Popular Jelly.

When crab apples can be had for the picking the housekeeper should put up lots of jelly. The proportions are four pounds of fruit to three pounds of sugar. The method is as follows:

Wash the apples and cut away decayed parts. Put into a vessel with water, cover and boil until the fruit is soft. The skin and cores can then be easily removed. Strain the water the apples have been cooked in through a jelly bag and put aside.

Dissolve the right quantity of sugar in the water set aside in the proportions of one pint to three pounds of sugar. Set the preserving pan over the stove and when the contents boil drop in the apples. Boil [illegible] and then put [illegible]

TRAVEL IN SAN SALVADOR.

Crossing Rivers and Swamps Tourists Often Get Free Baths.

More than once, says John H. Weeks in his book "Among the Primitive Bakongo," I had in my San Salvador journey a strong krooboy a part of whose duty it was to carry me over the many streams and swamps that crossed the path. His name was a remarkable one. I do not know how he came by it, but the first time I met him I asked him his name, and he replied in krooboy English, "My name, massa, be Napoleon Bonaparte."

Sometimes Napoleon would have me on his shoulders in the middle of a river, and feeling the rush of water against his legs he would begin to quake and say: "Massa, I no fit for carry you. I go let you fall."

I would reply, "Napoleon, I fit for give you one cupful of rice suppose you no drop me."

He would then take a few more careful paces, and feeling the swirl of water more strongly about his legs and the stones slipping beneath his feet he would nervously call out in his curious English: "Massa, massa, I no fit! I bound for let you fall."

Napoleon often received from me the promise of two or three cupfuls of rice to steady him before he landed me high and dry upon the farther bank. At times we were not so fortunate. Then both of us went down into the water, and we congratulated ourselves when it was a stream and not a nasty, muddy swamp.

Plane Trees of Cannosa.

Not least among trees which have become celebrated are two giant plane trees at Cannosa, near Ragusa, that "pearl of the Adriatic." Within three hours' walk of Ragusa, on an elevation above the tideless sea, lies the famous garden of Count Gozze. From a primitive landing place a path leads up between olives and pomegranates, myrtles and oleanders to the level spot where the two colossal trees have stood from time immemorial. The effect of the larger tree upon a spectator standing beneath it is positively overwhelming. It takes twenty-five paces merely to walk closely round the trunk, while the spreading branches reach horizontally for from thirty to forty paces and then bend upward and fork. A good sized public meeting could be held in the shade of either of these immense trees.—Wide World Magazine.

RULES FOR THE PLOWING MATCH

Competitiom Will Start at 9.30 on Morning of October 28

The directors of the county of Peterboro Plowmen's Association have drafted the following rules which will govern the plowing match for the championship of the county to be held on October 28. The entry fee in the men's class will be $2.00 for non-members of the Association and $1.00 for members and in the boys' classes $1.00 for non-members and 50 cents for members. Competitors will have to be on the grounds by 8 a.m. Plowing will commence at 9.30 sharp and must be completed by 4 o'clock. Competitors will be expected to plow one third of an acre. Fifteen minutes will be allowed for lunch.

The average depth of the furrow must be 6 inches. No assistance will be given to any prowman except in setting and removing stakes. No person will be allowed to walk on the ground plowed or to be plowed. Any competitor on whose behalf this rule is violated will lose his prize. No person will be allowed to interfere with the judges in the discharge of their duties. The decision of the judges will be final. Entries must be made to the Secretary, Mr. Fred Campbell, R.R. No. 5, Peterboro, or to Mr. H. B. Cowan, Farm and Dairy, by Saturday, October 24. All starts will be made on the level in sod. After the first scratch up and down the field no handling of the land will be allowed.

David R. Black, insurance broker, of New York, has recovered after accidentally drinking water containing 22 grains of bichloride of mercury.

FAITHFUL WIFE

into exile alone. With him I will go."

Began Eight Months Ago.

Eight months ago Joseph Norman lived happily with his wife and children—Leo, six, and George, two—in their home in Blackman street. He was employed in the Hazard Rope Works, and out of his earnings he paid off a mortgage on one of the buildings he had bought.

Then he was stricken with a peculiar disease. He was able to keep up work now and then, but finally he had to quit altogether. Doctors were puzzled. He graduallly grew worse, and a few weeks ago doctors here suggested that he go to Philadelphia for treatment. He went to Philadelphia and to a hospital there. The doctors diagnozed his case as leprosy and the health authorities were notified. Norman was placed in an automobile and hurried back to Wilkes-barre. They took him to his own home and then notified the Wilkesbarre officials that "your leper is out in his home."

Family Prisoners.

Incidentally there was consternation. The house was roped off and guards were placed about it to prevent escape of the family and keep all friends away.

Then it dawned upon city officials that the care of a leper was a heavy financial burden. Appeals were made to Uncle Sam to have Norman placed in a Government leprosy colony, but the Government refused to take the case. The Poor Board, asked to care for the man, agreed to supply him with provisions.

Mrs. Norman had been allowed to return to the house. Now they are awaiting word that they are to be sent to an isolated colony.

BRITAIN WENT INTO THE WAR

There arose a spirit of rivalry for wider domination. The military spirit was aided by this desire for dominance. Armaments by land and sea increased a watchful spirit in both countries, and sowed seeds of conflict.

The Eastern or Balkan situation was the third cause. Between the Teuton and Slav is a wide and deep race rivalry, with Russia as head of the Slavs and Germany and Austria in the Triple Alliance.

Russia has never forgotten nor forgiven Austria for annexing Bosnia and Herzegovina when she (Russia) was not in a condition to fight for it, as it was at the conclusion of the Russian-Japanese war.

"The Balance of Power," which was difficult to define. It was most important that the integrity and independence of such small countries as Holland, Switzerland, Belgium, Denmark, etc., should be maintained. Five of the powers of Europe agreed to make Belgium a neutral country; all agreed not to use Belgium, but to respect her neutrality. England could not repose in peace if these buffer states were in posession of a power that was her rival. Britain has for her development the broad lines of the ocean, her great roads are the pathless ocean. It is essential for the maintenance of the British Empire that efficient command of the seas be hers. So stress has always been laid on naval supremacy. A few weeks ago they had an illustration of the confusion at sea that was caused when maters were in doubt.

It was not till the scrap of paper was torn that England entered the contest. She had guaranteed Belgium against the rapacity of the strong. England staked her all on the inviolability of her honor. Suppose England had not gone to war! France would have been annihilated by the force and power, the hordes of artillery turned on her by Germany. Belgium would not havo fought as she is doing. It would only be a short time before Holland and other small countries would meet a like fate. Germany wants to dominate the world, to eliminate the British. But England had given her plighted word, and her honor as a nation was as dear as the honor of an individual. The quarrel of the allies is right, and the best sentiment of the world is with them to-day—the moral force of the world.

Mrs. James George, vice-president, was in the chair, and introduced the speaker. Mrs. Torrington moved the vote of thanks at the conclusion of Sir George's speech.

LONDON MAN AND THREE SONS SERVE COUNTRY

In this interesting group are shown Mr. and Mrs. George Bullen of 905 Dame Street, London, Ontario, and their three sons. The father is a corporal in the Canadian Army Service Corps and is serving with the 7th Regiment at London; and the three sons all went to Valcartier with the 7th Regiment's detachment of the overseas contingent. Two of them, George, Jr. (in centre of picture) and James (standing by his mother) were accepted, but Charles (beside his father) was turned back on account of lacking one inch in chest measurement. He is, however, on the waiting list for the second contingent. It is unlikely that many families in Canada can show such whole-hearted devotion to their country's cause.

ROUND-UP BY LOCAL POLICE

Good Work is Accomplished After Months of Investigation

Although no particular noise has been heard, the police department have been very busy for months, getting evidence and have at last rounded up what is described as the worst bunch, from a moral standpoint, the city has been infested with. One woman who has been very hard to get at for many years, because of her owning the property and her ability to cover her tracks, left the County jail this morning, with several pals and associates, to serve a sentence at the Mercer reformatory.

The men too have been rounded up and although a more severe punishment might have come to one in particular, they both are in prison for their hideous offences.

Another man and his wife have been allowed suspended sentence and it is said, are doing very much better, in every way and those who have taken them in hand are hopeful of very good results, by getting them on the straight and narrow path.

Considering the difficulty attendant to getting evidence in these nasty cases, the police are to be congratulated that none got clear. It is expected that the prosecution and punishment will be a warning to others who may be loose in their morals, to stop, because sooner or later they get caught.

Another man and woman are on remand for vagrancy and the police are doing their best to have a nasty snarl untangled.

OBITUARY

DENNIS CORKERY.

Dennis Corkery, aged 96 years, one of the most highly esteemed residents of the township of Hamilton passed away very suddenly at his home last night. He went to bed feeling as well as ever but was seized with a hemorrhage of the lungs and passed away in a few minutes. Deceased was born in County of Cork, Ireland, but spent the greater portion of his life near Harwood.

Five sons, Richard of Otonabee; Felix of Saskatchewan; Dennis, proprietor of the King George Hotel, city; Michael, of Saskatchewan, and Jeremiah on the homestead, also two daughters, Mrs. B. Hayes of Rochester, and Mrs. Fred Blastorah of this city, are left to mourn his death. The funeral will take place to Cobourg on Sunday morning.

Crossley Meetings Create Interest for Young and Old

The interest in the Crossley meetings at St. James is increasing and last night definite, clear preaching produced effects. As Mr. Crossley spoke of the way home he used a striking phrase "He who constructed the way almost made heaven bankrupt in order that the earth might be restored to God's favor. Excuses for not being in the way, such as inconsistencies and hypocrisy in others, were ironically dealt with and ridiculed. Only one is worse than a hypocrite, a creature all loathe, and that is that man who will hide behind a hypocrite.

The way is a way of holiness, as Scripture reveals the term, not a part of it but the whole way is a way of holiness, set apart for God and accepted of God. It includes the weakest babe in the faith as well as the greatest saint. Our privilege is to get into the centre of the way. "Here Lord I give myself away." This is the oath of allegiance to God. It is surrenderer to God. It is a plain way — surrender, trust and peace We attempt to vary the order and we fail to feel and believe before we surrender is a mistake. By coming to Him and saying "I give myself to Thee" as Mr. Crossley did on June 25, 1868, is to enter into the way.

The way is not only a way of holiness and a plain way but it is a way of safety. Lions of difficulty might be near the way but they were not in the way. It is also a happy way. To say this world is a bombay wilderness is to misrepreesent it. Rather let us talk of victories than of trials. Jesus Christ can keep us in the way by keeping us near the Cross.

The closing of the meeting was most unique. It was what he termed "Family Prayer." All those who were officials of any church, teacher in S. S. or leader of Young People's Society, together with those who had never openly identified themselves with any church, though resolved they would surrender, trust and accept the peace of God, came and surrounded 2 or 3 deep, the altar, singing "Yes, we will gather at the river," after which there was given an opportunity to lead briefly in prayer. The meeting concluding with the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison.

The service tonight will be in the form of a rally for all the young people, scholars and students and those of youthful spirit. The meetings are preceded with hearty singing from 7.45 to 8. All these meetings are open to the public and they are most cordially invited and will be most heartily welcomed.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU TO GET GRANT OF $50

Finance Committee Feel the Proposition is Worth an Experiment

"Hydro" Johnston took up the reigns of finance minister last night and broke in by tapping the $500 for the Industrial Association on the head. B. D. Hall and R. J. Soden representing the association waited upon the finance committee and urged that five hundred dollars be given them to start an employment bureau. Five hundred dollars is a big sum to get a council to hand out at this season of the year and the members of the committee expressed themselves accordingly.

Considerable discussion resulted during which the idea of securing Tax Collector Green to do the work was brought forward. Ald. Green then moved that the committee recommend to the council that a donation of fifty dollars be made to enable the association to experiment for a month. At the end of the month if the idea is working into a success, the committee might do something further. The motion also contained the condition that D. B. Hall, R. J. Soden and the Mayor confer with Tax Collector Green and see if any arrangements could be made. The motion carried unanimously.

No Roller Skating.

John Meharry, manager of the roller rink on Brock Street had a communication before the meeting in which permission was asked to open his place of amusement on Monday without taking out a license which costs $50.00. He would pay five dollars for Monday alone. The reason given was that the day would prove a test. If business would warrant him taking out a license he would, if not he would lock the door. In consideration of the field day of sports at Riverside Park, the proceeds of which will go to the Patriotic Fund and the possibility of the roller rink offering a little opposition, no action was taken.

Not Liable for Account.

In the recent Rex vs. McGarvey case at police court a Chinese interpreter was necessitated. One was secured from Ottawa at the expense of $13. The City Treasurer has no authority to pay that amount and had a letter from the meeting asking advice. There was also a communication from Jos. Wearing, acting Crown Attorney, giving the details of the incident. The members of the committee were of the opinion that there are several Chinese in the city who would be able to perform such duties as the man from Ottawa. As Ald. Green declared, "There's a whole Sunday School class of them over in St. Paul's Church." The clerk was authorized to write Mr. Wearing and inform him that the city was not liable for the account of the interpreter.

KEENE FAIR WAS A FINE SUCCESS

Receipts Were in Advance of Last Year

(Special Correspondence.)

Keene, Oct. 9.—In spite of the cloudy weather on Wednesday morning the annual fair of the Otonabee Agricultural Society held at Keene scored a splendid and substantial success, the total receipts was considerable in advance of last year which was considered a banner year. The exhibits in all lines have held their own with other years, and in many departments have eclipsed other marks. The weatherman gave out his choicest brand and the attendance was remarkable, the crowd was on hand early and the rush began about 12.30 p.m. and by 3.30 p.m. the ground from the main entrance to the grand stand was covered by a multitude of people who had apparently forgotten the war gloom for the time being and seemed pleasure bent, although the patriotic music furnished by the Alderville brass band the playing of marching songs were reminders of the great war struggle. The war excitement was in evidence on the midway people singing "It's a long long road to Tipperary," and in other voices, "Hoch the Kaiser." Everybody, young and old, showed their patriotism by displaying a patriotic emblem that was handed out by the young ladies displaying the Red Cross.

Crowds gathered around the race track and judging ring where a great interest was shown, the races provided a fine exhibition in both classes, and the society feels greatly honored by Mr. Montgomery of Peterboro who brought his speedy little horse, Jimmy Direct, into action on the Keene track; also to Messrs. Staples and Hanbridge who gave the people a chance to see in the judging ring their prize winners, Frivolous and Maggie, his three year old that carried away from the Toronto Exhibition honors and several first prizes. Mr. Hanbridge showed two. Such opportunities should be appreciated. In all classes, the class of animals, stock and poultry was remarkable.

Local Delegates for Baptist Convention

The Baptist church of Ontario and Quebec will hold its twenty-sixth annual convention in the Walmer Road Baptist church, Toronto, commencing Wednesday evening, Oct. 14, and continuing until Monday evening, the 19th. An elaborate programme has been prepared, the speakers including such men as Rev. Dr. G. W. Truett, of Dallas, Texas, and Dr. H. C. Mabie, who has just returned from a two-year trip to the Orient in the interests of misions. Both these special speakers will address the convention daily.

The secret is out at last. You pronounce Przemysl with the accent on the B.

BYERSVILLE L.O.L. ENTERTAINED FRIENDS

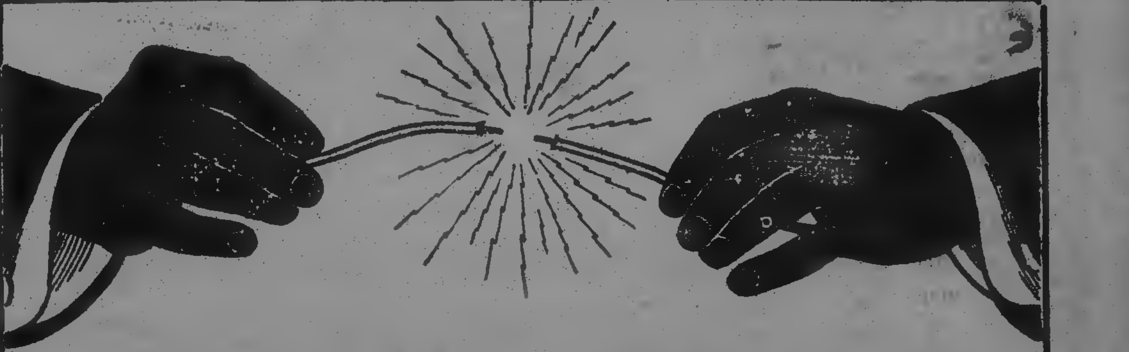
The first annual tea and concert of Byersville L.O.L. No. 2440, held in their hall, North Monaghan, on Thursday, Oct. 1st, was a great success. The hall was filled to the doors with members and friends. Supper was served from 6 till 8.30, after which a splendid program was given. Bro. Geo. McCartney, grand organizer, filled the chair in an able manner. The band of L.O.L. No. 56 gave several selections which were greatly appreciated. The entertainment was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem, Rule Britannia and God Save the King.

NO OFFENCE TO SELL GASOLINE ON SUNDAY

Judge Morson has decided that the sale of gasoline to automobiles on Sunday is a work of necessity, and has quashed the conviction made at Toronto against Joseph Miller, of the Automobile Supply Co. by Justices of the Peace J. Cohen and Curran Morrison for a breach of the Lord's Day act.

"I have no hesitation," said his honor, "in deciding that the selling of gasoline on Sunday by a garage to automobiles, which are now in such general use, is a work of necessity and comes within the exceptional aid down in the Lord's Day act."

No costs were allowed.



Thoughts are Sparks

—flashes of the mind that decide for success or failure.

The question is, what kind of sparks does your brain generate?

The brain, like a battery, must be supplied with certain elements to generate thought properly. These brain elements are water, albumen and phosphate of potash. If any of these are lacking in the daily food, brain and body energy are vitally lessened.

Are any lacking? Listen! Water and albumen are plentifully supplied in ordinary food, but phosphate of potash—together with other mineral elements—is almost wholly lacking in white bread and all white flour products.

Grape-Nuts

—containing all the nutriment of wheat and barley, including the precious phosphates so essential to perfect bodies and active brains, provides a food at once delicious, nourishing and economical.

A morning dish with cream furnishes POWER for accomplishment that many a man has come to appreciate.

Common sense goes a long way toward success. To eat right often means to BE right.

ANTWERP OFFERS HEROIC RESISTANCE TO GERMANS

Eyes of the Nations Are Now Turned on Belgian Fortress, Which is Still Withstanding Assault---King Albert With Remnant of Troops Has Marched Out---British Are Assisting in Operations.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—While the immense armies of the belligerent powers of Europe are engaged in death struggles along lines hundreds of miles in extent, in battle which for the numbers engaged, fierceness and stubbornness, have no precedent in history, the intrepid little army of Belgium is making a last stand behind the forts of Antwerp, one of the strongest fortified positions in the world.

The bombardment of Antwerp has been so violent that the houses at Rosendaal, a Netherlands town more than 20 miles distant, have been visibly shaken, according to a telegram from that town to the Central News by way of Amsterdam.

Some wounded civilians have arrived at Rosendaal, and the Dutch Government has ordered all trains to proceed to that place, to be held in readiness to transport the refugees and injured. Thousands of refugees have already arrived.

Throughout the entire night, the message adds, a red glare illuminated the sky.

The intensity of the German attack on the city is taken in some quarters to mean that the Germans are preparing a second line of defence stretching from Antwerp to Brussels, Namur and Metz, upon which they can fall back in the event of reverses on their present line in the north of France.

King Albert has appealed to all male Belgians between the ages of 18 and 30 years to rally to the support of the colors for the crisis which may involve the independence of the country.

News has been received here that the King of the Belgians marched out of Antwerp yesterday at the head of a portion of his army. This portion of the Belgian army is probably retiring to the west and southwest. At Ghent it will come into contact with the Belgian forces holding West Flanders.

Several reports that strong reinforcements, presumably of Birtish troops, with heavy guns, reached Antwerp during the day are not officially confirmed, though references to reinforcements have been allowed to pass the censors.

The condition of panic among the populace was increased yesterday, says another Antwerp despatch, by the appearance at 11 o'clock yesterday morning and three yesterday afternoon of German aircraft, which dropped bombs, destroying seven houses and killing a score of people.

An earlier despatch said: On account of the Zeppelins' successful attack of Antwerp the large avenue leading to the railroad station quickly became black with a struggling mass of people eager to escape from the city. Seized with an unreasoning, terrible fear of a bombardment or of a charge of German cavalry, the people are transporting invalids, cripples, and even the occupants of lunatic asylums. It was a pathetic sight to see the poor people, some carrying on their backs their hopelessly maimed or idiotic relatives, who were crowded into railroad vans and transported northward to remain in some cattle shed or railroad platform until rooms can be found for them in Dutch asylums and institutions.

The situation, however, quickly changed again. While at 2 o'clock even grown-up men were weeping with terror and were fighting for places around the railway station, at six o'clock everybody was again certain that the —— forces would be able to hold out against the Germans and even throw them back across the River Nethe, while everybody was telling his neighbor how far superior the —— guns were to the German heavy artillery. The people who are remaining in the city are taking to the cellars, prepared to hear the first German shell in the morning.

The Belgian Ministers are trying to reach Ostend through Flanders and via Holland. The Belgian army is marching into the city, tired out, leaving the guarding of the forts for the night to fresh —— troops.

The blanks are given to denote words cut out by the censor. Evidently they relate to forces and guns brought to Antwerp by the British.

WOULD DIVE FOR MINES

TOKIO, Oct. 9.—Hundreds of women shell divers of Shima Province offered their service to the navy to clear the mines from Kiaochow Bay. The offer was declined, as the law prohibits the employment of women in warlike operations. These divers are accustomed to remain in the water for a long period. Their idea was that unseen by the enemy, they could dive for the mines near Kiaochow and remove them to the Japanese warships.

Released on Bail.

MONTREAL, Oct. 9.—After a private sitting before Judge Lanctot yesterday morning it was decided to release Robert H. Reid, New York financier, on bail. Mr. Reid appeared before Judge St. Cyr Wednesday on a charge of obtaining $750,000 worth of stock from John McMartin by false pretences, and was arrested later on a second charge, that of presenting a forged note for $100 at Halifax.

Soldier's Body Found.

QUEBEC, Oct. 9.—The body of a soldier belonging to the Princess Patricia Regiment was found floating yesterday near the wharf of the Canada Lines, Limited. It was identified as that of Corporal N. Lindblad, who wore No. 750 and belonged to the second company of the Princess Patricia Regiment.

It is not known where Lindblad comes from.

Dried Apples For Belgians.

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—Through an appeal to Western Ontario women to dry apples by the old-fashioned method, Hon. Martin Burrell, expects to obtain 20,000 bushels for shipment to Belgium for the suffering people there. The apples are to be forwarded to H. Prudhome of Montreal, who has charge of their shipment abroad.

KING ALBERT OF BELGIUM.

ASSASSINATION TRIAL BEGINS

BORDEAUX, Oct. 9.—(Via London.)—The Neues Weinere Tagblatt, a copy of which has arrived here from Vienna, says that the indictment, alleging high treason and covering 7 pages, has been read to 25 prisoners, who are charged with having been concerned in the murder of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, the heir-apparent of the Austrian throne, at Sarayevo. It is expected that their trial will last three weeks, according to the newspaper.

ANCHORED AT SOUTHAMPTON

Three Ships With Canadians Are in Port

SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 9.—Three ships belonging to the Cunard Line are anchored in port here with the first contingent of Canadian troops. Other vessels with Canadians are expected.

The city is full of staff officers and steamship officials, who will supervise the transportation of the troops on the next stage of their journey.

The people here are enthusiastic over the arrival of the Canadians, and are preparing to give them a hearty welcome.

Borden Going To England?

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—It is stated on good authority that Sir Robert Borden will go to England shortly to discuss matters of Dominion-wide concern with Hon. Geo. H. Perley and Premier Asquith. No confirmation of this could be obtained last night, but leading Conservative members of Parliament who are in the city declared that the Prime Minister finds it necessary to go to England at the present time.

OSTEND READY FOR SIEGE

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The "communal council of Ostend has passed unanimously a declaration that the town is ready for every sacrifice in order to resist the German advance to the last moment," say The Daily Telegraph's Ostend correspondent.

Contribution Is Acknowledged.

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—Mrs. Gooderham, the president of the Canadian Women's Hospital Ship Fund, has received the following telegram from Ottawa:

"Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught has received cable from the Army Council, who gratefully accept $100,000 from the women of Canada, and will spend the whole sum in purchase of 40 motor ambulance cars, 20 to be used in France and 20 in England. Each car will be inscribed, 'Canadian Women's Motor Ambulance'."

VON KLUK STILL RESISTING ATTEMPT TO OUTFLANK HIM BATTLE FRONT CHANGES

German Right Wing Has Been Forced Back at Right Angles to Centre and Left and if Allies Get Around Flank German Army is Lost.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—It is impossible, in view of the latest official statements, to resist the conclusion that the great battle between the Germans and the allies has entered a new phase of far-reaching importance.

The steady extension of operations on the allies' left is having the effect of transforming into a fresh battle front the long line having its southernmost point in the neighborhood of Roye and its northernmost extremity close to the Belgian frontier, on a line which, prolonged, would reach the sea near Ostend.

The importance of this change is enhanced by the allies' recovery of the German lost ground in the region of Roye. While it would be premature to say that this success has detached the operations on the former front from those wherein the chief interest now lies, the tendency is undoubtedly in that direction.

French military experts regard the presence of such considerable forces of the enemy in the north as a mystery. None of the hypotheses yet advanced regarding them are satisfactory. It is possible that they are supplementary troops that have been drawn from the forces around Antwerp. Such a move would point directly to the Germans' recognition of their precarious position in France.

On the other hand, a further movement of troops from the centre may have taken place; but this, seeing that the centre already has been weakened to strengthen the forces of Gen. Von Kluk, would expose the troops on the new front to fresh risks.

If the German troops in the north are largely new formations, as has been suggested, their resistance to the allies is unlikely to be serious. The general impression is one of continued and increased confidence.

One writer says: "To-mororw the battle will be in Belgium." However, this is not an exaggeration. The view taken by optimists is that the position of the right wing certainly remains satisfactory.

Interesting details concerning the slow but steady advance in Lorraine makes it clear that this movement has produced valuable results by clearing the Nancy district of the enemy.

The official communication issued by the French War Office last night says: "On the whole, the situation is stationary, the positions occupied remaining the same, notwithstanding several violent engagements, notably in the region of Roye."

In spite of the gravity attached to the situation at Antwerp, military authorities assert that the vigor of the German attack indicates an inherent weakness of the German position in the west as a whole. With Antwerp in their hands they would be enabled to prepare a new line of defence resting on Antwerp and Brussels and extending east by way of Namur to Metz. This would give them an excellent and not overly extended lines of defence on which to make another stand.

Operations on the German right and the allies' left are becoming more crucial every moment, and, just as Antwerp's fall seems inevitable, the turning operation against Von Kluk is trembling on the point of fruition. Both armies are engaged in a breakneck race in the French departments of the Nord and Pas de Calais, with the cavalry screen thrown almost at the North Sea. Infantry and artillery have been relegated to the rear, while the mounted forces charge each other incessantly, each endeavoring to drive further north. Both forces are now well into Belgian territory, with the allies holding the most favorable ground. French cavalry is reported at Ypres, a bare 25 miles from Ostend, the new temporary capital of Belgium. To understand the manoeuvres now under way, it must be remembered that at the beginning of fighting on the River Aisne the opposing armies stood on almost parallel straight lines. To-day the German right is perpendicular to the centre, and left, with an unceasing operation under way by the allies to get around the tip of Von Kluk's line. If this movement is effected he must double back on the German centre or fight his way through the enveloping columns. Both eventualities are extremely hazardous, and, according to all standards of warfare, he is a loser.

It is whispered in the highest circles that Von Kluk himself realized the gravity of his danger at least two weeks ago. Then he pleaded with the Kaiser to be allowed to fall back on the Valenciennes line, but the German war lord absolutely forbade another retreat. Von Kluk is said to have pointed out the possibility of annihilation if the Aisne line were maintained, but no counsel prevails with the Kaiser except that Von Kluk should advance or stand firm.

All along the main line of operations great conflicts are raging. Lille is suffering under a disastrous fire from German field pieces, and yesterday Roye was again the centre of surging forces.

The centres of both armies remain quiet, with the French winning steadily in the Woevre region. The Lorraine situation continues in status quo.

Must Preach Charity.

RUNAWAY BOAT COMES TO GRIEF

Italian Officer and Stolen Submarine Back Home

LEGHORN, Italy, Oct. 9.—The cruise of the Italian-built submarine which disappeared from the Gulf of Spezia some days ago and later turned up at Ajaccio, Corsica, has come to an end. The French authorities of Ajaccio, who took possession of the vessel, asked Paris what disposition they should make of her. Paris communicated with Rome, Italy sent a destroyer to get the submarine, and there is reason to believe that she is now on her way home under this convoy.

The submarine was under the command of a retired naval lieutenant, Angelo Bellone, who, leaving a letter in which he said Italian neutrality was a mistake and that it was the duty of every Italian to work individually to bring about Italian intervention in the present war, headed for the open sea. Here Bellone said to his crew that he had been entrusted with a secret mission and that he was on his way to the island of Corsica. Then the crew grew suspicious and informed the authorities.

Austrian Deserters In Italy.

ROME, Oct. 9.—(Via Paris).—The Italian Government in its endeavor to maintain neutrality is exercising the strictest surveillance over persons coming across the frontier from Austria. Numerous deserters from the Austrian army are taking refuge in Italy and some criminals also are seizing the opportunity to escape punishment in Austria by disguising themselves as deserters and coming into this country.

Many Austrian subjects of Italian birth also have fled to Italy because of their unwillingness to serve in the Austrian army.

Fewer Immigrants Coming.

Immigration has fallen off 58 per cent. owing to the war and to the restricting of immigration to farmers, agricultural laborers and domestics. During April, May, June and July there were 105,631 immigrants, composed of 32,312 British, 34,930 American and 38,389 from other countries.

For the same months, 1913, the total immigration was 250,906, composed of 99,114 British, 54,046 American and 97,572 from other countries.

FRANK PATRICK DOESN'T THINK MUCH OF SCHEME

To Form New Professional Hockey League in the East

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 9.—That conditions for the formation of a new professional hockey league in the east are not promising, is the opinion of the coast hockey officials. It is their opinion that the formation of a new league, composed of Nationals, Boston, New York, and perhaps another Montreal team would be advisable. Frank Patrick, president of the Pacific Coast Hockey association, when interviewed, made the following statement: "It seems to me the promoters have picked a poor year to start a new legue in the east, as the general public are so deeply interested in the European war that sporting propositions will not receive the same support they might expect to in ordinary times. With the heavy cost entailed in a scramble for players, the new league would stand to lose considerable money, as it could only hope to get the dissatisfied players, and they at a big cost. Professional hockey would undoubtedly kill the amateur game in New York and Boston, where it has been fairly profitable, so that from an all-round business standpoint the new league looks anything but an attractive proposition. The Pacific Coast Hockey association, since Portland has come into the circuit, is in good shape to make a strong effort to hold its players, a great many of whom are now under contract and reside on the coast."

INDOOR BASEBALL

The indoor baseball game at the Armouries last evening was keenly contested. A. Co. and the Band were the contestants, A. Co. winning, the score being 18-16. The game was very close throughout, and was thoroughly enjoyed by a large number of spectators.

KING EDWARDS WON.

In a football match last evening, King Edwards defeated the team from King George School by 2-0.

BIG ATTRACTION IN SPORT EVENTS ON THE HOLIDAY

Keen Competition is Looked for in the Road Race

Thanksgiving will be a great day for the boys and young men of Peterboro, as they will be given an opportunity to enjoy in full a set of athletic games which will be the best put on in Peterboro in some time. Every athlete should enter and make this meet a big success and encourage the committee in charge to further promote this much needed line of sport.

Indications point to a good entry in the big road race. It is over a splendid course and the best men in Peterboro and vicinity have entered. Smoke who won the Examiner cup will be seen again this year. Some critics say that he is the most natural runner ever seen in these parts. However he should be pushed to his limit if he wins this year as Charlie Thorpe who has come second to Smoke twice will enter again this year and should make a fine showing. There are other men entering, their ability is not known at present among them will be Taylor who comes from the Chemong tribe. The race will start at Riverside and end there so that every one will need go to the park in order to see the finish as one mile will be run on the track.

Tug of War.

The international tug of war promises to be one of the big events and should cause lots of excitement among the different nationalities. Those expected to take part are teams representing English, Irish, Scotch, French, Indian, Italian.

School Relay Race.

The public school relay race will be a feature well worth seeing. Keen rivalry is being worked up among the teams representing the different schools. Every boy and girl in Peterboro should come out and cheer for their team.

Following are the events and time they will take place.

2.15—Peck, 100 yd. dash.

2.25—Huycke, 100 yd. dash. Peck high jump.

2.35—Eastwood, 100 yd. dash.

SUPPLIES FOR BELGIANS.

Nova Scotia's Ship Will Also Sail With Ontario's Contributions.

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—Within a few weeks a ship will sail from Canada bearing supplies contributed by citizens of the Dominion for the relief of the Belgians who have suffered in the war. The bulk of the material thus forwarded will be contributed by the provinces east of Ontario, and attention is now called to the necessity of collecting all intended supplies and putting them in the hands of the shippers. Word to this effect came from Nova Scotia to the Parliament Buildings last evening.

The message was written by Premier Murray, who stated that Nova Scotia had taken advanced steps in the way of relief for Belgium, and that the Admiralty had placed a ship at their disposal to leave on or about Oct. 23 for Antwerp.

Mr. Murray states that he will be glad to arrange space in the ship for the Ontario contribution. The railways have announced that they will carry supplies to Nova Scotia free of charge, and the shipping to Antwerp will also be provided gratis.

Campbellford Mill Has Plenty of Work

Campbellford, Oct. 9.—About 50 new employes, weavers and spinners have been recently added to the staff of the Trent Valley woollen mill, which is now running 24 hours a day. Orders from the government now on hand will keep the big mill humming for many months to come, even with the increased number of hands.

The Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, a well known New York clergyman, is very angry because a chauffeur's word is taken against his in an auto case.

Loss of Destroyer Admitted.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 9.—A telegram from Berlin says that the evening papers of the German capital announce that on the afternoon of Oct. 6 the German torpedo boat destroyer S126 was sunk by a British submarine and that nearly all the crew was saved.

The sinking of the German destroyer was announced by the British Admiralty Wednesday, but the designation of the craft was not given. The S126 was built in 1904-5 and was 210 feet in length. She carried three 4-pounders and three torpedo tubes. Her crew was fifty men.

SAID HE GOT THE WRONG ONE

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 9.—That Pte. Frank Hartley, after the tragedy on the Welland Canal Wednesday night, admitted killing Pte. Burgoyne, and stated afterwards that he "got the wrong one," was evidence given by Chief of Police Greene at the inquest last night. The "other one" apparently was Sergt. Burgoyne, brother of the victim, who a few moments previous to the shooting had sent Hartley to his tent because he answered the roll call late and was improperly dressed.

According to the evidence of several eye-witnesses last night, Hartley later left the tent, complaining of Sergt. Burgoyne's treatment of him, and saying that the non-com. was not treating him right. The deceased, "Teddy" Burgoyne, overhearing the remarks of Hartley, denied that his brother had a pick on him. Next came a boast from the prisoner that he was an Englishman and he could lick anybody on the canal. "Teddy" replied that he was a Canadian and that he was proud of it. "I'll shoot you," remarked Hartley to the deceased, to which Burgoyne, drawing himself up to "attention," with his hands in the pockets of the sweater coat which he wore, said: "Shoot."

H. WEBB CHAMBERLAIN

Various ways and means are being undertaken in Canada to swell the war fund but perhaps the most novel yet attempted is that of Mr. H. Webb Chamberlain, who appears at the Grand Opera House all next week. Before his season openen he and his manager, Mr. Ivan Wickens, decided to give ten per cent. of their profits of the opening night to aid the wives and children of our local brave volunteers who have gone to the front. Mr. Chamberlain is on the executive committee of the American-Canadian Society with headquarters at Toronto and this society has been doing wonderful work in raising money for the war fund. During his engagement here next week popular prices, 10, 20 and 30 cents will rule and the opening performance, The Match-Maker, will occur on Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. The plays and vaudeville will be changed nightly.

PLANTING AND CARE OF SHADE TREES.

A bulletin entitled "The Planting and Care of Shade Trees" has just been issued by the Central Experimental Farm.

This publication, which has been prepared by Mr. F. E. Buck, B.S.A., Assistant to the Dominion Horticulturist, contains practical directions and advice in the selection of shade trees, their planting, transplanting and subsequent treatment and care, with notes on the principal injuries and unfavourable conditions to which shade trees are subjected, especially in towns and cities. Lists of varieties suitable for street and home planting are also given.

This bulletin is No. 19 of the Second Series of the Central Experimental Farm, a copy of which will be mailed to those to whom the information is likely to be useful and who make application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

HOW SHIPS WERE SUNK

Defeat of Austrian War Vessels Described by British Officer

LONDON, Oct. 9.—An officer in the British Mediterranean squadron writes to The Times as follows, describing recent fighting in the Adriatic Sea: We got wind of the Austrians blockading Antivari, so we planned an attack at 8.30 next morning. A cruiser squadron consisting of Frenchmen and British patrolled one side of the Adriatic during the night. We turned so that we might be off Antivari at 8.30 next morning, and the French squadron turned so as to be to the westward of us. We intended to look in at Durazzo on the way up, but we were late. We increased to full speed, but the Austrians sighted us coming from the southward, and at once steamed north. The French fleet were in such a position that as the enemy went northward they ran right into the arms of a huge fleet.

The Austrians were very inferior, having only two small cruisers, four destroyers and certain heavy ships. We opened fire, and the destroyers sank immediately. The enemy's cruisers returned the fire, but in about three minutes both ships caught fire, and were a burned mass. Suddenly there was a huge mass of dense, black smoke, followed by an explosion. The ships could be seen with their bows at right angles to the water. In less than a second both ships sank with all bands. Cheers went up from the deck. We did not open fire, but followed closely in the rear, and then turned southwards, steaming out at full speed."

THE STOLID ENGLISH

How the People of Four Nations Behave in War Crisis.

Here is the interesting narrative of a tourist who had to journey through four countries after the Austrian declaration of war upon Servia. It shows the extraordinary contrast between the English and the continental attitude in the grave crisis which has developed into general war.

"On Monday, July 27, we tried to enter the Parliament building in Vienna, but they were closed to visitors owing to the war. All newspaper offices had large crowds outside reading the telegrams posted up and waiting for more. Extra leaflets with the latest news were issued in thousands every hour or so. By evening the situation had become much graver. Mobilization was to begin on the morrow and only one train, starting at 7.55 a.m., was guaranteed for Vienna.

"By 6.30 a.m. on the following morning, the first day of the mobilization, we were in a cab on the way to the station. We saw many soldiers on their way, too, accompanied by their families.

"Over touching parting between sad-eyed pale men, weeping women and dazed children, I will draw a veil. The departure of individuals on their way to the various headquarters presents a very different sight from a regiment with a band and cheering crowds. The agonised farewells brought home one of the appalling sides of war in a way that perhaps is rare.

"I talked with some tourists on the train. They would not believe that the situation was very grave and considered the station scenes sentimentally foolish. No wonder accounts of affairs vary! Heart-rending partings occurred at all the stoppages on the line. All bridges were guarded by soldiers.

"Berlin station was a pandemonium of shouting, struggling, gesticulating masses of people who thronged every part. No porters were to be had. Woe to those who were unable to carry heavy hand luggage, or who had registered luggage. Amongst other experiences, we were all turned out of the train at the Dutch frontier, and had to get into a Dutch train. Rumors of non-starting boats did not add to our peace of mind.

"Endless illustrations of folly and thoughtlessness occurred. One was that practically everyone except ourselves had omitted to bring provisions for the journey; another was of people who had left England only a week ago with things in the state they were, and then regretting waste of tickets, money, time, etc. We reached Rotterdam shortly after noon on Sunday. The town was swarming with Dutch soldiers, mostly drunk—a disgusting sight, and a great contrast to the Austrian, Hungarian and German men. The bank was crowded with the usual withdrawers of money. The money exchange bureau would give nothing but paper money, and the shops would sell nothing for paper. This threw travelers into endless difficulties. We overcame them by first eating our lunch at a restaurant, and then proffering paper in payment. It was that or nothing so it was accepted, and we got our coin as change.

"About 1.30 p.m. on Sunday we reached Liverpool street station, London. Where were the excited crowds seizing newspapers and discussing war? We saw only Bank-Holiday-makers reading novelettes! The contrast was extraordinary. Truly, the English are a strange nation!"

ACETYLENE GAS

Carbide of Calcium, Which Produces it, and an Accident.

The immense production at Niagara falls of carbide of calcium, the curious artificial stone which when bathed in water gives off acetylene gas, recalls that this substance was first manufactured in America by accident through the metallurgical operations of T. L. Wilson, near a small stream in North Carolina.

While using limestone and salt in smelting he noticed among the melted slag which day by day ran nearer to the brink of the little stream a grayish-white substance new in his experience, but thought little of it until one day the molten slag overhung the water and began to flow into it. Then suddenly a bright white flame burst out of the molten mass and enveloped it for some time.

He drew from the dry slag some of the strange material and touched a match to it, but without result. Then he poured some water upon it, and at the next trial the liberated acetylene gas broke into flame.

Thus in 1892 accident discovered a practicable way of producing that acetylene gas first discovered in England in 1836 by Edmund Day while experimenting with potassium tartrate and charcoal. It remained, however, for the intense heat of the hydroelectrical furnaces of Niagara to turn out this wonderful stone in almost perfect purity and immense quantities.—National Magazine.

Can You Keep a Secret?

"Can you keep a secret?" is a very common question, usually put by a person who doesn't want to. Now you will reflect that a man going about his own business with several other people's secrets in his brain pockets is pretty certain to pull one of them out inadvertently. For, of course, other people's secrets are of no great importance. So when the question comes, "Can you keep a secret?" the answer should be: "No. Can you?"—London Chronicle.

THE PROPHECY OF MAYENCE

Famous Prediction of 1854 Comes True in 1914.

There is in Germany a famous prophecy. It is called "The Prophecy of Mayence," and dates from 1854. It comprises eighteen verses of prediction, of which the first nine have been fulfilled in the most remarkable manner. Here are the verses:

1. When the little people of the Oder shall feel themselves strong enough to shake off the yoke of their protector and when the barley is sprouting from the ears their King William shall march against Austria.

2. They will have victory upon victory up to the gates of Vienna, but a word from the Great Emperor of the West shall make the heroes tremble on the field of victory, and the barley shall not be gathered in until he has signed the peace, shaken off the yoke and returned triumphantly to his country.

3. But at the gathering in of the fourth barley and that of the oats a dreadful sound of war shall call the harvesters to arms. A formidable army, followed by an extraordinary number of engines of war that hell alone could have invented, shall start towards the West.

4. Woe to thee, great nation, woe to you who have abandoned the rights divine and human.

The God of battles has forsaken you; who will succour you?

5. Napoleon III., mocking his adversary at first, shall soon turn back towards the "Cheme-Populeux," where he shall disappear never to reappear.

6. In spite of the heroic resistance of France, a multitude of soldiers, blue, yellow, yellow and black, shall scatter themselves over a great part of France.

7. Alsace and Lorraine shall be carried away from France for a period and half a period.

8. The French shall only take courage again as against each other.

9. Woe to thee, great city, woe to thee, city of vice! Fire and sword shall succeed fire and famine.

10. Courage, faithful souls, the reign of the dark shadow shall not have time to execute all its schemes.

11. But the time of mercy approaches. A prince of the nation is in your midst.

12. It is the man of salvation, the wise, the invincible, he shall count his enterprises by his victories.

13. He shall drive out the enemy of France, he shall march to victory on victory until the day of divine justice.

14. That day, he shall command seven kinds of soldiers, against three to the quarter of Bouleaux between Ham, Woerl and Paderborn.

15. Woe to thee, people of the North, thy seventh generation shall answer for all thy crimes. Woe to thee, people of the East, thou shalt spread afar the cries of affliction and innocent blood. Never shall such a army be seen.

16. Three days the sun shall rise upwards on the heads of the combatants without being seen through the clouds of smoke.

17. Then the commander shall get the victory; two of his enemies shall be annihilated, the remainder of the three shall fly towards the extreme East.

18. William, the second of the name, shall be the last King of Prussia. He shall have no other successor save a King of Poland, a King of Hanover, and a King of Saxony.

All the first part of this prophecy up to the ninth verse, inclusive, is verified by the war of 1866, then by that of 1870, and then by the Commune of 1871. Here are the last nine verses, paraphrased and with the interpretations of the symbolic terms:

10. Courage, French patriots, Germany cannot carry out its schemes of supremacy.

11. The time of retaliation approaches. The Tsar shall come in the midst of you to seal the alliance.

12. That is the man of salvation.

13. He shall chase the enemy of France, he shall conquer Germany until it is completely destroyed.

14. The last battle on the field of Bouleaux, near to Paderborn, in Westphalia, shall reunite seven allied peoples (French, Belgians, English, Dutch, Rusisans, Japanese, and Servians) against three (Germans, Austrians and Hungarians).

15. Woe to thee, Prussia, thy seventh generation shall answer for the wars thou hast made upon all the people. (Seven generations make 30 years plus 7—210 years. The realm of Prussia dates from 1713. The seventh generation is, then, living between 1893 and 1923.) Woe to thee, Austria! Never such a battle shall have taken place.

16. It shall last three days in the smoke of the conflagration.

17.—Finally Prussia and Austria shall be annihilated. Hungary shall fly towards the extreme east (of Europe).

18. William II. shall be the last King of Prussia. Germany and Austria shall form three realms: Poland, Hanover and Saxony.

The British army is at present engaged in assisting the Prophecy of Mayence to a triumphal fulfilment.

Germany is away ahead of France in culture, and to prove it can shoot a crowd of Red Cross nurses before France is awake in the morning.

If the Bug-House Association awards Iron Crosses for deeds of valor with the fountain pen, Henri von Bourassa and George Clemenceau are sure to get decorated.

The Lake Shore to Toronto

A signal feat in modern railway enterprise was achieved when the new Lake Shore line of the Canadian Pacific was completed, thus practically "double-tracking" the company's route between Montreal and Toronto, the Dominion's two great centres in population, industry, commerce and trade. The Lake Shore line cost for construction $2,000,000 and was opened for passenger and freight traffic in June, 1914.

Prior to that date the company's main line was double-tracked only as far as Glen Tay, 16 miles below Smith Falls. From Glen Tay to Toronto, a distance of 298 miles, the company's main line was single-tracked. It required only time and money to complete, by a parallel line, double tracking between these two points. Why was it not done?

Because if it had been done, the Canadian Pacific would have had no connections with several of the most thriving of the minor Ontario towns and cities between Perth (four miles above Glen Tay), and Toronto. Accordingly, with an eye to the value of direct connections with these minor centres of industry, commerce and trade, the company wisely planned and constructed their new Lake Shore line.

This line, which has beautiful vistas of natural scenery all along the route, begins properly at Glen Tay, runs, first, southwest through a score of pretty villages, in a fertile territory, to the nestling, picturesque town of Belleville; then, turning southeast, continues through a series of the most active and prosperous Lake Ontario towns and cities, such as Trenton, Colborne, Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa and Whitby, joining the main line again at Agincourt, 15 miles from Toronto, the Queen City of Canada.

The paramount importance of the new Lake Shore line will be realized when it is understood that the epithet "new" is meant to apply not solely to the section between Glen Tay and Agincourt. Rather, the idea is that the practical double-tracking of the Canadian Pacific's route between Montreal and Toronto, and between the other "live" towns and cities on Lake Ontario, constitutes, virtually, a complete alternate route, with grades lower than the old line, thus enabling the company to run passenger and freight trains over the new line more expeditiously and more cheaply for the public. As an instance of this, the new route avoids the inconvenience of the old bus transfers, which long obtained at Belleville, Trenton, Colborne, Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa, Whitby and elsewhere.

In short, the Lake Shore line from Montreal to Toronto, including, as it does, the chief thriving Lake Ontario towns and cities, will not only create, as it already has done, new business, but also will facilitate the handling of the enormous freight and passenger traffic that passes through this enlarged territory. To the company the Lake Shore line means efficiency in service; to the captains of business, industry and trade, expeditious handling of exports and imports; and to the travelling public unexampled accommodation, comfort and economy.

War's Intoxication

Medical Man's Interesting, if Unconvincing, Argument.

"War," says a writer in a medical journal, "belongs in the category of stimulants or narcotics, to the number of which civilized man has constantly added to relax the strain and confer temporary oblivion of actual existence. It is indeed a question worthy of debate whether the abstinence from alcohol and tobacco now enforced in many places for economic reasons, together with the adoption of merciless 'speeding-up' processes, has not so increased nervous disequilibrium as to render a welcome relief. Force upon men unnatural speed and concentration and take away their accustomed sedatives and you drive them to a more potent lethean stream.

"Nothing can compare to the glorious intoxication of war in the mind of the healthy adult at his best between the ages of 18 and 30 years; middle age, like night, brings counsel. The normal young man fights and makes love, both occupations deplored and sneered at by the older, whose tissues are hardening. War-like youth puts on its handsomest and most becoming raiment, takes along its most stirring music, heedlessly leaves property behind, to be made good by justifiable loot, kisses its sweetheart good-bye in sure anticipation of more or less willing loves among the enemy's womankind. Even his horse is said to sniff the battle afar off and laugh.

"Apart from the irresponsible excitement of war, there are the healthful open air life, the coarse, but wholesome food, the absence of any necessity for original thinking, all of which cause a superb euphoria. The chances of agonizing wounds, of death itself, are cheerfully accepted along with this tremendous joy of living.

"War is an irresistible temptation to man, still not quite civilized. Some day, perhaps, a boy caught playing at 'war' will be treated like one who should to-day be caught torturing a dumb animal; that will be a long time hence, when not only a new kind of education will be universal, but there will be comparatively fewer and wiser people. A scientifically regulated birth rate may furnish a world of population that has had all childhood's rights and privileges and is, consequently, strong physically and self-controlled mentally. Such a population may well believe that it is too good merely to furnish food for powder."

ZEPPELINS HAVE A BOMB CAGE

The method used by Zeppelin airships in dropping bombs has been described by an English refugee who has arrived in London from Belgium. The dirigible hovers over its objective at a sufficient altitude to keep it out of range of the enemy's guns. At the same time, to get a better aim, it lowers a steel cage attached to a steel wire rope 2,000 or 3,000 feet long.

This cage is divided into compartments, and it carries one man, whose duty it is to throw down the bombs. The cage is sufficiently strong to make rifle fire against it ineffective, and because of its small size and the fact that it is kept constantly in motion it is very difficult for heavy guns to hit it.

Exercise and Eating

Remember That a Tired Stomach is a Weak Stomach.

A good dinner at night is necessary for those whose pleasure or work keeps them up very late. But for ordinary folk, who dine at 6 or 7 and go to bed about 10:30, only a light, wholesome repast should be taken at the end of the day, when muscles or nerves are more or less exhausted, says a physician.

A "tired stomach is a weak stomach" is a golden rule to remember. Yet how often one hears people say: "I've been rushing about all day, and am tired to death. I must have a big meal to make up for it!" You may put the big meal into the stomach, but you cannot make the stomach digest it.

A belief lives strong in the hearts and minds of the majority of mankind, including persons of weak digestion, that a quick brisk walk taken before a meal gets up an appetite and helps the stomach digest the food. Now, this is exactly what it doesn't do. Exercise spreads the blood through the body. The old fashioned midday dinner is not a bad thing.—Washington Star.

Holy Cities.

Allahabad is the holy city of the Indian Mohammedans, Benares is the holy city of the Hindus, while Cusco is that of the ancient Incas. Jerusalem is the holy city of the Jews and Christians. Mecca, Medina and Damascus have first place in the affections of the Mohammedans. Moscow and Kiev are the holy cities of the Russians.

A LESSON IN GEOGRAPHY

Do You Know How Far East South America's West Coast Is?

In his book, the "Conquest of the Tropics," Frederick Upham Adams calls attention to some little known geographical facts:

Most of us picture Havana as nearly south of New York, when in fact it is about south of Detroit. A study of a map of the new world discloses the disconcerting fact that all of the west coast of South America is east of Detroit, and that most of it is hundreds of miles east of New York city. The truth of the matter is that we should call that continent "Southeast America."

I also made the astounding discovery that a considerable portion of South America lies north of the southerly sections of North America. When we set sail from Colon for Santa Marta, Colombia, we do not head south or southeast, we point our prow northeast. This is almost as puzzling as the other fact to the effect that Colon, the Caribbean port (the supposed east port), is twenty odd miles west of Panama City, which is on the Pacific and presumably west end of the canal. It is positively uncanny to look out of a window of the Tivoli hotel, in Panama City, and watch the sun rise squarely out of the Pacific ocean! Of course an accurate map justifies the sun in selecting the Pacific for rising rather than setting purposes, but it never seemed right or proper to me. Oceans should stay where they belong, and the Pacific has no business to twist itself to the east of Panama.

WAR IS BRINGING FOSTER'S BIG PLANS TO FULL FRUITION

Expansion of Canada's Trade Is Inevitable As Result of the Struggle in Europe.

Minister of Trade and Commerce Is Laboring to Secure Benefits for the Dominion.

When first news reached Canada of the outbreak of the long-dreaded European war, and one by one the stock markets of the world wavered and closed their doors, a pall settled over Canada. The country was just emerging from a period of financial stringency and trade depression and everybody was looking for good times when the wheat moved east. Then came the catastrophe and every hope was shattered. Factories shortened their staffs, or reduced wages or even closed their doors, building flagged and stopped, consumers began to save and retailers to retrench. For a few weeks the machine of commerce in Canada scarcely moved, and the noble army of pessimists had the field to themselves.

Then an idea dawned upon Canadians. It wasn't a new idea, but it came in a new form and its effect was as novel as it was dynamic. Here were men walking the streets looking for something to do, and there were people crying for commodities which were scarce because the ships carrying them had been held up on the high seas. Why not make the things here? That was the first form which the idea took. Then the notion expanded itself and took on new aspects. All over the world, non-combatant nations were in the same plight as Canada for lack of supplies—which Canada could give them.

WAR IN THE MARKET.

The great manufactory of many of these articles was no longer producing them, because she was busy in Europe seeking to satisfy her lust for power. Canada's soldiers were enlisting to fight her in the field. Why shouldn't Canada's workers fight her in the market?

SIR GEORGE FOSTER.

In Britain, too, men were walking the streets! Why shouldn't Canadians at home strike a blow for Empire by buying the products of the Old Land in preference to those of foreign countries?

It took some time for the idea to sink in. At first the talk was purely defensive, a matter of filling the home demand. Then it became an offensive movement and Canadians wakened to the realization that not only was a new map of Europe in the making, but a new era had come in the history of Canada. The war which at first seemed a complete disaster, was commercially the opportunity of centuries.

When manufacturers turned to the Government for guidance they found that the Government had been ahead of them. The men with their fingers on the pulse of Canadian commerce had foreseen the change and were preparing for it. A miracle had accomplished what they expected only long years of effort could accomplish.

FOSTER COMES INTO HIS OWN.

And, incidentally, one man at Ottawa came into his own. Sir George Foster scarcely expected and certainly never would have asked that his pet projects should come to fruition through a world disaster like the present war, but since it was so he took every advantage of the emergency.

That is why it is that newspaper readers these days find elbowed into obscure corners of their papers by more thrilling items from the front such items as the following:

"Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 13.—For the purpose of showing opportunities which Canadians have of capturing some of the trade which Germany has lost as a result of the war, the Trade and Commerce Department has issued an analysis of the trade of Brazil and the Argentine Republic. In 1912 Germany exported to the Argentine goods to the value of nearly $62,000,000, as compared with $116,000,000 from Great Britain and about $25,250,000 from Canada.

"Germany in the same year sent goods to the value of $160,000,000 to Brazil, Great Britain $235,000,000, and Canada $3,400,000. The opportunities for Canadians in Argentina and Brazil are in manufactured timber, canned goods, paper and wood pulp, manufactures of iron and steel, agricultural machinery, cement, furniture and preserved fish."

DEPARTMENT IS BUSY.

They form rather dry literature for the ordinary reader and are not to be compared in momentary interest with stories of the crash of battle, but long after Nish has dropped back into its former obscurity on the map of Europe Canadians will be reaping the benefit of those lists of figures.

Behind each of them is a bulletin of the Department of Trade and Commerce, telling the manufacturers of the Dominion what to send and how to send it. Behind the bulletin is a staff of clerks at Ottawa, working as they have probably never worked before, analyzing, comparing, getting out tables of foreign commercial operations and reducing them to intelligibility for the Canadian producer.

And behind the clerks—? Poetic justice could not have found a man in Canada to-day, so fully entitled to take charge of the harvesting as Sir George Eulas Foster. As far back as 1889—twenty-nine years ago—he went to the West Indies in the interests of Canada's markets, and initiated the movement which it was his lot to bring to a consummation two years ago. It was he also who, in 1892, at the first Intercolonial Conference in Ottawa moved the resolution in favor of Imperial Preference. In the years that followed, before the downfall of the Conservative Government—in which he was at first, Minister of Marine and Fisheries and later Minister of Finance, Sir George—then Hon. Mr. Foster — traveled to Great Britain at the invitation of the late Joseph Chamberlain, and spoke from one end of the country to the other in behalf of Imperial trade preference and the commercial solidarity of the Empire.

IN OPPOSITION.

For thirteen years after the Laurier victory of 1896, Sir George sat in the Opposition, hammering away at his plans for the improvement of finance and trade and commerce, and the return of the Borden Government in 1911 found him again in the administration, in charge of the work he knew so well.

His first work was a general reorganization of the Trade Commissioners' service. He rearranged the Paris office for the extension of commerce with France, he appointed Richard Grigg British Trade Commissioner to Canada, to supervise the entire work of collecting facts and developing trade. Then he arranged for one of the most important moves in the history of Canadian commerce. After conference with Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, he had the benefits of Britain's great consular service thrown open to Canadian manufacturers. He worked all the summer of 1912 on the scheme, and when it was put into operation it wrought a revolution in Canada's relations with the world of trade.

By the arrangement the Canadian Department now receives copies of all British consular trade reports as soon as they are issued; Canadian firms may apply to British consuls for information concerning conditions and markets anywhere in the world; the British Foreign Office distributes information regarding Canadian goods to its agents for disseminaton in their respective countries; Canadian Trade Commissioners may apply to consuls for aid and advice; and representatives of Canadian concerns may even get office room at the British consulates abroad.

TRADE WITH INDIES.

The year of 1912 was a big one for Sir George Foster. It marked the fruition of his plans for trade with the West Indies. Early in the year he announced plans for a general improvement of trade with the islands by means of better steamship service and cheaper cable rates. That spring there met at Ottawa a conference of representatives of the colonies interested, and the result was an agreement which had effect of creating a preference amounting to roughly 20 per cent. on over fifty items of exchange. There was vigorous opposition from New York and American ports, which scared some of the West Indian Governments, but the Canadian Government extended to all alike whether reciprocity was entered into or not, and the result is evident already in the export and import records at Ottawa.

On July 2nd in London, Hon. Mr. Foster was the guest of honor at a banquet given by the West Indies' committee, in token of the advance in Imperial union, which he had been chiefly instrumental in bringing about.

It was in 1912 also that the Royal Commission on Imperial Trade was created and Hon. Mr. Foster was named to represent Canada. In the same summer Mr. Foster, with the aid of W. Leonard Palmer, editor of the Financial News, brought to Canada sixty British business men and manufacturers, probably the most influential body of commercial and industrial men who ever came at one time to the Dominion, and for two months they investigated the resources of the country.

TRIP TO THE ANTIPODES.

Last year saw Mr. Foster's grand tour with the Royal Commission and his negotiations with the trans-Pacific countries for extension of trade. The commission's scope is broad. It includes the study of emigration problems, the investigation of the Empire's natural resources, an inquiry into the production, manufacture and distribution of articles of commerce and an investigation into varied trade conditions. In February 1913, Mr. Foster left for Australia with the Commissioners. They sat for eleven weeks in the antipodes and in the intervals of the session Mr. Foster carried on negotiations with the Australian Government for reciprocity. They were only a partial success and finally were dropped, but the new Australian Government seems likely to bring them to a successful issue. Canada's apostle of wider markets went on to the China ports and to Japan in quest of fields for the Dominion's goods and the result was the opening of many avenues of trade and the acquirement of a mass of facts for future reference.

The birthday honors of 1913 brought a K.C.M.G. to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, and Hon. George Eulas Foster became Sir George, a title to which Canadians have not yet quite accustomed themselves.

Neither are they quite used to the idea of Sir George Foster as engineer of Canada's commercial destiny. The public loves a fight and its habit has been to look upon the man who sits beside Premier Borden as artillery for big debates.

DREAM COMING TRUE.

In the months that are to follow they will learn to know the erstwhile critic of the treasury as the man who is making his dream of a quarter of a century, a living, vital fact in the affairs of Canada.

Germany, one of the greatest manufacturers in the world markets, is out of the field for some time to come. Last year she sent into Canada $14,214,547 dollars' worth of goods. This year she will not send a cent's worth. The millions of dollars she has taken from other countries will go into other pockgets, and if Sir George Foster can bring it about a large part of that will come to Canada.

Trade within the Empire has never had such an opportunity before. Time was when it was a sentimental ideal, a topic for debating societies. The public opinion that has been aroused by the war will make insistence upon British goods.

Canada's war has just begun and it bids fair to outlast the European one, but its result is certain.

HIS PAY STREAK

Story of a "Bad Man's Honor" in the Early Klondike Days.

That there is "so much good in the worst of us," is illustrated again by a story that Mr. William Ogilvie tells in his book, "Early Days on the Yukon." While he was making a survey in the Klondike region he had to take the affidavits of prospectors who desired to "locate."

Each man was obliged to take this oath as to his claim: "I solemnly swear that I have discovered therein a deposit of gold." I remember that a man once came to me to have his affidavit taken, who bore the reputation of being the toughest citizen of Dawson. I did not look for any conscientious scruples on his part. When his affidavit was written out I read it over to him. As soon as the words, "I have discovered therein a deposit of gold," were spoken, he stopped me sharply with the exclamation: "But I have not! I did not look for any."

"Then you cannot take this oath," I said.

He explained that he did not understand the requirements and thought he had only to stake the ground. He had about forty-eight hours in which to return to the claim, prospect it, find gold and complete the recording by making his affidavit. If he failed he might lose it altogether, for another party, knowing it was not recorded, had staked it.

He started immediately, reached the ground the next evening, after traveling all night, fed and tied up his dogs, gathered dried wood, built a fire, thawed the ice off the gravel, built another fire to thaw the gravel itself, washed all he had thawed and did not find a color.

He selected another place, thawed again, washed and found three small colors, unmistakably gold. He started back and reached Dawson about 11 at night, showed me the gold, made his oath and saved his title by an hour. He was "on the jump for forty-eight hours without rest and with very little nourishment. When it was all over he said, "Mr. Ogilvie, I am considered a hard case here, and there are more want to pass me than speak to me, yet I would not have taken that oath to save my claim, not for all the claims in the Klondike." And I believed him. It is poor ground indeed where there is not some pay streak.

Jupiter Is Peaceful.

A harmless planet was the innocent cause last night of quite a bit of anxiety to several of our citizens, who mistook it for an aeroplane, and thought the Germans were after us again. The gentleman who sighted it first, a bright light low down on the eastern horizon, watched it for a long time and saw it move slowly but steadily southward. But the almanac tells us that Jupiter is quite prominent these nights, just about the spot where the mysterious light was seen; and if you gaze steadily at a star for some time your eyes become strained, and the star appears to move. As Jupiter has not yet declared war, we feel that no danger from that source need be feared.—Owen Sound Advertiser.

Useful and Ornamental.

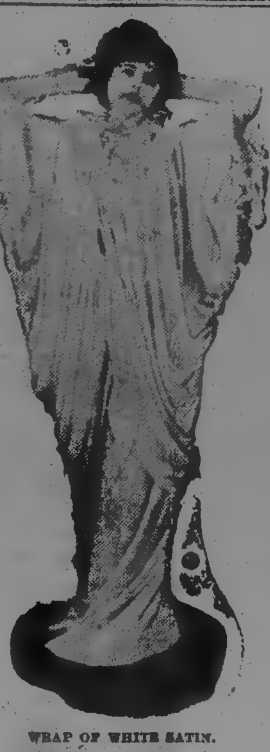
Walter Olheiser has discovered a new use for his car. On Monday morning it may be seen busily turning the Grand Union washing machine. This is a tip to the wives of the car-owners of town.—Teeswater News.

One-Fifth Went.

It is estimated that 20 per cent. of the adult male population of Edmonton, a city of 73,000, has enlisted for service in various branches of Great Britain's army and navy.

DAINTY EVENING WRAP.

Satin Garment to Wear Over the Popular Lightweight Costume.



WRAP OF WHITE SATIN.

This charming evening wrap is of white charmeuse, with frills of lace at the neck and sleeves. Lightweight wraps of this kind are useful to wear over the fluffy evening costumes which are now so popular. The net, lace or mousseline blouses of many of these gowns are so frail that the heavy velvets or brocades of other seasons would seriously injure them.

THE NEW SILHOUETTE.

It Is Made Up of a Combination of Straight Lines.

The first point of importance is the new costume silhouette, which makes or mars the entire creation.

The quickest way to get an idea of what this is is to draw a figure outline entirely in straight lines. First the collar, generally flaring in straight angles; then the coat or wrap, also flaring and falling in straight lines which terminate anywhere between knee and ankle; then the skirt, as straight and scant as trousers legs in effect. Elaborate dress varies this with looped drapery and long, sweeping folds, but even in these the new edict is apparent, and the keynote of the straight line marks the new from the old rounded "pegtop."

The next feature of importance is the great coming vogue of tailored styles. The smart woman will have many strictly tailored suits this fall, with a favor for blue serge in plain styles and for mixed fabrics or wool and silk for dress. Plain and striped fabrics will continue their present vogue, and plaids will hold a prominent place, especially large figures in dull colors.

An item of extreme importance is the coming use of braid in tailored models. All widths are used, from 1½ inches for binding to six or eight for bands, and there is a trend toward the use of plain mohair or silk. Narrower widths in parallel rows are well spoken of, but this is not as yet authenticated. Plain buttons are to form the finish of this style of trimming.

The two newest items of established favor are the wide and daring use of yellow, both as trimming and as fabric, and the use of sleeves of different fabric and color. There is a strong tendency toward the tight "glove" sleeve.

Dark colors will be favored for tailored costumes, with the almost equal favor of daring colors in the same class. And orange, mustard, pumpkin and tarnished gold will be seen in corduroy, broadcloth, the rough faced and pile fabrics. Black velvet is to be the first favorite as a finishing touch, but in black and dark colored costumes any brilliant color will be good. Almost invariably the neck is finished with white in some tailored collar effect.

GOOD DRESSING.

Neatness Is an Important Factor in Its Accomplishment.

Proper care of one's clothing plays an important part in good dressing, for a really well dressed woman is, first of all, neat. Not only are her clothes spotless, but every article is adjusted with infinite care as well, and the clothes in reserve are as well looked after as those in use.

No one may be considered well dressed who has a button off, a seam ripped or a spot in evidence. To deserve the title of well dressed there must be no gaping division of belt and skirt or shoes run over at the heels.

A systematic overhauling at stated periods of all clothing in use is absolutely necessary, and all clothing in reserve should be cleaned thoroughly before being put away.

After Blacking the Range.

Kerosene will clean your hands better than anything else after blacking a range or stove. Pour a little in the water, wash your hands in it, then wash them in tepid water and finally with plenty of soap and a stiff nailbrush in hot water. Finish up by rubbing the hands with lemon juice, rosewater or glycerin.

REASONS FOR SECRECY

The Censor is an Important Part of the Fighting Machine.

Perhaps one of the most striking things about the war so far has been the veil of secrecy thrown over the operations of the campaign, thanks to official censorship and the co-operation of the press. In no country has the silence been more significant or more useful than in Great Britain.

The supreme usefulness of this national silence was so apparent in connection with the despatch of the Expeditionary Force to France that the recent efforts in some quarters to secure a relaxation of the regulations respecting the publication of war news would cause surprise and even irritation were all the circumstances of the case not taken into consideration.

The British public is more than most communities in the world, jealous of the least infringement upon the liberties of the press and has grown up to rely absolutely upon the press for its daily news. At such a time of stress and excitement as that now existing this reliance and the hunger for news is intensified many fold. The fact must be borne in mind that the British Empire has not been engaged in a great European war for such a great number of years that the public is unaccustomed to restrictions on the news supplied to it by the press. And the public has been accustomed to have its news hot after the event, the wonderful progress in means of communication, railways, telegraphs, telephones and wireless, having enabled newspapers to serve their public with such promptitude as would never have been dreamt of a century ago.

It has to be remembered that this facilities in the way of communication which under normal conditions serve the press so well, are open to the spies of the enemy when they wish to communicate with their superiors, and consequently the precautions to be taken to prevent news of advantage to the enemy reaching him will have to be much greater and more careful and more rapid in their effects.

Newspapers are among the sources of information most carefully watched by the military intelligence authorities, the German cavalry, for instance being specially instructed that spies, patrols and outposts are to keep their eyes open for copies or fragments of an enemy's newspapers found anywhere and forward them at once to the nearest intelligence officer.

There are many instances of news which had been published in newspapers having led to disaster in the field.

"In a volume published not long ago entitled "The Bernstorff Papers," dealing among other things with the career of the Count Bernstorff, who was Prussian Minister in London in 1870, the son relates that the whole staff of the Embassy, during the earlier course of the French campaign, were almost exclusively engaged in collecting and appraising news from the seat of war and despatching it to Berlin, in order that it might be retransmitted to headquarters at the front.

The needs of a nation, particularly in war time, must override the needs of any parts of it; and necessary interference with the everyday occupation of any portion of the inhabitants of a country is justified by the fact that that country is at war—that for its own safety it has had to have recourse to brute force. In fact a state of war means the abrogation of all the ordinary amenities of life provided that abrogation is found necessary in the national interest.

C. R. BANKS

Peterborough, Ont., Oct. 1, 1914.

MR. W. H. HILL,
City.

Dear Sir:

I wish to thank you for the very prompt manner in which my claim was settled by the Fidelity and Casualty Co., of New York.

I have carried accident insurance with this Company for a number of years and have always found them and their representatives courteous at all times.

Regarding my recent claim, the claim papers were filled out and sent in on Sept. 29, 1914, and to-day I received a cheque for the full amount of the claim.

Again thanking you for the prompt manner in which this claim has been handled, I am,

Yours truly,
R. G. STURGEON.

No German editor is likely to announce the retreat of the Crown Prince's army unless he is carrying a nice large line of life insurance.

The German navy is about as useful to Germany as a fur coat in a rolling mill.

Having stolen a lot of stuff from a French chateau, the Crown Prince can add to his other honors by getting himself elected to the Burglars' Union.

The auditors haven't gone into the books carefully, but as near as they can judge, the war has given Herr Krupp about $30,000,000 worth of free advertising.

Fate has dealt harshly with the Crown Prince. He has a narrow chest and therefore but a limited area upon which to hang Iron Crosses. Perhaps the Kaiser will solve the difficulty by allowing him to hang them on his cavalry pants.

PILGRIM JOE

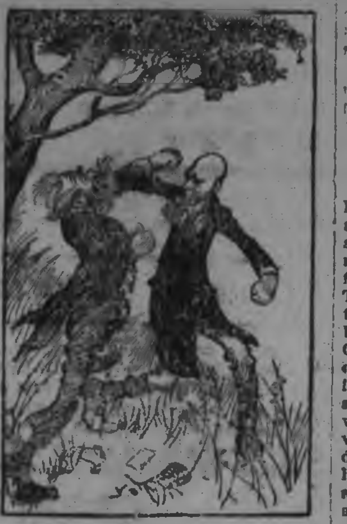
He Spends a Few Days in the Town of Tinker's Dam

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

As I was calmly restin' for the night in the town of Tinker's Dam I was suddenly and rudely awakened from sweet slumber by a small but choice band of patriots. They were patriots who lived in the town and had its best interests at heart, and they were headed by the mayor. When I had been hauled out of bed by the hair of the head and a rope tied around my neck his honor wanted to know if I had anything to say for the benefit of posterity.

"I hev," says I. "I wish to observe that in the midst of life we' ar' in death and that a hog who wouldn't eat wouldn't grow fat."



"I SWUNG WITH MY RIGHT."

"Are you goin' to confess before you die what you did with the hoss you stole?" he asks.

Then I realize that a mistake has been made and purseeds to orate as follers:

"Feller Bein's—It is with sorrer that I hev to inform you that no hangin' won't take place here tonight. The reason fur it is that the hoss thief has got fur, fur away, while I am a humble and bow backed pilgrim without guile in his heart. I arrived in this town this afternoon with a grasshopper in a bottle, sympathy fur my feller bein's in my heart and the possessor of an old hoss and wagon fur the takin' of tintypes at 10 cents a take."

Then the little band of patriots paused in their mad career to investigate, and they soon diskivered that I was humble and harmless and that they had narrowly escaped launchin' an innercent feller man into eternity.

Then the band of patriots slapped me on the back, called me old man and the right sort, and the balance of the night was spent in festivities that cheered, but did not inebriate. In the follerin' two days every man, woman and child in Tinker's Dam came down to my wagon to hev a pictur' took, and there was peace and harmony and no trust. When I finally set forth to pursue my way I was follered by the good wishes of all, and as I jogged along I fell to observe:

"It ain't that one man is better than another in this world, but it is knowin' when it is safe to pick up another man's hoss."

I had left Tinker's Dam a few miles behind me when a weary pilgrim stops to look me over.

"Hev ye got a misshun?" says he.

"I hev," says I. "I'm takin' tintypes at 10 cents a take. Mebbe you've got a misshun too?"

"Durn me if I hain't," says he as he peels off his ragged old coat and limbers up his arms. "My misshun is to take care of Israel J. Jones, who is down on his luck, and you jest git up and bump yerself outer this. This outfit jest suits me."

Then the old evil minded deceiver spat on his hands some more and sailed into me with all his fists and feet flying. He thought to carry me down with a rush, but I side stepped him and swung with my right, and he was as clay in the hands of the potter. It was my dooty to my feller man to toy with this old kuss on wheels, and accordingly I toyed—that is, I sat down on him and hammered him until it seemed to me that his future life would be as upright as his friends could hope for. He made objections, but he was in the minority. When the conflict had ceased and the frightened crows had returned to their roost I stood the old man on his feet and lifted him one with my boot and said:

"To him who hath shall be given even to more than he kin stow away in the refrigerator."

And then I booted him seven times in a vigorous but furgivin' speerit and materially aided him in his departure. The hour bein' noon and my appetite appealin', I gave the old hoss his oats and sat down to my own snack, and as I ate I softly hummed to myself and felt to exclaim:

"Peace is holy, and peace should rest upon all, but if the other feller won't hev peace then go in to lick him and don't let up till he hollers."

Last Word In Hospitals.

The recent addition to the General Hospital at Winnipeg, completed at a cost of $700,000, enables that institution to take a place in the front rank in the Dominion as one of the finest and most up-to-date of its kind. The addition has added 95 wards to the hospital, which practically doubles the capacity of the institution. One of the special features is the comprehensive telephone call system installed. On each corridor, for example, placed against a wall, is a box with glass panels, on the sides of which appear the number of each doctor. If a nurse requires a particular medical officer she simply presses a button, when a light immediately appears over his number, and in this way he gets into communication with that part of the hospital where he is required, or even outside if necessary. A similar signal system is in operation for the communication of patients with the staff. A swinging switch is suspended over each bed and when the patient requires a nurse he presses the button, when a red light appears over the door, and at the nurse's station; it is also relaid into the diet kitchen and the service room. The light cannot be turned off except at the bedside of the patient. A casual inspection of the whole building proves how the advance of science has been availed of to assist in the work of alleviating pain. Here is the home of the latest developments in the art of healing, and it needs but a short time to be spent in the X-ray department to note how alive the surgical staff are to the most recent discoveries in the operating room and the laboratory.

The Army Worm.

Now that the plague of the army worm in Ontario has passed the provincial crop report contains the following summary of the damage:—

When the presence of the army worm in some of the counties of the province was first reported much anxiety was expressed as to the outcome of the unexpected and dreaded visitation. The pest appeared in about a dozen counties, nearly always near a creek bed or other low-lying spots, but the injury in each instance was more or less purely local in range and result, as each outbreak was either soon controlled or it quickly ran itself out. Oat fields seemed to be the favorite feeding ground of the worms, and a considerable quantity of that grain had to be cut green to save it from devastation. In some quarters corn, barley, clover, and other crops were also attacked.

Condors in Chile.

The majestic condor is, air men excluded, the largest flying creature in the world. Swift and extraordinarily strong of wing, it figures in the Chilean national arms as a symbol of strength. The following is one of the native devices for killing it:

The hunter, having covered himself with the skin of a newly slain ox, would lie on his back on the ground, while his companion would hide himself not far away. Down would swoop the condor to feast upon the carcass, but directly the claws touched the body they were seized from within the oxskin by strong gloved hands that held the bird a prisoner. Then the partner would break cover and slay the captive with what Chaucer would have called "a yerde smerck" from a club.—"Chile—Its Land and People."

VACATION DAYS.

SCHOOL days are over!
  Isn't it grand?
Summer vacation
  Now is at hand.
Text books to Guinea
  Now we may toss.
Teacher no longer
  Rules us as boss.

Schools may be useful—
  Mother knows best—
Say, but vacation
  Isn't a pest.
All the excitement
  Schools can supply—
Well, you can put it
  Right in your eye.

Bully vacation!
  Is it a hit?
Do we regret it
  Schooltime has quit?
Not if you'll let us
  Speak for the gang.
Passing occasions
  Never a pang.

Fold up the schoolbooks.
  Put them away.
This is vacation.
  Wish it would stay.
Kiss education
  Fondly goodby.
Three strikes, there, teacher!
  Out on a fly!

Relief For the Thirsty.

A tall, angular man who looked as though he had fallen from grace and broken several resolutions in the full wandered into a prohibition town and accosted a citizen with a friendly look on his face.

"Say, boss," he said in a low, confidential whisper, "can you tell me where I can get a drink?"

"Certainly," said the man. "You see that house over yonder with the green blinds?"

"Yes."

"Well, you walk over that way, and if no policeman is in sight dodge down the alley, and at the back of the house is a gate. Open that gate."

"Yes."

"And you will find a fine pump."

Hard Work.

"How does he earn his living?"

"By being good to his father."

"Would you call that earning his living?"

"Yes."

"Don't see how."

"You probably don't know the old man."

Same Limitations.

"Do you think women should vote?"

"No; they never could understand the tariff question."

"Well, what of it?"

"It is enough to have the men voters not understand it."

Old Duffer.

Work is good for boys, they say.
  Doubtless that is true.
Glad, though, aren't you, tell me, pray,
  That it don't mean you?

Guest Room Supplies.

Nothing is more disconcerting to guests than a guest room that is not well furnished. Of course every one is supposed to carry his own toilet articles with him, excepting the chance or unexpected visitor who comes unprepared.

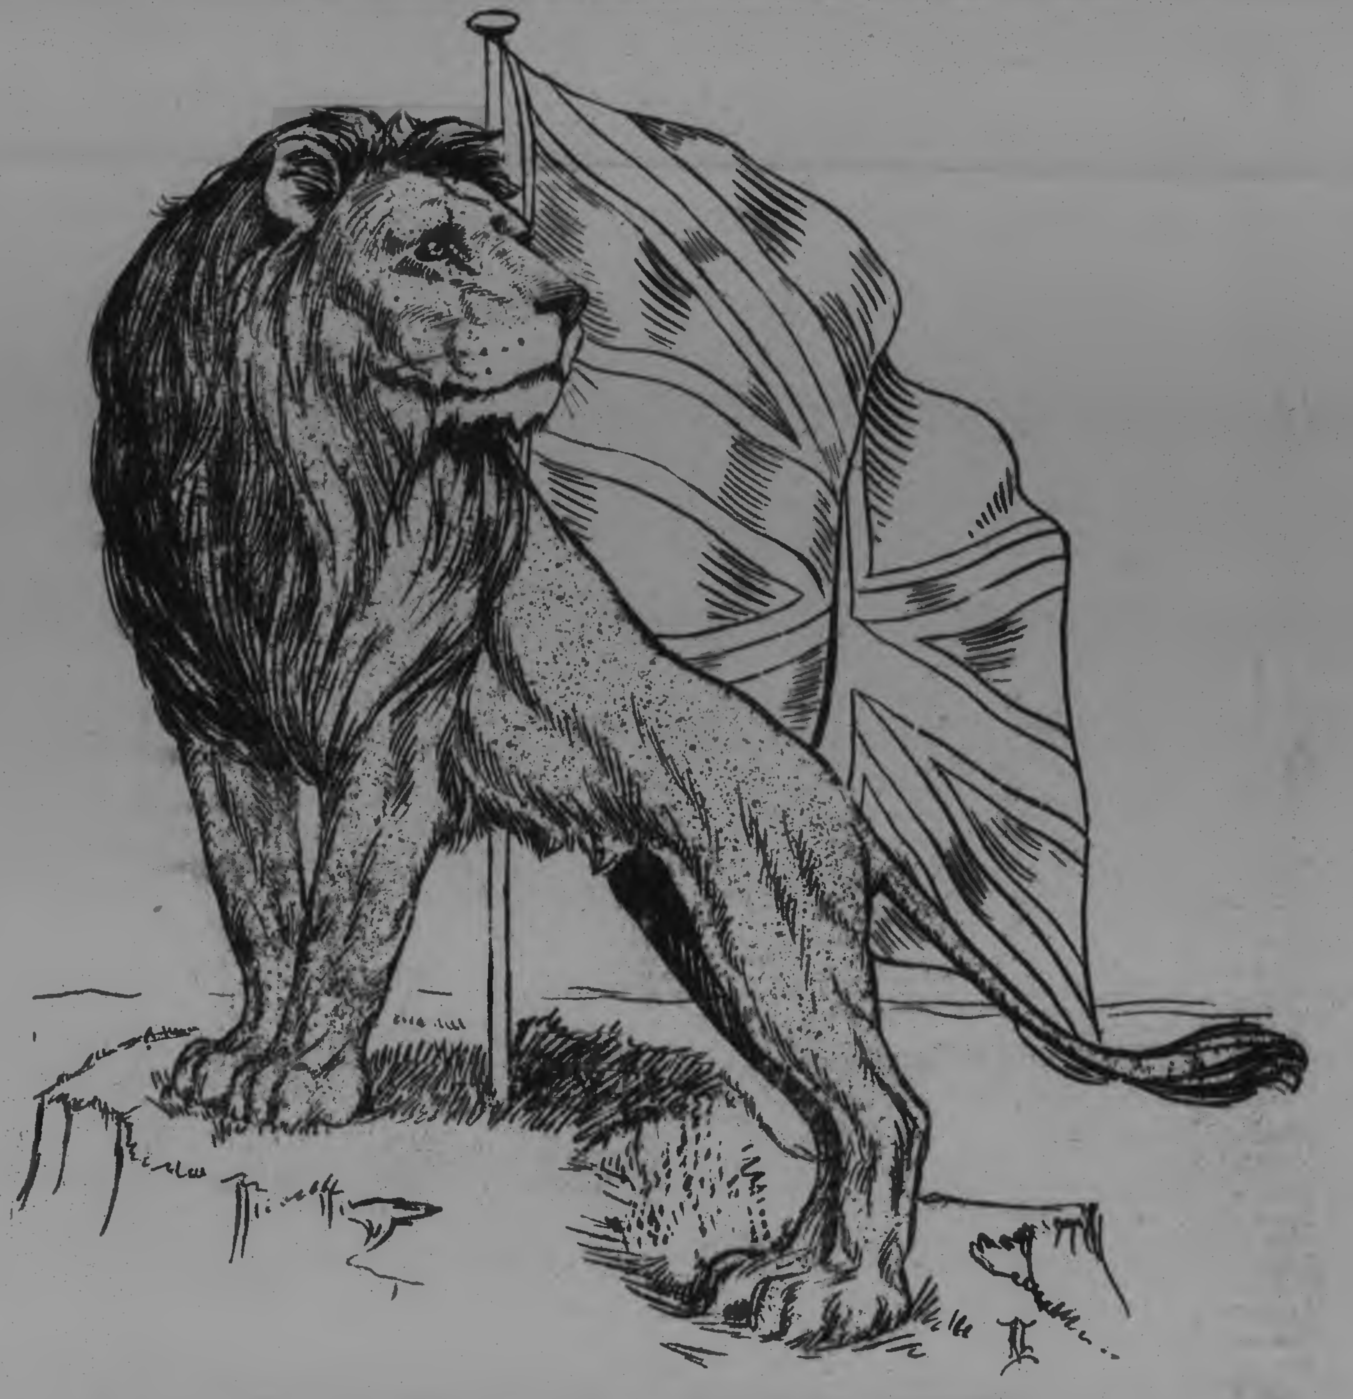
But, equally, of course, the hostess should not take individual toilet articles for granted, and she should if possible furnish her pretty guest room dressing table with an adequate supply. Bone, celluloid or ivory, in white, is the best material for these articles, for any of these substances can be readily cleaned.

A simple light for the guest room is an electric bulb supported by a glass candlestick, fourteen inches high and shaded by a fringe trimmed, cretonne shade.

Indian Lawn Party.

Should the hostess who is giving a garden party wish to emulate the noble red man the lawn may be temporarily transformed into a miniature Indian encampment. A near Indian tepee, looking enough like the real thing to deceive any ordinary being, can be purchased ready to set up, and in this—or from it—the refreshments may be served.

Navajo blankets, Indian baskets and pottery, papoose slings, tomahawks of papier mache, pieces of wampum and a pipe of peace are among the characteristic decorations for an Indian lawn party, while souvenirs of birch bark will prove acceptable to the guests.



Ready and able, now as ever, to keep the flag masthead high.

GUARDING THE DIAMONDS.

Thousands of Miles of Barbed Wire Inclose Kimberley's Mines.

Machinery and barbed wire have supplanted the rude methods of breaking up diamond bearing blue earth and protecting the valuable finds employed twenty years ago in the South African diamond mines.

The depths of the strange, crater shaped hole in which the peculiar diamond bearing earth is confined are now penetrated by shafts, reaching hundreds of feet down into the earth, with forty foot levels. The broken earth is removed in closed trucks to the surface, where, after a season of exposure to sun and atmosphere strewn on the ground, it is hauled to the mills.

Here pulsators finally locate the diamonds on grease covered inclined tables, to which the diamonds adhere, while loose sand, earth and gravel are washed away by water.

Acres of ground covered by broken earth brought up from the mines contain possibly millions of dollars' worth of gems, and these treasure troves are protected by high fences of barbed wire, with intricate arrangements at the corners and at the gates. About 4,000 miles of wire are used in the defenses about the Kimberley mines.—New York Press.

Work That Blinds.

Many of the workmen in the Venetian glass factories begin to lose their sight after they have passed their fortieth year and soon become totally blind. This is caused by the excessive heat and also by the glare of the flames from the glass furnaces.

The unfortunate thing about good resolutions is that they are so often made too late.

A NOTED RAILWAY COUNSEL.

Z. A. Lash, K.C., Chief Legal Light For the C. N. R.

Mr. Zebulon Alton Lash, K.C., whose name was mentioned so frequently in connection with those of Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann in the recent Parliamentary debates on the Canadian Northern Railway agreement, is one of the leading lawyers of Toronto and has a national reputation both as a pleader and as counsel. He is credited with having drafted the agreement between Mackenzie and Mann and the Dominion Government and he certainly has exercised great influence over the policy of the big railway firm. Not only has he been for years chief counsel for the Canadian Northern Railway, but he is vice-president of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway, vice-president of the Canadian Northern Railway, and one of the promoters and a director of Mackenzie, Mann & Co., Ltd., as well as being connected with many other concerns. It will be seen that Mr. Lash's interests are practically identical with those of the two railway knights. He gave $10,000 towards the building of the Toronto General Hospital and $5,000 to the Toronto Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Lash was born in Newfoundland and educated there. Having been called to the Bar of Ontario he practiced for eight years in Toronto, and was for some years lecturer and examiner in commercial and criminal law to the Law Society of Ontario. Later he was appointed Deputy Minister of Justice at Ottawa and was counsel for the Dominion Government before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the Mercer escheat case. He resigned his appointment under the Government to resume practice at the Bar at the invitation of the Messrs. Blake, who admitted him a member of their firm. Mr. Lash has the reputation of being one of the most finished elocutionists of the Canadian Bar, the modulations of his voice being always pleasing and his delivery and general style most effective. This is perhaps not to be wondered at, for during the whole of his active life he has made a hobby of reciting. When a younger man he often delighted his friends with selections from Shakespeare, Dickens, and Sir Walter Scott. Of later years he prefers more modern authors. Many a fashionable social gathering in Toronto has been made to stand out in the memory of those attending by reason of Mr. Lash's contribution towards the amusement of the evening.

Mr. Lash is chairman of the Canadian National League and author of "A Treatise on Vice-Admiralty in connection with the jurisdiction of the Maritime Court of Ontario" and of various articles contributed to the reviews. Mrs. Lash was the daughter of the late Judge Miller, of Milton, Ont.

Sun Baths For the Hair.

In some cases the scalp becomes extremely dry and the hair wiry and brittle when exposed to the salt air. It is then necessary to use a little oil to replace the natural oil.

While the sun has an ill effect upon wet hair (salt water) it is very beneficial when the hair is dry. So while at the seashore a daily sun bath will be good.

Take off the cap, shake out the hair and let it float in the breeze, running the fingers through so the hair roots may be benefited by the air, sun and ventilation.

This treatment if persevered in will be found to work wonders and incidently mean a saving of time and money, for professional treatment will be entirely unnecessary upon the return home.

GERMAN PLAN OF CAMPAIGN AGAINST FRANCE FORECASTED

One person who has not been greatly surprised by the development of the campaign in Northern France, it may be guessed, is Field Marshall Sir John French. The Fortnightly Review for September, 1911, contained a remarkable article entitled, "The German Plan of Campaign Against France," by a writer who was content to sign himself "Y." It was an open secret in London at the time that "Y." was no other than Sir John French, the British General who today, three years after the appearance of the article, is leading the largest single British Army which has ever gone abroad in a struggle to frustrate "The German plan of campaign against France." The article is an extraordinary accurate prophecy of what so far has happened without the slightest parade of possessing unusual information, in an impressively business-like manner, the soldier-author stated that there would be little fighting of importance in Southern Alsace; that Germany would violate the neutrality of Belgium and Luxemburg; that Liege might give the Germans some trouble, but that Namur was a weaker position; that the Germans would try to mass a great army on the Aisne; that the French armies would do well to fall back to Rheims and Chalon. He even dropped some hints as to certain "new theories for the capture of fortified places" entertained by the Germans. He made it clear that Germany had been preparing for fifteen years to violate the neutrality of Belgium and Luxemburg, the evidence being the network of railways constructed opposite the corner of Belgium originally selected as the scene of the German march across. The only thing that is not foretold is the wide westward extension of the German sweep, which took their right wing right through central Belgium and into France at Lille; it is to be remembered that the article was written three years ago.

A further feature of the article is the information which it gives as to lines of advance across the frontier. Readers who have good war-maps after reading the article can mark on them the routes along which the tide of invasion will ebb and flow.

Following are extracts from the article:—

The German move in Morocco has at least compelled the public to recognize the possibility of war at an early date between France and Germany.

A Franco-German war, becoming twenty-four hours after its opening a general European war, must then be recognized as a possibility of the near future. The purpose of this article is not to deal with any of the side issues or incidental contingencies, but to give a sufficient account of the official German plan of campaign against France, and by so doing to contribute perhaps towards its being baffled.

The main German idea upon which the plan has been formed is that France must be seriously damaged in the first three weeks of the war, so that Germany may find herself in the position of victor in the first round before England and Russia have entered the field. It is considered that the effect of serious French defeats would do to deter England from landing troops on the Continent, and to induce Russia to conceive that she was doing all she need for her damaged ally by waging a defensive on the Vistula. The German "not d'ordre" on the commencement of hostilities, which are to precede the formal declaration of war, will be at all cost to get well established on French soil, and concentrate as large an army as possible behind, "that is to say west of, the line of the Vosges, so as to fight a decisive battle somewhere in the neighborhood of Rheims or Chalons.

There was a time when it was thought that the chances of a direct attack on the line of the Vosges were not inconsiderable, and that weak points might be found between Belfort and Verdun. But this view is now held in only a modified degree, for it is considered that that best chance of making the frontal attack a success will be by executing a disconcerting and menacing offensive movement through the comparatively open country between Verdun and Sedan. All the French plans being based on the concentration of the national forces at Neufchateau, behind Toul, one of the objects of the German strategists has been to seek a line of attack which would evade that base of concentration, render it inapplicable to the situation created by their strategy, and embarass the French to devise another in time.

With this end in view the Germans have for the last fifteen years been making the necessary preparations to secure that broadened front for their advance which is essential for the accomplishment of their purpose, and these preparations are now practically completed. The line of the Vosges is not merely exceedingly formidable as a fortified position, but it is also exceedingly narrow. From Belfort to Verdun, the two extremities, is no more than 145 miles, and although Belfort might be turned by the violation of Swiss territory, the invading army could not operate against Lyons, which would take time, and exercise little or no war. It is not safe to assume anything too positively in a problem which must become modified by fresh factors from time to time, but unless Austria can be induced to carry out an offensive movement through Porrentury (a town in Switzerland near Basle) and the Rhone Valley, Germany will stand on the defensive in South Alsace.

In any case, there is no necessity for any overwhelming anxiety on the part of the French authorities with regard to what may happen South of Belfort. Here, if anywhere, the opening for an offensive movement seems more favorable to France than to Germany. For our present purpose, which is limited to the consideration of what is aimed at in the first two or three weeks of the war, the southern scene of conflict need not again be referred to.

The contracted front of the Vosges is almost as serious a disadvantage to the army acting on the offensive as the formidable character of its defence. The lines of possible advance for any considerable body of troops are also further diminished by considerable stretches of impossible country. For instance, any advance between Melfort and Epinal, speaking, as we are, only of large operations, would be out of the question. There are, indeed, only four lines of advance open to the Germans in this quarter. They are from Metz to Verdun (two roads, one via Conflans, and the other via Mars la Tour), through Pont a Mousson to Commercy, through Chateau Salins to Nancy and Toul, and from Strasburg to Luneville. The two last named are available for a combined attack on Toul and its system of dependent forts. The total frontage for the German advance between Verdun and Luneville is then no more than twenty miles. In this restricted space it would be impossible for the Germans to employ more than half a million men, and in the event of any reverse or breakdown in the execution of the plan of attack the Germans would find themselves exposed to heavy loss before they could get outside the range of the French fortress artillery.

Although the German authorities are set on putting the efficiency of the Vosges forts to the test, and also of experimenting with some of their new theories for the capture of fortified places, it is to the widened front that they are mainly looking as the scene of their first victories. From Luneville to Verdun they have seventy miles of fortress, fort, and battery in front of them. From Verdun to Givat there are seventy-five miles of undefended country. Longwy and Montmedy do not count as fortresses. Givet Charlemont and Mezieres, both on the Meuse, are more up to date, but from Verdun to Mezieres stretches open country with a frontage of fifty miles. This is Germany's objective.

When the French drew the line of the Vosges fortification at Verdun it was assumed that the undefended gap south of the frontiers of Belgium and the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg) was too narrow to admit of any considerable German advance from Thionville, and that if it were undertaken a favourable opportunity would offer for their assuming the offensive under promising conditions. It is not quite evident why the French authorities did so, but they seem to have assumed that Germany would respect Belgian neutrality. The German text books of twenty years ago encouraged this view by representing that Germany gained by Belgian neutrality. These passages have long been eliminated. They were made ridiculous by the elaborate preparations for taking the offensive through neutral territory from Dalheim to Treves.

Even if we leave out of account the strip flanked by Dutch territory, Germany acquired a new frontage for the outpouring of the enormous forces that will be employed in the next war of 100 miles from Thionville to Aix-la-Chapelle. By a converging movement, leaving the Meuse on the right hand, that would gain seventy miles of practically undermined country on the north east frontier of France. The roads intervening between German and French territory are excellent. There are several useful lines of railway joining the main Brussels-Metz line at Mariole, Libramont, Arlon, and Luxemburg. Even if we exclude Namur, the Germans gain six direct roads to the French frontier. They have the Ourtha valley forts to Marcho-Rochofort and to Marche-Ciney, both good for Dinsit. Beauraing and Givet, the Viel Salm, La Roche and St. Hubert for Bouillon and Sedan; the Stavelot, Bastogne, and Libramont roads for Bouillon and Carignan; the St. Vith-Gouvy for the same destination; the Dickirck-Arion-Virton for Montmedy; and the Treves-Luxemburg road for Longwy. By the longest of the roads German territory is only seventy miles from French; by the shortest, Treves to Longwy, it is only thirty miles.

Having conceived the plan, the German authorities did not tarry in making the preparations behind their own frontier to render it capable of execution. For the last seven years Germany has been entirely engaged in providing frontier railways flanking the projected front, and in linking them up with the two bases on the middle Rhine at Coblantz and Cologne. In addition to the railways, double lined and metalled for heavy traffic, sidings have been provided at all the stations; and at suitable points between them. Between Montjois and St. Vith landing spaces sufficient for over one hundred and twenty thousand men have been provided, and it is confidently asserted that that force could be thrown across the Belgian frontier between Francorchamps and Gouvy in a single night without the Belgians knowing what was coming, the troops to be employed being entrained at Coblentz, Cologne, Bonn, and Gladoach. There is not the smallest reason for hoping that this despatch of the advance force of the invaders would miscarry. If the whole "corps d'armee" were not over the border in the twenty-four hours, at least a sufficient part would be over to make sure of the possession of Libremont in half that time. It is declared that the four cavalry regiments and four horse artillery batteries at Elsenborn camp during six months of the year could be at Libramont within six hours of leaving their base.

Under the present system, perhaps under any, there is no possibility of the Belgians doing anything to arrest or even delay this movement. General Hollabout, the Belgian Minister of War, made what is called a reassuring statement in the Brussels Chamber a little time ago. He referred to the official arrangements made for blowing up bridges on the railways, and otherwise rendering them useless. His second statement was even more optimistic. He alleged that the Stavelot Malmedy road was commanded by the fire of some of the Liege forts, and could therefore be made impassable for the Germans. I shall deal with the latter statement in some detail further on. But with regard to the destruction of the railways in Belgium, it must first of all be stated that for the initial rush Germany would not use them. With Stavelot and Trois Ponts in the hands of the German cavalry, can the Belgian military authorities feel confident that the bridge over the Ambleve would be destroyed? But even if it were destroyed it would not delay the German advance, which, so far as Belgian soil is concerned, is to be made by the roads and not by rail. Belgian railways would only come into use for the purposes of supply and reinforcements. Even if the Belgian arrangements for placing the lines out of use worked to perfection, the German advance would not be retarded, and the German railway corps could repair the damage done to the line in a comparatively short space of time. To talk of delaying the German advance by blowing up a few bridges between Stavelot and Gouvy may be compared to trying to stop a cannon-ball with an open umbrella.

But the new sugegstion that the Liege forts, or rather two of them, command the Malmedy-Stavelot road raises a point of interest, and incidentally General Hollebaut has contributed a new fact to the elements of this important question.

When the forts constructed under General Brialmont's direction at Liege and Namur were armed in 1896, the maximum range of the guns placed in them was twelve miles. Stavelot is 18½ miles distant as the crow flies from Embourg to Chaudfontaine, the two nearest forts of the Liege position. As General Hellebout's statement is made with full knowledge of the facts, we can only conclude that new ordnance possessing the maximum yet attained range of twenty-one miles has been placed in those forts in lieu of the old. But is the Belgian fire from them closes the direct road from Malmedy, it cannot reach the road to Viel Salm from Montenau and Ligneuville or that from St. Vith to Gouvy. The closing of one road does not close the door in the face of the Germans, for they command other entrances.

But General Heilebaut's admission as to the improved armament of Liege does not supply a reason for the taking in hand of the latest of Germany's strategic railways on the Belgian frontier. A miserable little line, nine miles in all, has hthterto served all the requirements of Eupen. This loop line commences at Herbosthal on the main line from Liege to Aix-la-Chapelle, etc., passes through Eupen and then links on with the Aix-St. Vith line at Raerem. It is now in course of being converted into a double-railed line capable of supporting heavy traffic! In a vague sort of way it was felt that there must be some project behind this, but beyond the general principle of broadening the front as much as possible no definite importance was attached to it. It seems now pretty clear that the design is to seize the Baraque de Michel, the highest plateau in Belgium, from which German siege batteries could enter into a duel on the most favourable terms with Chaudfontaine and Embourg. In this way at least the Belgian artilleries in those forts would have other work to do than cannonading the Stavelot route at a range of eighteen to nineteen miles.

The practical point, which is for the moment all that need be considered, is that the Belgian measures described by the War Minister of that country would not deter or delay the German advance on Libramont, which may be regarded as their first strategical objective.

In violating Belgian neutrality Germany would endeavour to convince the Belgian Government and people that she was not animated by an hostile spirit towards them, and there have been some indications that she flattered herself that her persuasive utterances would be accepted. General Hellebaut's statement must then have administered a considerable shock to the German strategists, who have regarded Belgium as a "quantite negligeable." The fortified position of Liege, well held, with its lines of communication open to Namur and Antwerp, is a very awkward fact for the invader sweeping across the Ardennes for France. It would not perhaps count for a great deal if all went well at the front, but a retreating German army would be a very favourable mark for the resentment aroused in Belgium by the unprovoked invasion of that country.

Decidedly the existence of Liege is a material fact in regard to the advance across the Ardennes, which the German strategists must include in their calculations.

The Germans are prepared to supplement the advance throughout the Belgian Ardennes with a movement emcompassing the six forts of Liege on the right bank of the Meuse. Some of those forts are very strong, others are not so strong, but what is not certain is whether the position would become untenable if Boncelles or Evegnee were captured or demolished. It has also to be remembered that if the German siege batteries could hold their ground round the Baraque de Michel and Gilleppe, their fire would reach the city of Liege itself. If, however, the Belgians display the moral fortitude to hold out at Liege despite the imposing demonstration that the Germans intend making against it, they ought to be able to maintain their ground until aid reached them from both France and England. Even if they could not accomplish so much, the arrest of the Germans at Liege for a few weeks would secure the time needed to organize a formidable interior place of stand up posing on the fortified position of Namur. On the other hand, if by lack of patriotic devotion or through moral degeneracy Liege succumbs to the Germans at their first summons, Namur, which is a far weaker position than Liege, could not be converted in time into an adequate base for national defence. Besides, the loss of Liege would compromise the whole Belgian positon outside Antwerp, which is a place entirely for defensive and not offensive action.

The completeness of the success of Germany's attack on the north east frontier of France would depend therefore on the fate of Liege. If it passed into her hands in the first few days of the war German strategists would have no anxiety about their right flank, and would press on on the Broad front from Givet to Thionville. We have dwelt more especially on the role of the troops marching across the Belgian Ardennes, one entire army corps in the first place to be increased to two as soon as the fate of Liege was decided. This would be the right wing of the army of invasion. But the left wing, moving through Treves, Thionville, and Luxemburg, would be more formidable. Its objective would be Stenay and Vouziers. The taking up of a strong position on the Aisne by the two armies moving through Belgium and the Grand Duchy would represent the successful achievement of the first stage in the German plan of campaign against France.

It is not easy to see how a German success up to that point can be prevented, and it is to be hoped that France in a vain attempt to hinder what is practically inevitable may not squander her magnificent cavalry, which, if preserved, might in the second phase of the struggle turn the scale in her favour. To obtain her primary objectives, Germany is prepared to waste a large number of men. The cost of men will not prevent her straining every effort to attain her end. If the French pour over into Belgian to meet her half-way, they will be playing her game and equalizing the chances of loss. An obstinate defence without risking too much in any pitched action north of the Rheims-Laon-La Fere line is clearly the best French strategy. Time would thus be gained for England to play her part, and the further German troops have got south of the Semois, the better our chance of striking at her rear. It will not be a bad thing for France's chances of final victory if the first great battle of the war can be deferred until the Germans are in the Aisne Valley. It will take the Germans much longer to get there than the three weeks we shall require to come into action, and it is not difficult to conceive a situation in which the Germans might find themselves very uncomfortable.

On the other hand, there is a risk that the French generals will not relish the idea of giving ground, and that they will strain every effort to meet the Germans before they have got off Belgian territory. This will be to fight the Germans' battle, and to risk giving the colour to the whole war by an initial blunder due to military pride. They should make allowance for the conditions under which their allies can alone come to their help. Both England and Russia must be slow from different circumstances. Therefore France must be patient and give ground. Catinat is the general they should take as their model, and "reculer pour mieur sauter" should be their motto. The only way to baffle the German plan of campaign is to leave the development of its inherent difficulties to time and distance. The Germans will be far less formidable at Rethel or Vouriers, if no battles have been lost by the French before they arrive there, than they would be at, let us say, Libramont or even Sedan. It will no doubt be disagreeable to French sentiment to see the first battles of the war occur on French soil, but victories there would be better than defeats further north.

Woman's World

Cabinet Member's Clever Daughter Takes to Literature.

MISS LUCY BURLESON.

One of the most interesting families in Washington is that of Postmaster General Burleson. His wife is a successful playwright, and his daughter, Miss Lucy, has evinced a decided literary gift. She is said to have inherited her mother's talent for writing, together with her father's love of outdoor life.

The Burlesons are from Austin, Tex. They have lived in the capital for many years, where Mr. Burleson has served as congressman. For three generations the Burlesons have been prominent in public affairs in the state of Texas. Mrs. Burleson is of southern stock. Her father was a native of Maryland, but settled in Texas. He was a surgeon in the army during the war with Mexico and liked the life of the frontier so well that he brought his bride to Texas and settled there when the war was over.

Miss Lucy was educated at the Sweetbriar Academy For Girls in Virginia. She is a charming and accomplished young woman. The attentions of a bachelor statesman to her have set Washington to wondering if there may not soon be another wedding in cabinet circles.

CONTROLS GREAT OIL AREAS.

Canadian Who Mines In Austria Is a Petroleum Magnate.

Mr. William H. MacGarvey, of Vienna, Austria, whose name has been associated with the Austro-German syndicate said to have acquired control through Count Von Hammerstein of great oil areas about Fort McMurray in Northern Alberta, is a Canadian by birth and education, and in fact up to thirty-three years or so ago he was well known in political and industrial circles in the Dominion, says Chesterfield in the Family Herald. His parents, Edward and Sarah MacGarvey, emigrated from the North of Ireland, and went to Huntingdon, Que., where Mr. W. H. MacGarvey was born. He was educated at Huntingdon Academy, which has turned out so many men who hold prominent positions in Canada, and later went out to Western Ontario with his family. The present European oil magnate commenced his business career near Wyoming, Ont., but shortly afterwards moved to Petrolea, of which place he was elected first reeve the year before Confederation. He unsuccessfully contested Lambton for the Ontario Legislature in the Conservative interest. He was by this time accounted one of the most successful and expert men in the Canadian mineral oil business, and he went to Europe to investigate the opportunities for introducing into Austria the Canadian system of drilling for oil. Favorably impressed by his observations, and after obtaining options on undeveloped oil areas, he returned to Canada for competent men to assist in the work, and the same year went to Austria accompanied by skilled artisans from Petrolea. At first results were somewhat disappointing, but after some years his efforts in the new field of endeavor were crowned with success, and he became the principal owner of the oil wells of Galicia, which he still manages and controls. He has also established many other great industries depending for their existence on his original oil company, one employing about 2,000 men. Many of Mr. MacGarvey's principal managers are Canadians. Mr. MacGarvey is spoken of throughout continental Europe as "a brilliant example of integrity, honor, and perseverance," who well deserves the ample fortune which public rumor credits him with having secured. His only daughter, Mamie, married Count Overhard Von Zeppelin, of the German Lancers, a near relative of the Count Zeppelin whose name is famous in connection with aviation.

Philip K. Walcott, a distant relative of Ralph Waldo Emerson, fell 13 stories to the ground at his home in New York and was killed.

Washington is to raise a war tax on beer and whiskey, and take it off gasoline.

CHAIR FOR SUN PARLOR.

In the autumn and winter the sun parlor takes the place of the summer porch. Any veranda fitted with glass covered sashes may be converted into a sun parlor. Portable oil, gas or electric stoves may be used to take the chill off the air in very cold weather.

CANE AND RATTAN CHAIR.

Rugs and lightweight furniture are required for furnishing. The cane and rattan chair illustrated here is one of a set admirable for this purpose. It is finished in dark blue and white and would be charming with a washable blue and white rug and blue and white cretonne hangings and cushions. For the sun parlor furnishings may be on the line of the summer porch, but a trifle more elaborate.

Homemade Soap.

An excellent hard soap may thus be made: Take six pounds of clean grease, six pounds of salsoda, three pounds of lime. Slack the lime and put in four gallons of soft water; add the salsoda and when dissolved let it settle. Pour off the water in an iron kettle and boil. If the soap does not thicken after boiling a few minutes add more soft water till it is of the consistency of honey. Wet a tub and pour the hot soap into it. When cold cut in pieces and set away to dry. Always make soap in an iron kettle.

For Bedroom Floors.

Nothing is more satisfactory as a floor covering for bedrooms than washable cotton rugs. They can be bought in the small size—a yard long by twenty-four inches wide. They are made either in plain colors, with white stripes for a border across the ends, or in mottled patterns. They are edged with cotton fringe. Cushions for the porch floor are also covered with tub cotton homespun.

ANTWERP IS IN THE HANDS OF THE GERMANS

FOE AFTER CHANNEL FORTS AND ENGLAND

Correspondent Says That Northern France is Destined for the Same Desolation as Suffered By Belgium

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 10.—The Express correspondent in Paris telegraphs that the immediate objective of the German army is no longer Paris, but the channel ports. The first blow at Paris having failed, the second blow must be aimed at England.

A new line-up of the opposing forces means that Northern France is destined to suffer desolation similar to that already visited on Belgium. All rich cities in Northern France have been marked for certain destruction and ruin.

The French general staff is still confident of victory, but it is recognized that no decisive success can be achieved while the masses engaged are enormous. There must be a constant stream of reinforcements.

EVACUATION OF ANTWERP BY BELGIANS ANNOUNCED BY BRITISH WAR OFFICE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, 12.17 p.m., Oct. 10.—The British war office announces that Antwerp was evacuated by the Belgians yesterday.

London (noon) — The official Berlin despatch via Marconi confirms the report that Antwerp has been occupied.

The official announcement of the fall of Antwerp given out at the German General headquarters late last night and transmitted here via Marconi says:— This forenoon, several forts of the inner line of fortifications of Antwerp have fallen. The town since Monday has been in our possession. The commander and garrison evacuated the fortifications. Only a few forts are still occupied by the enemy and this is without influence on our position in Antwerp.

Antwerp, Friday, via London.—The bombardment has temporarily stopped. It is rumored German infantry has penetrated into the suburbs through a breach in Fort Berchem.

P. C. Paterson Saccumbs to Typhoid Fever

Death claimed a popular member of th police department at Nicholls hospital early this morning, when Police Constable Wm. Paterson passed away after a brave struggle against an attack of typhoid fever.

The circumstances of his death are more than usually sad. Five weeks ago to-day P. C. Paterson was united in marriage, his bride having come to Peterborough from Scotland, with Police Constable and Mrs. Brown. For some days prior to the happy event, P. C. Paterson had been endeavoring to shake off an incipient attack of typhoid, but the fever got the upper hand, and on the following Tuesday he was taken to Nicholls hospital. His condition grew serious, but medical skill and careful attention brought about a change for the better in his condition. His improvement continued, and then when it was thought that the patient might recover, he took a turn for the worse and finally answered death's call this morning.

The late Police Constable Paterson had made numerous friends, although he had been in Peterborough only a little more than a year. He joined the police force in July of 1913, with the best of recommendations from his superior officers in Scotland, where he served in the constabulary. At once he made friends with his brother officers and citizens with whom he met in the pursuance of his duty and at social events. He assisted at numerous concerts and entertainments, having vocal talent that always won favor. He had a pleasing personality and a smile for everyone. By wrongdoers he was respected, and on more than one occasion won the gratitude of offenders to whom he showed consideration and used good judgment.

To his bereaved widow, the sympathy of the community will be extended in this her hour of trial.

The funeral will be held Monday afternoon from Knox church, where service will be held at 2.30 o'clock by Rev. H. J. Keith. The Masons will be in atendance. Interment will be made at Little Lake cemetery.

The remains will be taken to the church at 10 a.m. Monday.

CONTRACTORS ARE OBJECTING

To Grouping of Building Trades in One Class

IN COMPENSATION ACT

The contractors of Ontario are very much opposed to the present Workingmen's Compensation act as at present formed, one of the principal objections being the grouping of the building trades in one class. In order to make their objections known to the government before the act comes into force, in January next, meetings throughout the province are to be held, in order to bring this matter more generally before the employers, and to give the central committee something to go before the government with.

A meeting for this purpose is called of the Peterborough contractors, to be held in the council chamber on Tuesday evening next, when it is hoped every employer in the building trades of Peterborough will be present.

HON. FINLAY G. MACDIARMID, Ontario's New Minister of Public Works.

GARRISON MADE ESCAPE FROM CITADEL

Capture of Antwerp is Robbed of Much of It's Intrinsic Value

Defenders Did not Evacuate Till Doom of City Was Sealed

London, Oct. 10.—Antwerp has fallen into the hands of the Germans, with the exception of a few outlying forts, which cannot affect the outstanding facts, but its capture, important and stirring as it has been, was robbed of much of its intrinsic value, it is contended here, by the escape of the garrison.

The defenders, it appears, held on long enough to enable them to take full stock of the situation, and they evacuated the citadel only when it became evident that the doom of the town was sealed. Towards the close of the defence only a sufficient garrison to work the remaining available guns was left to hold Antwerp.

The forts around Contich, six miles southeast of Antwerp, are said to be still intact, and a duel between them and German artillery is reported as proceeding this morning, but the outcome cannot be in doubt. Permanent fortifications cannot hold out against the modern siege howitzers. The real extent of destruction within the walls of Antwerp will be slow in reaching the outside world from unpartizan sources, for the reason that communication with the city is either cut or entirely in the hands of the military authorities.

PROPERTY OF KAISER SAFE

British Government Will not Seize B.C. Holdings

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Emperor William is popularly supposed to have large investments in the timber and minerals lands of British Columbia, and it has been rumored in London that the British Government was considering the confiscation of the Emperor's property in Canada.

It can be stated on the authority of a high official in the Foreign Office that the Government has no thought of confiscating the property of alien enemies within the confines of the British Empire.

The German Emperor is supposed to be heavily interested with Alva Von Alvensleben in Western Canada properties. However, the British Government has not even made an investigation of the titles of the properties in question and disclaims any curiosity as to the Emperors' reported investments.

Back to The Woods

And the Haunts of Big And Little Fishes

Signs have already appeared — sings of the hunting and fishing season, which is at hand. The prospects are for a good season too. Over the hills and mountains at about this time, hovers a mist visible only to the sons of Nimrod and Izaak Walton. It is not inert but strangely beckons. By those who have the eyes to see and the gift and grace of understanding is the call of the wild to them. The zest and the exhilaration of one of these fall trips is not known by poxy, but only learned from experience. This is the time that even the office man, sees visions and dreams dreams, he looks out of his window and sees the salmon jump all around him, his ear picks up the drumming of a partridge. He knows a happy hunting ground where this game abodes easily reached either by rig or automobile. These men whose spirits are exhilarated by this beautiful October weather, reckons not the hardships of the trail he welcomes them.

Now Peterboro is a noted centre for this sporting life. Back about 40 miles from here we have lakes that teem with these lake salmon or mountain trout and they are the gamest fish that an angler would want to hook. The partridges too, are numerous. Among those who have gone back today are the Ketcheum Fishing Club, composed of the old veteran H. C. Winch, E. A. Peck, R. Gibbs, W. Turner, H. Nesbitt, W. Comstock, E. F. Mason, W. H. Dunsford, R. J. Munmo and Peter Campbell.

The Jack's Lake Fishing Club are: W. H. Denham, Mr. Kirn, Chicago; W. J. McIlroy, Hamilton; Mr. Mathewson, Toronto; G. W. Hatton, A. H. Stratton, Dan O'Connell, W. E. Lech, R. M. Glover, R. Kingan, B. A. Rose, R. Hicks, W. J. Thompson, Judge Wood, Port Hope; Alex. Elliott, Mr. Davis, B. H. Crack, Hamilton.

The Gold Lake party are:— Geo. Fitzgerald, Ed. Huff, Arthur Blade, and A. Spence. These men will be back in the wilds for the next two weeks and when they return, they will be changed men.

REAL ADVANTAGES GAINED BY ALLIES

Paris Statement

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 10.—An official announcement issued this morning says : "Fighting continues under satisfactory conditions. Our entire battlefront has been maintained, in spite of violent attacks of the enemy at several points.

"On our left wing, in the region included between La Bassee, Armentieres and Cassel, there has been fighting between opposing forces of cavairy.

"To the north of the Oise our troops have attained real advantages at several places in their zone of action.

"In the region of St. Mihiel we have made material progress."

SURRENDER OF ANTWERP.

The Hague, Oct. 10.—Antwerp surrendered to the Germans at 2.30 p.m. Friday. The war flag was removed from the cathedral and the white flag raised in its place at 9 a.m. The actual surrender took place five and a half hours later.

It is declared here that the Notre Dame cathedral has not been damaged.

The Germans delivered one of their last furious attacks between 6 and 7 o'clock Friday morning. The Belgians resisted valiantly in the trenches and desperate fighting resulted, with very heavy losses on both sides. During all Friday night Zeppelin airships directed the firing of German artillery, the results of which were appalling.

PORTUGAL FOR WAR.

London, Oct. 10.—The Amsterdam correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. says Bureau Weinzehr, a semi-official news agency, asserts that a declaration of war on Germany by Portugal is expected in Berlin at any moment.

PRIZE-WINNERS IN BETTER BABY CONTEST

Last evening marked the close of the "Better Baby" contest. Before an audience which overtaxed the lecture room of the Public Library, the best babies were awarded their respective prizes.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., who acted as chairman, in a few words outlined the benefits that could be obtained from these contests, and the valuable information which mothers could gather from the different pamphlets supplied by the government. He also complimented the mothers on the very high standing, which their babies had attained.

Dr. Jessie Bernie, who has been very active in promoting the contest, expressed her admiration for the way in which the mothers had entered their babies in the contest. She also explained the charts and what the various markings meant.

Dr. Sutton, in his remarks, said that the mothers had been shown the proper way in which to look after their babies. He outlined the great advantages of the bottled milk, and told the mothers to insist on having milk delivered to them in bottles, as it was the greatest germ-proof idea that was known.

Mr. Burnham then presented the prizes which were:— 1st class, 6 to 12 months: 1st prize, Everett, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sisson, 571 Water St. 99½ per cent. Silver cup.

2nd prize:— infant daughter of Mrs. W. G. Henderson, 574 Charlotte St. 98 per cent. Silver cup.

2nd class:— 12 months to 2 years. 1st prize:— Everett, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Peters, 264 McDonnel St. 99½ per cent. Silver spoon.

2nd prize:— Kathleen, infant daughter of Delbert Wiskin, 276 Thomas St. 97½. Silver spoon.

3rd class:— 2 to 3 years. 1st prize:— Arthur, the infant son of Mrs. John Smith, 589 Harvey St. 99½ per cent. Silver cup and medal. 2nd prize:— Muriel, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Wilson, 206 Aylmer St. 97½ per cent. Silver cup and medal.

Twins:— Examiner Cup, won by Thomas and Robert, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Allan, 542 Bethune St. 96½ per cent. and 95 per cent. respectively. Alma, the infant daughter of Thomas Mark, 779 Aylmer St., with medal. 98 per cent. scored the highest number of points in the class for twins.

MANY WORKERS FOR TAG DAY

Tagging is in Progress at All Points

It rained when Tag Day was held last year, and Jupiter Pluvius was busy again this morning. But despite this handicap, many girls and young women are hard at work collecting funds for the Children's Aid society. The reports are optimistic and the workers are carrying on the canvass in an aggressive manner.

This morning the two P. C. I. girls selling tags on the northwest corner of Hunter and George streets approached a Review scribe and "tagged" him. Endeavoring to even things up, the reporter got on the scent of news and asked "How's business compared with other years?" He dug when he received the slam, "The class of people we've met so far are all practically broke." She didn't even make exception for the newspaper man.

Two of the most energetic workers were Misses Cuffe and Laura Soden. Both young maids took up their positions at the gates of the Canadian General Electric Co. about 20 minutes before 7 o'clock, and remained throughout all the heavy rain till 8.30; then they centred their efforts along George street. The brace overlooked the fact that only the office employes of the C. G. E. are working on Fridays and Saturdays, hence they had to wait for an hour till the men began to appear. The few present, however, were generous.

A Pole This Time.

The fire brigade was given a run at 7.40 last evening. A power pole in front of Cressman's in some way had become ignited. The blaze was extinguished without laying a line of hose.

Headquarters,
Peterboro, Oct. 9, 1914.

Orders by the Officer commanding 57th Regiment.

1. Officers commanding companies will on Tuesday night next furnish the commanding officer with a list of the names of all members of their respective companies who desire to enlist for overseas service in a second Canadian contingent.

2. Officers commanding companies will also be prepared to recruit for such service, others not now members of the regiment.

3. Instructions for the enlistment of a second Canadian contingent have not been received by headquarters but the above orders are issued in anticipation of such authority.

By order,
D. WALKER, Major,
Adjutant.

DEATH CAME SUDDENLY TO JOHN HENDERSON

John Henderson, aged 63 years, a well-known resident of this county, passed away very suddenly last evening. Mr. Henderson, who resided at 265 Burnham street, left yesterday with a friend and drove to the home of Mr. William Burleigh in Otonabee. He spent a portion of the day there and when he went to place the bridle on the horse, in preparation to return to the city, he dropped to the ground and passed away immediately. Death was due to heart failure.

The deceased, who was a son of the late David Henderson, was born and raised in the township of Otonabee. He resided there till a year and a half ago, when he came to this city and took up his residence on Burnham street.

He is survived by five sisters: Mrs. James Renwick, of Wakopa, Man.; Mrs. A. Thomson, of Thornberry; Mrs. W. D. Johnston, of Otonabee; Miss Jane and Miss Margaret, at home; also one brother, Mr. James E. Henderson, of this city.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon from the family residence to Keene cemetery, Rev. R. Pogue officiating.

GOOD REASON FOR THANKSGIVING.

DESPATCHES this morning confirm the fall of Antwerp. This famous old Belgium city, with three lines of modern and exceptionally strong forts, was unable to stand against the big siege guns of the Germans. Perhaps the city was abandoned when the German shells began to reach the city proper, so that it might be spared complete destruction. Whether this be so or not, Antwerp has gone the way of Brussels, Liege, Louvain and many other cities and towns in Europe. Its inhabitants have gone out in droves, carrying as much of their belongings with them as did the inhabitants of this same territory when Caesar conquered Gaul. War has made tremendous devastation in a country as beautiful as Nature, art and wealth could make it. Thousands of people have lost their homes, their business, their wealth, their country, their kith and kin. They are destitute and suffering ; but, here in Canada, though we are taking an active part in the war, devastation has not yet visited us. Our cities are standing, doing business as usual; our fields are unswept by invading hordes, and harvests are garnered by the hardy tillers of the soil. Though articles of food have increased in price, there is no general destitution, no turning out of doors of whole cities at a time. Canadians have but to think of the difference between their country and Belgium, to realize how happy their lot is and with what sincere thoughts they should give thanks for being so. Not for many a long year has there been greater cause for national thanksgiving than now.

WHAT ABOUT A PARKS COMMISSIONER?

UNDER THE DIRECTION of the Hon. Martin Burrell there is a series of excellent brochures being published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. What the department is doing along this line is not apreciated so generally as one could wish. For example, we do not hear of the City Council changing the "specls" on the workingman to some intelligent consideration of neglected city problems. The latest pamphlet we have received is entitled, "The Planting and Care of Shade Trees." It is a very intelligent, well-arranged consideration of the subject, and all those owning property or who are desirous of having Peterborough's streets and parks made beautiful, should be familiar with what is recommended. The article discusses the planting of trees on streets and residential property, their care, what trees are suitable for one and the other, how they grow, and how they look in the different seasons. It takes up the legislation and recommendations that have been made in reference to tree-planting. Tree-planting should be controlled by the city, because mistakes of individual planting are eliminated. The choice of a proper variety, the use of only one variety on a street to obtain harmony and beauty, the proper attention to heading and pruning, are points that should be centrally controlled. To do that, some officer knowing something about the subject should be appointed. The usual alderman or councilor won't do. He hasn't the technical knowledge nor time to investigate the subject. A city engineer is also not the proper person, unless he is qualified, and a knowledge of gradients, sewer construction, etc., is not what is required of a Parks Commissioner or Tree Inspector. Peterborough possesses the natural advantages that warrant a more efficient handling of the subject of parks, trees, and beautification than has been done in the past. The legislative recommendations in this pamphlet are interesting and suggestive, and the City Council would do well to consider them.

EXPECTATIONS FOR NEW ONTARIO.

NORTHERN ONTARIO should experience shortly a great period of development. The Premier, Hon. W. H. Hearst, says is ought to receive next summer the greatest influx of settlers that it has ever known. The completion of the Transcontinental Railway, and the expenditure, up to the present, of two and a quarter million dollars for the building and improving of about nine hundred miles of roadway, are the main factors facilitating its hoped-for development. The war, however, will reduce considerably the expectations. If Britain can keep the seas open, there may be a fairly large influx of immigrants, but these, if they come at all, will be far fewer than in recent years. Even if the war ends before next summer, which present indications do not point to, the great dislocation in Europe will take a long time to heal, and immigration will not be the same as formerly. Up to this year we received large numbers from Germany and Austria. These will not come in anything like the numbers usually received. British immigration will also be likely reduced. New Ontario is ready, the food products that can be grown there are known, and that is the main thing. If we can get settlers, the place is ready for them. It is only a matter of time when it will throb with activity, and, while the war will undoubtedly lengthen the time required, it may be instrumental in securing a better brand of settlers for Northern Ontario.

TRUTH IN THE MUD.

LA VERITE, published at Quebec, is a religious weekly, strongly ultramontane and extremist. Its title, The Truth, does not blind it to the advantages which come from persistent misrepresentation, says the Toronto News. For some time it has criticized the Government of Ontario for its "persecution" of French-Canadians, and in the current issue returns to the charge. Speaking of the death of Sir James Whitney, La Verite says: "The great fault of the administration of Mr. Whitney was first in authorizing, and then in making his own, the campaign of the Orangemen and the other sectaries and fanatics against the teaching of the French language in Ontario."

Rarely does a sentence contain so many inventions. First, the campaign against bi-lingual schools was not an Orange fight. It was begun by the Roman Catholic bishop of London, who declared, not without vigour, that the bi-lingual schools were turning out pupils unable to read and write correctly either English or French. The campaign was continued, first by Irish and English Catholics, then by the people of the Province without reference to creed.

Orangemen supported the movement, but less as Orangemen than as electors of Ontario. Sir James Whitney did not authorize the campaign. He did not 'make it his own." The question of the efficiency of any school in the Province of Ontario was necessarily a government problem. It could not be avoided, even if Sir James had had any desire to avoid it.

The statement of La Verite that the campaign was against the teaching of the French language in Ontario is merely a falsehood. There is no objection to the French language in Ontario. The Government specifically requires that in all bi-lingual schools one-sixth of the time shall be devoted to the study of French language and literature. That is exactly equal to the amount of time given to arithmetic. How utterly absurd it would be for any one to say that the Provincial Department of Education was persecuting natural mathematicians by giving them no chance to indulge in their favourite study! How false and vicious it would be to say that arithmetic was proscribed in the Ontario schools! Yet that is exactly the position of these critics of the Government who declare that French people are persecuted in Ontario and that their language is proscribed.

Reasonable criticism will be welcomed by any government worthy of the name. If it were true that the French language could not be taught in Ontario there would be sense and power in the statements of the French-Canadian leaders in Ontario and in Quebec. But it is not true. The criticism is unreasonable, childish, and supremely foolish. It is based on bare-faced falsehoods repeated and repeated and repeated until some people begin to think them true. Yet the leaders know them to be falsehoods, and La Verite, in spite of its pious colour, gives further currency to statements which it knows are mischievous inventions.

The French-Canadians in Ontario will get justice. Their opportunities for learning the graces of their language are not hampered by Regulation XVII., and they will secure, if the regulation is enforced, a better chance for learning English than they ever had before. Further, neither the Orange lodges, nor any of the Protestant churches, either officially or unofficially, has had any thing whatever to do with the drafting of the Regulation, or the enforcement of it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THERE IS one name that has figured in despatches which has always exasperated us in our efforts to pronounce it. The versatile editor of Saturday Night has solved the difficulty thus: Orthoepists are worrying over the pronunciation of Przemysl. Zemizzle is the right way. The preliminary pr cannot be pronounced except by a rattlesnake with buttons on its tail.

Still Effective.

(Montreal Star.)

Among the weapons which have recovered their old reputation is the bayonet—the British bayonet. It is not long ago since military experts thought of discarding it altogether. It was a burden to the soldier and a cumbrous attachment to the rifle; and the men very seldom came near enough to their enemies to make any use of it. It would be far better—these military experts reasoned—to let the soldier carry that weight in cartridges or food.

Not Mastery, But Service.

(Toronto Star.)

What Bernhardi and others of his school cannot get into their heads is that the essential idea of the British empire is not possession or mastery, but service. The paramount interest is not that of the servant, but of the people to be served. The King, the foremost statesman of the empire, the greatest soldiers and sailors, are all proud to call themselves servants. The stronger and wiser a man is, the higher is his obligation of service.

RETIRED

By Walt Mason

The man who leads an active life grows weary of the business strife, which long since lost its zest; he yearns to quit the beastly grind, to leave all trafficking behind, and have some ease and rest. "Some day, when I have made my pile," he murmurs, with a longing smile, "I'll sell this blamed old store, and put in my declining days at checker games, with other jays, and labor never more." That time arrives ; his store he sells, then for a month he's wearing bells, a gladsome soul is he ; but when an idle month is spent, you will not find a sadder gent than he, from sea to sea. The time hangs heavy on his hands, and slowly flow the hour-glass sands as grease in winter time ; each morn he greets with new despair, he finds that leisure is a snare, and idleness a crime. He hangs around the busy mart with weary eyes and aching heart, and envies those who hump ; they're finding life serene and glad, as they pursue the festive scad—and he is at the dump. In seven months he ages more than in twice seven years before ; the rest that he desired, but makes him wearier, by much; "Oh, what a chump," he sighs, in Dutch, "I was when I retired!" The wise man never means to quit, while he is competent and fit, and standing on his feet ; the rest that come 'twixt sun and sun, when all your workday tasks are done—that rest alone is sweet.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SUMMER PASTIME CONTEST.

To the Manager of the
"Summer Pastime Contest."

Dear Sir,—Just a few lines for a little information in regard to matters pertaining to the Summer Pastime which I would be pleased to have you explain.

In your Log-Book you give clues to some twenty of the pictures, and in going over the clues I find that there are two, which to my mind are printed in the Daily Review somewhat out of order. In the clues it states in Number 10 that the drink they are ordering and the flowery nook are important, and in that picture in the Review both of the fore mentioned are not to be found. The picture in the Review which this clue would cover would be Number 11 and the clue for Number 11 in the Log-Book would be for Number 10 in the Review. Am I correct and would the picture in The Review be reversed at the time of checking over contestants' answers which they submit.

Also in printing Numbers 56 and 57 you repeated the Number 56 which would leave two of Number 56 and no Number 57. Should any one submit the coupons from The Review and strike out the 6 and insert 7, will it be accepted?

Thanking you in advance for an early reply to the above requests for information,

Yours in doubt,
CONTESTANT.

Peterboro, Oct. 9, 1914.

Our correspondent is quite right in regard to the printing of Nos. 10 and 11 out of order, the fact of the matter being that No. 10 picture went astray in the mail and was not received in time to print in its proper order, No. 11 being inserted in its place, and No. 10 taking the place of No. 11. This was explained in a subsequent issue in The Review.

In reference to Nos. 56 and 57 a mistake was made in not correcting the number for 57. The second No. 56 should be changed to No. 57. Coupons thus changed will be accepted.—Ed.

A new and educative feature for our city was introduced at the Poultry Association Hall on Simcoe St. last evening, in the form of an illustrated lecture on the Poultry Industry.

The Association has made arrangements with the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, for a series of monthly lectures on all branches of the work in connection with the handling, housing, etc., of poultry. These lectures will be illustrated by lantern slides depicting the correct types of the various breeds, the newest and most approved methods of quickly maturing chickens for the market and the best methods of killing, dressing and packing them. The ever interesting egg problem will also be strongly presented by a man from the Department at Ottawa.

That the enterprise of the local Association will meet with approval is quite evident from the enthusiastic reception given the speaker last evening. The ladies are taking keen interest in the proposition, which augurs well for complete success.

The public at large are welcome to come to these lectures, the dates for which will be announced from time to time.

To Assist Industries.

CORNWALL, Ont., Oct. 10. — On Wednesday, Oct. 14, the ratepayers of Cornwall will vote on bylaws to exempt from taxation other than school taxes the property of the Canadian Cottons, Limited, known as the Dundas Mill, for a period of ten years, and to extend the franchise of the Cornwall Street Railway Light & Power Co. for a period of twenty years.

Italian Socialists Excited.

ROME, Oct. 10. — (Via Paris.)—The arrest by Italian police of Austrian subjects of Italian nationality who had crossed the frontier to escape military service in the Austrian army has caused considerable excitement among Italian Socialists. Some radical members of the Italian Chamber of Deputies have interrogated the Government on the question.

Worker For Good Roads.

Mr William A. McLean, who at the recent convention of the American Roadbuilders Association, was elected president, has been for some time identified with the good roads cause in Ontario. He was assistant city engineer of St. Thomas, and became first lieutenant of "Good Roads Campbell" as assistant engineer of highways for the province of Ontario. When Mr. Campbell's abilities found recognition at Ottawa, Mr. W. A. McLean stepped into his shoes, and ever since has been forcefully demonstrating that he is well fit to wear them. He is the "working" member of the new Ontario road commission which is now directing affairs, and which will give Ontario a highway system second to none by hitching up the constructive work of the counties and townships.

Mr. McLean was born in Belmont, Ont., forty-three years ago.

How Mr. Harding Conducted the Defense

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

"Mr. Harding," said Captain Wainwright, handing his glass to his first mate, "what do you think of that thing over there?"

"I think," said Harding, "that it is one of those devilish Chinese pirates that infest these waters."

This dialogue occurred on the American tramp steamer North Star in the Java sea, a region dreaded by mariners for the villainous characters who infest it.

"What do you think of our chances in case they attack us?" asked the captain.

"That depends on our ingenuity. We can't sink them before they reach us. We'll have to prevent their boarding us if we can, and if they board us we will have to fight them for our lives."

"How can we prevent their boarding us?"

"By so manning the points they attempt to climb that they can't get on deck. One American sailor armed should be able to keep off three Chinamen from climbing a perpendicular ship's side. But excuse me, captain. I see that the villains are pointing for us; I must go below and order up the arms."

Harding left the captain peering at the junk. It was a small vessel, smaller than the North Star, but its deck was literally swarming with copper colored fiends ready for loot and murder. It had no ordnance of any caliber; it had been armed and equipped by men who had no especial means to equip it, and, as Harding said, relied on taking such ships as it could overpower by boarding.

Soon after the first officer had gone below the men began to bring up guns, pistols and cutlasses and distributed them, with ammunition to fit, along the bulwarks.

"Where's Mr. Harding?" the captain demanded of one of the men. "What's he doing below when we're in peril for our lives?"

"He's in the engine room," was the reply.

At that moment a diabolical shout went up which diverted the captain's attention from the delinquent Mr. Harding. It was a bloodthirsty cry of triumph. The pirates, having come near enough to the North Star to make sure that she had no means of sinking her adversary, were in a very hilarious state. Their junk was a tolerably good sailer, and the wind was fair to enable them to bear down on their enemy. The North Star, though a steamer, was a tub and could barely do seven miles an hour.

On came the junk, her murderous crew dancing and shouting and chattering and brandishing their weapons. The captain of the North Star was so terrified that he took no action whatever, but the second officer, Mr. Meiggs, was quietly arranging the men in groups along the bulwarks and giving them their orders. There were a few hand grenades in the stock of explosives, and Meiggs ordered them on to the forecastle, where it was expected the Chinamen would attempt to climb the bowsprit chains, for the North Star was part steamer and part sailer. The crew was divided into two sections, the one for'ard, the other aft.

"Why are you leaving the ship clear for the devils amidships, Mr. Meiggs?" wailed the captain. "Don't you suppose they've got sense enough to come aboard where they have the least height to climb?"

"It's Mr. Harding's orders, sir."

"Harding's orders? What's he doing giving orders from the engine room?"

Again the captain's attention was distracted by a yell from the pirates, who were right under the North Star's stern. There was a volley from the men posted there, and a grappling hook that was thrown and caught on the gunwale was cast off.

Then the Chinamen were seen taking to their boats with the evident intention of stringing the fight out so far that the little crew of the North Star would not be able to keep them off from all points at once. A boat load of men well armed and with hooks and rope ladders attacked the stern, another the bow, while a boat was sent on each side.

At this time Harding, dragging a hose, and the fireman, dragging another, came up the companionway.

"What are you going to do with that?" asked the captain.

Harding had no time to reply in words, but he did reply in action. Two or three of the Chinamen had climbed up the unprotected port side, and one of them had a leg over the gunwale. Harding let drive at him with a half inch jet of steam from the boiler, and he went back over the side, doubtless glad to get into the cold water below. At the same time the fireman opened up on another party about to jump down on to the deck on the starboard side. Both Harding and the fireman, having cleared the gunwale, carried the nozzle to the side and, pointing the stream downward, gave a death scald to every one in the boats below. The bow and stern being well protected by legitimate arms of warfare and the sides being impregnable against a jet of hot steam, the pirates withdrew.

Harding, who had saved the ship by his admirable foresight and resource, became the idol of the crew, while all respect for the captain was gone. When the North Star sailed again from an American port Harding was her master.

Night Light In Glass.

A modern idea has glorified the humble jelly glass. It now appears ribbon covered, with a galloon band at bottom and top, its tin top gilded and inside a wax night light melted to fit. The cover protects it from the dust by day.

KEEPING FLOWERS FRESH.

To keep flowers before arranging them in the vases arrange loosely in a large bowl brimful of water, allowing the water to come just under the blossoms, and place in a dark place for an hour or so. This plan will stiffen the blossoms and increase the length of time the flowers will keep in a fresh state.

It is interesting to note that cornflowers quickly lose their color if deprived of sunshine. Therefore if used as a table decoration the best plan is to put them in the window between times.

CURIOUS CLIFF HOUSES.

Queer Prehistoric Dwellings In Mesa Verde National Park.

The Mesa Verde National park is situated in southwestern Colorado and may best be reached from Mancos. Within the park are many notable prehistoric ruins, the cliff dwellings comprising a group of great importance to the study of American archaeology. The principal and most accessible ruins are the Spruce Tree House, Cliff palace, Balcony House and Tunnel House.

Spruce Tree House is located in the head of Spruce Tree canyon, a branch of Navajo canyon. It originally contained about 130 rooms, built of dressed stone laid in adobe mortar, with the outside tiers chinked with chips of rock and broken pottery.

Cliff palace is located about two miles east of Spruce Tree House, in a left branch of Cliff canyon, and consists of a group of houses with ruins of 146 rooms, including twenty round kivas or ceremonial rooms and a tapering loopholed tower forming a crescent of about 100 yards from horn to horn, which is reputed to be one of the most famous works of prehistoric man in existence.

Balcony House, a mile east of Cliff palace, in Ruin canyon, contains about twenty-five rooms, some of which are in almost perfect condition.

Tunnel House, about two miles south of Spruce Tree House, contains about twenty rooms and two kivas, connected by an elaborate system of underground passages, and a burial ground of 5,000 square feet. In each of these villages is an elaborate system of fortification, with in some cases walls 2.8 feet thick and twenty feet high, watchtowers thirty feet high and blockhouses pierced with small loopholes for arrows.

Cure Common Ills

NEVER MISSED A TRAIN.

Morley Donaldson Never Hurries But He Is Never Late.

Mr. Morley Donaldson, vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway west of Fort William, who officiated at the linking up of the rail-heads in the Rocky Mountains completing the section of the new line from the great lakes to the Pacific, is and has been for many years the confidential right-hand man of Mr. E. J. Chamberlin, the president of the G.T.R. system. When the old Canada Atlantic Railway was an independent system, Mr. Chamberlin was its general manager and Mr. Donaldson his first lieutenant or general superintendent. After the purchase of the Canada Atlantic Railway by the Grand Trunk, Mr. Donaldson was appointed divisional superintendent of the newly acquired division. When, after the death in the "Titanic" disaster of Mr. Hays, Mr. Chamberlin was appointed to the headship of the whole Grand Trunk system he promoted Mr. Donaldson from the position of divisional superintendent of the Grand Trunk Railway at Ottawa to succeed him at Winnipeg as vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific west of Fort William. Mr. Donaldson was undoubtedly well suited for this position, for he has had wide experience in railway construction as well as in railway operation.

Mr. Donaldson was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, where his father was stationed with his regiment, and was educated in France and Canada. Among railway men, Mr. Donaldson is regarded as carrying his desire for perfection in equipment almost to a fad. His standards in that respect are very high. Shabby cars, inefficient engines, badly ballasted roadbeds, slouchy-looking train hands are personal offences to Mr. Donaldson. They do say, in official circles, that he is an expensive man in the beginning, but after he has had his way on a road for a year or two the operating expenses and maintenance charges begin mysteriously to drop. It is also said that Mr. Donaldson's railway papers and documents are the delight of the men who have succeeded to the positions which Mr. Donaldson has vacated on his upward career. These papers are indexed and cross indexed, and arranged in such manner that one clerk can do the work that in the case of a less methodical man would require three or four. Perhaps the most striking quality in Mr. Donaldson's make-up is coolness of mind. You cannot hurry him. In fact, it is doubtful, if in all his life he ever ran to catch a train. On the other hand, it is equally sure that he never missed a train he had intended to catch—unless it left before its schedule.

Mr. Donaldson, who is sixty-three years of age and a bachelor, might easily be taken for a man of forty or under. As he is particular about the smartness of the equipment and staff under his charge, he is about his dress and personality, generally a bit of a dandy. No one ever saw Mr. Donaldson when he was not dressed with utmost neatness, no one ever saw him without the perfection of a bootshine, and all the other little accessories that a busy man sometimes neglects for a few hours, when more strenuous things engage the attention. Mr. Donaldson's father, the late Major Robert Donaldson, formerly of H.M. 41st Welsh Regiment, was for many years staff officer of pensioners at Ottawa.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Milady's Mirror

Drink Plenty of Water.

You can't gain or retain good looks until you realize the value of plain, everyday water. Do you drink a glass of water every morning, a half hour before breakfast? No! Well, that glass of water will keep your skin clearer than anything else you can use.

Drink it hot—don't waste your time by temporizing with lukewarmness. Have the water steaming and sip it while you are dressing. If you find it hard to take, add a little lemon juice or a pinch of salt to take away the flatness.

Between that first glass and bedtime you should drink at least a quart of water. That isn't as much as it sounds. It is only four or five glassfuls in all—the one in the morning, another at bedtime and two or three in between. Only the first glass need be hot; the rest can be any temperature you prefer.

A quart of water a day will aid in keeping your digestion in perfect condition. It will flush off the impurities that otherwise would come out in pimples and eruptions, and that means a clear, healthy skin.

Sugar a Rejuvenator.

The belief is gaining ground in many quarters that if you wish to stave off old age and to have the feeling of perennial youth and vigor, no matter what your actual years may be, you cannot do better than eat plenty of sugar.

One of the pioneers of this theory is Professor Metchnikoff, who has made exhaustive experiments to prove his statements.

There are some who even assert that not only does the frequent eating of sugar keep one from growing old, but that if a man or woman will begin the sugar treatment, even after senility has set in, the effect will be so great as to amount to a complete change in his or her character.

Oatmeal as a Cosmetic.

If the skin is rough and irritated by beat try the oatmeal bath. Make a number of cheesecloth bags, four inches square and fill them loosely with the following mixture:

Five pounds of oatmeal, one pound of powdered Florentine orris root, one pound of almond meal and a half pound castile soap, scraped fine as powder.

This makes a large quantity, but is cheapest when made in these proportions.

One of these bags thrown into the warm plunge bath is most comforting and makes the skin soft and white.

Warm Water For the Face.

Bathe your face with warm water. Use a soft cloth and plenty of good soap—the kind that is best suited to your own particular skin. Some skins are irritated by the purest castile; others are benefited by it. Find the soap that you can use and stick to it.

Rinse the soap off with clear, hot water and then rinse again with cold water.

The warm water and soap will open and cleanse the pores, the hot water will stimulate the circulation, and the cold water will strengthen the skin.

Summer Baths.

In summer a warm, not hot, bath at night is most cooling, and the bath in the morning should be only a quick sponge with cool, not cold water. The woman who dresses in the middle of the afternoon or just before dinner and bathes then should not bathe just before retiring also. The quick morning sponge and the moderate afternoon or evening bath are quite sufficient for each twenty-four hours.

Milk For Sleeplessness.

A glass of hot milk should be taken last thing at night before retiring by people who suffer from insomnia.

To be really effective it must be quite hot and should be sipped very slowly. To drink milk quickly is almost sure to bring on an attack of indigestion.

Sound sleep is one of the best complexion beautifiers there is.

Keeping the Hands Nice.

If you are doing housework try to soil your hands as little as possible. While dusting and sweeping or doing any dry, dirty work wear a loose pair of old kid gloves. Rubber gloves are no longer very expensive. Provide yourself with a pair of these and use them while washing dishes or any work that demands the use of strong soap and water.

Darkening the Brows.

The continued use of grease will darken the brows and lashes and will not injure as a dye does. Make a mixture of a dram of red petroleum jelly and one grain of sulphate of quinine. This is put on night and morning, leaving some of the grease in the skin. Always rub the brows in the direction in which they should grow.

Tender Gums.

If you suffer from tender gums rinse the mouth three times a day with a tumblerful of tepid water to which have been added a teaspoonful of tincture of myrrh and a teaspoonful of powdered borax.

The myrrh is an astringent and hardens the gums, and the borax acts as an antiseptic.

$500 is the amount of the Cornwall Patriotic Fund.

WOMAN SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Female Ills — Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Belleville, N.S., Canada.—"I doctored for ten years for female troubles and did not get well. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I write now to tell you that I am cured. You can publish my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. SUVRINE BABINE, Belleville, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Another Woman Recovers.

Auburn, N. Y.—"I suffered from nervousness for ten years, and had such organic pains that sometimes I would lie in bed four days at a time, could not eat or sleep and did not want anyone to talk to me or bother me at all. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did the best they could for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and now I am in good health."—Mrs. WILLIAM H. GILL, No. 15 Pleasant Street, Auburn, New York.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

Get Away From the Odd One.

A curious story comes from the people of the Niger. A very rich man died, leaving the vast fortune (for Nigeria) of 20,001 cowries. It fell to the lot of the king to divide them among three sons, and he was at his wits' end to know what to do with the one cowrie. A wizard was called in, who gained boundless credit by doling out the cowries one by one until only six remained. These he divided into three lots of two each and gave a lot to each son. The king to this day attributes this very satisfactory outcome to conjuring.—Independent.

The Sin of Trousers.

Trousers were not introduced into England without a struggle—a struggle in which the great Duke of Wellington suffered his only defeat, for it is on record that in 1814 Wellington was refused admission to Almack's "because he wore trousers instead of breeches and silk stockings." Next year trousers were admitted to Almack's and Wellington won Waterloo.—London Tatler.

Disapproval.

"Growcher doesn't look very cheerful. But you must give him credit for one thing. He doesn't quarrel."

"Humph!" exclaimed the excitable man. "He's so ill natured that no one wants to get well enough acquainted even to quarrel with him."—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Japanese Gardeners.

Artist gardeners in Japan earn large salaries. They are required to twist and direct young trees and vines until they assume the shapes of various animals.

Ambiguous.

Mrs. Exe—How does your cook take it when you go into the kitchen and tell her how to do things? Mrs. Wye—Oh, she doesn't mind.—Boston Transcript.

In law it is good policy never to plead what you need not, lest you oblige yourself to prove what you cannot.—Lincoln.

German Spy System is Broken up

London, Oct. 10.—The official News Bureau has issued the following:

"Steps have been taken to deal with German espionage. It was clearly ascertained five or six years ago that the Germans were making great efforts to establish a system of espionage in this country. In order to trace and thwart these efforts, a special intelligence bureau was established by the admiralty and war office. This department, acting in close co-operation with the Metropolitan police department, was able from 1911 to 1914 to discover the ramifications of the German secret service in England.

"Despite the enemy's enormous efforts and lavish expenditure, little valuable information reached them. All the agents who were known to be engaged in this traffic were marked and kept under observation.

"On August 4 twenty known spies were arrested, under instructions from the home secretary. In addition 200 suspects were watched, and a majority of them interned soon after the outbreak of the war.

"It is believed that this action broke up the spy organization that was established before the war, which has not been re-established. A rigorous search was made of the houses and clubs of Germans and Austrians, but no stores of arms, bombs or instruments of destruction were found. All Germans and Austrians who were deemed likely to be dangerous have been arrested. Nine thousand Germans and Austrians of military age are now prisoners of war."

Geo. Teathorn, a shoemaker, of Wingham, Ont., was found drowned at Walkerton.

Prescription for Headache!

If you should go to your family physician and ask him for a prescription for headache, and he knew the very latest discoveries in medicine, he would prescribe the ingredients of ZUTOO tablets.

Yet he might not get the happy combination of the ingredients secured in ZUTOO tablets after long trial and experiment.

The ingredients of Zutoo Tablets are prescribed for headache by the very best physicians of the day.

Praised by all users, thousands gladly testify to the merits of this reliable cure for headache. 25c at dealers. Try it.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe.

There was a good attendance of delegates at the meeting held this week at the Labor Hall, the presiding officer being J. J. Hartley, of the Bricklayers' and Masons' Local.

Mr. Jos. Bell Speaks.

Mr. Joseph Bell, a well known citizen, asked permission to address the council, which favor was granted. Mr. Bell has espoused the cause of the disarmament of the nations, and waxed eloquent over the present day barbaric methods of settling international disputes. He does not want to wait till the war is over to push the idea, but right now while the people's mind is full of the conflict, is the time to agitate that the nations see the folly of murderous strife, and consent that war shall be no more by unanimously deciding to lay down arms and forbid the manufacture of shot and shell. Mr. Bell wants the question taken up locally and is devoting his spare time, of which he reports possessing a large amount at present, to the furtherance of the idea. After Mr. Bell had retired the council debated the advisability of supporting our peace loving citizen, and after a warm discussion decided to support Mr. Bell in his efforts to make Peterborough a miniature Hague as it were.

The Price of Bread.

Much disgust at the recent action of the Master Bakers of the city in raising the price of bread was displayed. It was felt that as flour had recently dropped 30c. it was therefore not the ingredients that had caused the raise, seeing that water was still at the same old price. This was the action of a monopoly, declared a delegate, who then made a motion, that as the Government had promised to crush all monopolies who sought personal enrichment at a time of national stress, the Secretary write and call the attention of the Government to the local bakers' action. Motion carried.

17c. Per Hour For Laborers.

Peterboro citizens who will enjoy promenading our extended pavements in the future may be interested to know that the laborers engaged on the task are paid 17c. per hour by the contractor. The contract calls for a nine hour day, therefore a little over $1.50 a day is paid, or rather given, to the wielder of pick and shovel for that period of time. A committee from the council had interviewed the Mayor, the contractor being present, the latter flatly refused to consider the granting of an advance. If a worker chose to lay aside his shovel, disgusted with the overburdening effect of his salary, a dozen were waiting to take his job.

Still the Grand Opera House.

In reply to a request as to the reason May Robson had performed in an unfair house, delegates from the I.A.T.S.E. said that the charming May declared that Mr. Turner had wired her assurance that everything was as it should be in Peterboro, no trouble whatever, and that this had been acted on in good faith. Miss Robson expressed her regret to the boys.

Unclaimed Prize.

Coupon No. 1388 is worth a handsome set of dishes donated the Sports Committee by Mr. R. J. Soden. If this is not claimed by the end of October, Mr. Soden wishes that it be disposed of in some other way.

DEFENCE FOR MRS. CARMAN

Her Attorney Will Try to Prove Man Killed Mrs. Bailey

New York, Oct. 10.—"The defence that will be put in for Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman when she is tried on the charge of having murdered Mrs. Louise Bailey, will not only prove Mrs. Carman's innocence, but will come close to proving the guilt of a certain other person, who will be revealed as the real slayer."

George Morton Levy, attorney for the Freeport doctor's wife, who will soon face a jury for her life, made this declaration. He would not go into details about the so-called actual murderer, but said:

Says Man is Slayer.

"We will first outline and then prove a story which will amaze every one in Nassau county and elsewhere who has followed the case since the night of June 30. We will show a man did the killing, and we will show why he did it.

"Testimony will be given which will be rather hard upon certain persons, but nobody will be spared.

"Of course, with this element in our case, my associate, Surrogate John J. Graham, and I are absolutely certain of Mrs. Carman's acquittal."

Although the Carman trial is scheduled to begin before Justice Kelby at Mineola early next week, it is not likely to get under way until Monday of the succeeding week. Mrs. Carman is not in the best of health, it was said yesterday.

"She is far from the same strong, self-reliant woman she was last summer," Mr. Levy declared. "The strain of her long confinement in jail has told upon her heavily. But she will take the stand confidently, because she has nothing to fear."

French Captured Surprise Packages Germans in Grass

Paris, Oct. 9.—There are some amusing stories being told of the ways in which German soldiers have been captured. In one case a patrol of French troops entering the village of Nanteuil, from which the Germans had retired, heard a mysterious noise coming from the cellar of a villa. With their rifles ready to fire they went down the steps and opened the door. There, all snoring loudly, were 17 Bavarian infantrymen, and a colonel, who had turned into the wine cellar to try the vintages laid down there.

The colonel had even placed himself flat on his back, with his mouth open, under the spigot of a cask, from which the claret dripped slowly between his lips. It was impossible to wake the Germans from their drunken slumbers, and they did not regain consciousness until they were in a train, disarmed and under arrest, on the way to the south of France.

During the fighting round Meaux a sergeant who was changing the guard on the outskirts of the French bivouac found one of his sentries almost petrified by fright. The man pointed to field of lucerne in which the crop had already been cut and was lying in heaps. "These heaps, sergeant," he said, "I swear they are moving by themselves." The sergeant watched them for a moment and saw, too, that the heaps were gradually moving over the ground.

Calling to the rest of the guard to follow him, he ran towards the nearest of the uncanny piles of grass. Before he reached it, however, there rose out of its midst a German soldier with arms outstretched, who made signals of surrender. The sergeant arrested him and told his men to fire into some of the heaps around. They had only fired one shot when five more Germans sprang up from the lucerne and threw down their rifles. They were stragglers from the army, who had tried by surrounding themselves with bundles of grass to creep away from the French lines unobserved.

RHEUMATIC MISERY

Can Only be Cured Through the Blood—Liniments of No Use

In no disease does the blood become thin so rapidly as in rheumatism. Not only does it become thin but it is loaded with impurities — rheumatic poisons. Without the proper treatment these poisons increase, the inflamed joints swell and the patient becomes a cripple. There are a number of methods of treating rheumatism, most of them aiming to keep down the rheumatic poisons until nature can build up the blood sufficiently to overcome them. But unfavorable conditions of cold or dampness may give the disease the advantage and a relapse or renewed attack follows.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People build up the blood and enable it to cast out the rheumatic poisons with the natural secretions of the body. Thousands have tried this treatment with the most beneficial results. That every sufferer who does not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is neglecting the most helpful means of recovery is shown by the following statement. Mrs. Emeline Smith, St. Jerome, Que., says: "I was attacked with what the doctor said was inflammatory rheumatism. The joints of my hands, feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I suffered the most excrutiating pain. Notwithstanding medical treatment the trouble became so bad that I could not go about. My appetite began to fail me and I was growing physically weak. A neighbor who had been benefitted by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advised me to try them and I decided to do so. In the course of a few weeks I noted some improvement, and my appetite began to return. Then the swelling in my joints began to disappear, and it was not long until I was perfectly cured and I have had no return of the trouble."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Archbishop Hamilton Resigns.

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—The Anglican house of bishops in session here yesterday accepted the resignation of Archbishop Hamilton of Ottawa, both as head of Ottawa diocese and metropolitan of Canada. The Bishop of Algoma presided, and the resignation was accepted only after the archbishop had firmly declined to reconsider it.

The retirement will take place on Oct. 18 and a successor will be appointed a month later.

Captured Cargo of Coal.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The following official statement given out in Berlin, has been received here by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co.:

"The Norwegian steamer Modig, carrying 1,800 tons of coal from England to Russia, has been captured by a German torpedo boat and brought into Swinemunde."

BRITISH AND GERMAN CRUISERS COMPARED

Now that the Heligoland fight has seen British and German cruisers exchanging broadsides, naval journals are discussing the relative merits of the two types. For years Germany has been building what the German Admiral Staff terms "small cruisers"; these vessels can be distinguished by their bearing the names of towns — Leipsic, Karlsruhe, Emdem, Madgeburg, etc.—and are all of small or moderate size, great speed, and light armament. British cruisers are not standardized in the same way; but of late years the Admiralty has been building a number of very fast ships, some larger, some smaller, than the German "small cruiser," but all more heavily armed. The German ships are all armed with the 4.1-inch gun, a weapon which fires a 35-pound shell, and probably can be discharged with great rapidity. The British 4-inch gun is a lighter weapon; the earlier "marks" fire a 25-pound shell, and the projectile from the later patterns weighs 31 pounds. The British cruisers, however, usually mount 6-inch guns as well as the 4-inch weapons, and the 6-inch shell weighs 100 pounds. The Naval and Military Record says:—

Specific mention is made in the Admiralty communique of the excellent work performed by the Arethusa's six-inch guns. With these weapons she "seriously injured" one of the enemy's cruisers, with whom a running fight of thirty-five minutes' duration was maintained at a range of about 3000 yards. The emphasis laid on the work of these guns proves them to have been much more effective than the four-inch battery. Such a result has always been predicted by leading British authorities. Our light cruisers have a real advantage over enemy ships of equivalent type by virtue of their heavier metal. Take the Arethusa (3,750 tons) and one of the ships she engaged, the Mainz (4,280 tons). The first-named has a broadside of two 100 and three 31-pounders as opposed to the six 35-pounders of the German ship, or 293 lbs. against 210 lbs. The difference in the rate of fire between the 6-inch and the 4-inch is too slight to compensate for the disparity, which is increased by the greater range, accuracy and smashing effect of the bigger gun. Thanks to the foresight of the British Admiralty, nearly all our modern light cruisers carry this excellent weapon, whereas no German small cruiser afloat mounts anything heavier than the 4.1-inch 35-pounder. Whatever the occult objection to an adequate armament which influenced the German authorities, they have already suffered by it, and will suffer still more, judging from the manner in which the gallant little Arethusa mauled her bigger opponents.

It is interesting to compare the features of typical ships which took part in this the first authenticated cruiser action of the war:

	ARETHUSA	BIRMINGHAM	MAINZ
Launched	1913	1912	1909
Length	430 feet.	430 feet	426 feet
Beam	59 feet.	49 feet	46 feet
Draught	13- feet.	15 feet	16- feet
Displacement	3,750 tons	5,440 tons	4,280 tons
I. H. P.	30,000 tons	26,500	19,600
Speed	29 knots	25- knots	25- knots
Protection	3 in. belt	3- belt & deck	2- deck
Armament	2 6-inch Q. 6 4-inch Q. 4 T tubes	9 6-inch Q. 4 3-pdr. Q. 2 T tubes	12 4-inch Q. 2 machine 2 T tubes
Broadside	293 lbs.	500 lbs.	210 lbs.
Complement	295 (about)	400	379

Nothing could demonstrate more clearly the remarkable superiority of British cruiser design. Our ships are unquestionably the best as regards all-round fighting quality, but especially with respect to gun power. Although she is 530 tons lighter than the Mainz, the Arethusa is obviously the more formidable; whilst the Birmingham, though only 1,160 tons larger than the German ship, is immensely superior in armament, has equal if not higher speed, and much better armour protection.

It may be objected, however, that the British vessels cited are of more later design than the Mainz. This is true; but, if we take the Karlsruhe, launched in 1912, and therefore contemporary with the Birmingham, we find her reproducing the same inherent defect of all the German light cruisers. She displaces 4,820 tons, has a speed of 27 knots, and mounts the same armament of twelve 4.1-inch guns. Her sole claim to superiority is the 3-inch belt which protects vital parts, reinforced by a 2-inch deck. The Karlsruhe, in fact, despite her extra 1,070 tons, is two knots slower than the Arethusa, and has a much less effective battery.

Very Little Sleep For Allied Troops

More or Less Fighting Day and Night

MUST BE ALERT

Paris, Oct. 10.—During the terrific fighting in northern and eastern France, the troops of the allies have had very little sleep. There has been a great deal of night fighting, and heavy rains have made the position of the men in the trenches vastly uncomfortable.

The trenches within the circle of forts are cloaked befor dawn by mist. Here and there, hidden under temporary shelters, a groan or murmur tells where the soldiers sleep on straw, behind the entrenchments. The stations of the local lines are filled with straw, and among sacks and accoutrements the more fortunate are asleep, crowded close, under the open sheds.

Shadows Loom.

Here and there as one moves, shadows loom out of the mist—the close standing sentries — singular figures, hidden in white vapor to the waist, all wearing heavy cloaks of different types, but made uniform by the military cap, the shouldered or grounded musket.

The challenges run round, in subdued tones. Even suspicion seems lulled. In the truce of the night the mind even of the sentry is passive. The artificial atmosphere that makes all but the known uniform an enemy is forgotten for the moment.

Looking back at Paris, the city is shoulder deep in white mist. Only the spires and towers emerge, grey and sleepy. The summit of the Eiffel tower is lost again in a yet higher belt.

City of Dreams.

As the grey light grows yellow and red with the coming sun, the towers are projected against it, as if floating in mid air, a city of dreams. Can this be the town that is waiting half empty, garrisoned with soldiers, every public office a barracks or ambulance for expected bombardment, almost certain siege?

Yet only a few miles to the north —how few the citizens do not yet know—the advance patrols of the enemy, are also resting, sleeping under the same bands of white mist. And, behind us, also hidden by the mist, the restless movement of our own troops continues. Trains are shunting and banging, there is the rattle of heavy wheels on the roads.

Mist Grows Thin.

The yellow light widens; the mist lifts and grows thin. The sentries seem to shake themselves, and swing their cloaks. A general stir rustles out of the shelters. The clatter of cooking pots and boots, even of voices, begins around us. The night has been warm, and a sultry feeling falls again at once with the opening of day. A cavalry patrol, visible already in its lighter blue uniforms, flies past. The men move out to their work on the earthwork. There is the rattle of arms as the muskets are freed from their standing stocks. Strange sheaves these, in their threatening lines, by the edges of uncut corn fields. They begin to glitter as they are lifted in the early sunlight.

Dawn on Another Day.

The sound of a distant shot, unexplained, startles my little circle of view into alertness. The true of night goes in an instant with the mist. Suspicion, the sharp tension of prospective attack, change in a second the atmosphere; orders, loud voices, and movements tell the beginning of another absurd day in the unnatural war.

Paris is already awake; sharp outlined and stirring. Carts are moving in and out of one gate, which has opened early. Small parties of officers roll out noisily in motor cars from their city quarters.

It is time to get back to the suppressed, shepherded existence of a civilian in a town under military government, for whom rumor-fed ignorance is considered to be the only safety guard against panic.

ALLIES VICTORIOUS IN SIX BATTLES ON FRENCH LINE

In Order to Prevent Anglo-French Armies From Going to the Aid of Antwerp the Germans Renew Heavy Fighting on West Side — Cavalry Raid at Lille is Repulsed With Heavy Loss.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—At least six separate battles of great magnitude were fought in France yesterday along the northern firing line and to the east in the Woevre district. Sensing that the allies' object was raising the Antwerp siege, the Germans at many points attempted to find a weak link in the chain of steel which lies between them and their goal.

The cavalry raid of Germans in northwestern France, near Lille, was met by a counter raid of the British and French troops. A severe engagement occurred at Bethune, 17 miles north of Arras. The Germans were defeated, and said to have been driven over the Belgian border. Many prisoners were taken in this action, and already have arrived at Ostend and Dunkirk, at both of which places the allies have concentrated large forces. Other conflicts are reported from Lens, Arras, Bray-sur-Somme, Roye and Lassigny. At the two latter places Gen. Von Kluk's right renewed its efforts to escape from the encircling manoeuvre which, despite all official reticence, is still being slowly consummated.

Yesterday, as for every day in the past two weeks, these attempts ended in failure and troops sent forward were thrown back on the main line of intrenchments.

In the Woevre district, where the French have been progressing without a halt, but too slowly to be called a triumph, for more than a week, the Germans made a stand in force yesterday, being aided by a most terrific bombardment from their heavy artillery. Unofficially it is said that they were again forced to give ground before the bayonet charge.

On the east end of the line the Germans continue their northward movements from Hattonchatel. This movement is undoubtedly the result of weakening the line to aid General Von Kluk and through sending large detachments to join the siege of Antwerp.

In Lorraine and the Vosges a comparative lull prevails with the exception of the fortified cities. Practically all of Alsace is held by the French, and they are in undisputed possession in many important places in Lorraine. On the centre of the Oise and on the Meuse only minor actions have occurred, the result of which is without important bearing on the larger plan.

Reinforcements of several army corps were sent yesterday to northeastern France, near the Belgian border. The allies are straining every effort to gain control of the railroad lines into Belgium still held by the Germans. The Germans retaliated yesterday by sending a strong force of Uhlans to attempt to cut the lines of the French north of Arras. This brought on the severest engagement of the day, in which the Germans were defeated.

New German Headquarters.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—A despatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Amsterdam says that the Berlin correspondent of The Telegraaf reports that the German army headquarters are now at a French town 50 kilometres from the front, to which they were removed from Luxemburg. A special courier service has been arranged between Berlin and the headquarters, and messengers make the round trip in three days.

THE LIGHT HOUSE MYSTERY PLEASED LARGE AUDIENCE

Piece Was Well Presented by St. Peter's Dramatic Club

"The Light House Mystery," the two act comedy drama presented last evening in St. Alphonsus Lyceum by the T.A.S. Dramatic Club afforded entertainment for a very large audience. The play was well staged and well acted, each member of the cast performing most acceptably. The story revealed by the play has been given in these columns on a previous occasion and the players were the same with but one exception. Mr. George Bain, who upheld the role of Peter Paragraph, a reporter, the last time the play was presented was not available and this part was portrayed very creditably by Mr. E. Picard. Mr. Picard had the silvery tongue and pretty "line" of a scribe and possessed that ever prevalent desire of landing a scoop. The only marked differnce between the role of Peter Paragraph and the regular news gathered lay in the fact that Peter fell in love. That's something foreign to real reporters.

Between the acts solos were rendered by Miss Mabel Mahony, Mr. George Daley, Mr. E. Hanrahan and Mr. J. Minicola. The rendition of "It's a long long way to Tipperary," by Mr. Minicola scored a big hit and the last chorus was taken up by the audience and sung twice.

The following were the characters:—

David Murrey, keeper of Fairpoint Light—Mr. V. McCabe.

Larry Divine, an assistant—Mr. F. Grady.

Hon. Bruce Hunter—Mr. E. Boyle.

Clarence Hunter, his ward —Mr. Wm. Collins.

Peter Paragraph, a newspaper reporter—Mr. E. Picard.

Scud, Hunter's colored servant—Mr. E. White.

Bess Starbright, cast up by the waves—Miss Lillian Simons.

Minnie Dase, Hunter's niece—Miss Kathaleen Carr.

Biddy Dean, an Irish girl — Miss Kathaleen Carr.

Mother Carey, a reputed fortune teller—Miss A. Simons.

Instructor—Miss L. Simons.

Musical director — Miss M. Gorman.

Committee in charge — Messrs. James Condon, J. J. Hanrahan, E. Reynolds, S. Hoolihan, V. McCabe.

Gathering of Home Grown Flower Seeds Advised This Year

Owing to the war in Europe, flower seeds may not be so plentiful next year or the year after, in Canada, as a large quantity of the flower seed that is sold in the Dominion is grown in Germany, and the operations of growing and harvesting the seed there must have been much interrupted this year, and may be carried on with difficulty next year.

Canadian grown seed has been found to give very satisfactory results, and we should advise every one who has a garden to be on the safe side and save some seed this year. Even if there is an abundance of imported seeds it will be interesting to compare this home grown with that from abroad.

Belgian King at Seizaete.

Plowing Trophy On Exhibition

The County Championship Plowing Trophy, purchased through Schneider & Co., jewellers, is on exhibition at the Munro House. It is a very large cup standing upon a large ebony base. The name of the champion year by year will be engraved upon a shield and put on the base of the cup. The cup is the property of the County Council who have agreed to take charge of it and it is perpetual. If filled up with good stuff it would probably hold more than a gallon. A silver medal becomes the property of the winner. The first contest takes place on the farm of Mr. Sandy Matchett, on Oct. 28th. The trophy is an eighty dollar one, not fifty as stated on the bills.

Nephew of Rider Haggard Died Cheering His Men

London, Oct. 9.—A story of the heroism of the late Capt. Haggard, nephew of Sir H. Rider Haggard, is told in a letter received from Private C. Berry of the Second Battalion of the Welsh Regiment. Berry says:

"On September 13 on the outskirts of B——, his company was being subjected to severe German artillery fire, when Capt. Haggard ordered his men to fix bayonets and charge.

"What an officer! What a soldier! He himself used a rifle. We fixed and were prepared to follow him anywhere, but we were checked by a storm of maxim fire. We lost four officers in about twenty minutes.

"About 3 o'clock in the afternoon, just as our artillery had got up ready to cover us, the Germans found our range with their artillery. Just near me was lying our brave captain, mortally wounded. As the shells burst over us, he would occasionally open his eyes and call out, 'Stick to it, Welsh Regiment! Stick to it, Welsh!'

Died Like a Gentleman.

"Many of us wonded managed to crawl up and down the firing line, dishing out the ammunition we were unable to use, so our brave lads stuck to it until our artillery got into action and we won out.

"In that field were strewn thousands and thousands of German dead and wounded. They even piled them up and made barricades of their dead.

Captain Haggard died that evening, his last words being, 'Stick to it, Welsh.' He died as he had lived—an officer and a gentleman."

Steamer India Aground.

CARDINAL CANAL, Ont., Oct. 10, —The steamer India of the Montreal Transportation Company, bound for Montreal and loaded with 60,000 bushels of wheat, went aground at Galop's Canal at 3 p.m. yesterday. The vessel is supposed to be leaking. Wreckage tugs will attempt to float her to-day.

Raid on Paris Failed.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—One of the light blue German aeroplanes, which have been nicknamed the "still doves," approached Paris between 8 and 9 o'clock yesterday morning. It was sighted by a French air sentinel, who gave chase in his machine. The German airship disappeared to the north.

German Guns For Turkey.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Athens says it is asserted that that German officers have placed some 42-centimetre guns in the forts on the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus.

Turpinite Could Wipe Out Nations is Deadly Weapon

There is considerable discussion about the turpinite shells which the French are said to be using. This new explosive, according to the London Express, is so deadly in its effects that all life is exterminated within a radius of 400 yards of the exploding shells. According to some stories regiments of Germans have been found dead in their trenches, their rifles still in their hands and not a mark on their bodies.

The Express quotes a man who has been known to the editor for years and is well informed in regard to turpinite as saying:

"For special reasons, which it would be unfair for me to divulge at the present moment, I am strongly of the opinion that these shells have not been used to any large extent by the French armies in the field. It is probable than an actual test under battle conditions has been made once or twice, but no more.

Ready for Emergency.

"That this terrific explosive will, however, be used in case of such an eventuality as an attempt to take Paris by storm I have no doubt. But I am convinced, despite the thousands of bombs now prepared and the special apparatus cast, this explosive, fifty-six pounds of which is able to kill, to 'petrify,' so to speak, every living thing in a space of 400 square yards, will not be used unless in very deperate circumstances and only with the full consent of France's allies."

In describing the new explosive the Express' informant says:

"The new explosive, which was invented two years ago by M. Turpin, the 'parent' inventor of melinite and lyddite, is undoubtedly the most terrific and most death-dealing high-powder explosive ever known. Should its use become widespread, whole armies, indeed entire nations, would be exterminated in the course of a few weeks. For this reason it probably enters into the life of explosives the use of which is prohibited by the Hague Convention, although M. Turpin says this is not the case."

Work of Years.

After telling of M. Turpin's dislike of the French War Office methods and his grievance following that Government's acceptance of melinite and lyddite the informant of the Express tells how M. Turpin set to work upon a new explosive which he endeavored to perfect so that melinite and lyddite would be practically useless. He worked for years, had a gun made himself, the parts being constructed at different points and then assembled, and directed the making of the shells.

"The merest chance enabled me to witness the early trials of the new explosive," the writer continues. "On a stretch of sand 400 yards from high water level a temporary sheep fold had been rected about 400 yards square and railed off with wooden hurdles. In this space were a dozen sheep and a couple of worn out horses.

"One of the horses was contentedly munching hay and the other was rubbing himself against one of the hurdles, while the sheep were huddled together in a corner.

Live Stock Petrified.

"This was what I saw through my glasses when from a ridge some 2,500 yards away there came a sharp, loud thud and the sound of a small shell, just as though somebody had taken a piece of silk and rapidly torn it in two.

"There was an explosion in the open space in the middle of the improvished sheep pen. The sheep were still hurdled in the corner; one of the old horses was apparently leaning up against the railing. The one that had been munching hay lay on his side.

"When, ten minutes later, I reached the pen the sheep looked for all the world as if they had been petrified. They were mostly standing up, one against the other.

"Three or four were lying down, but all were dead with their eyes open and lips hanging. It was absolutely ghastly. Yet of all the animals only the old horse that had been munching hay was hit by a fragment of shell. The other horse was leaning against the fence, his foreleg stretched out forward, his hind leg doubled up on the sand beneath him. Both had been killed instantly.

Faint Odor in Air.

"There was a faint odor in the air, which I can only describe as that given off by methylated spirit, yet mixed with a pungent smell of menthol. The experiments were repeated on a much larger scale at the French permanent camps of Chalons and Mailly."

YUKON SOLDIERS ARE ON THE WAY

Are Picked Machine Corps of Veterans

OTTAWA, Oct. 10. — The first troops of the second contingent to leave home to go to the front are a picked machine gun corps from the Yukon, who will cover a distance of 7,000 miles before they reach the field of war. They are practically all South African war veterans and left Dawson yesterday for Victoria, where they will go into training until they are summoned to join the contingent when about to sail. Dr. H. Boyle, a prominent Yukon miner, gave two of the machine guns for the corps.

MOVING PICTURES FROM BATTLEFIELDS CANNOT BE SHOWN

Thousands of feet of moving pictures taken on the battlefields of Europe have arrived in New York, but, according to one of the leading producers, no public audience will ever see them. They are too shocking, too horrible for presentation. Few are pictures of the actual fighting, which it was found practically impossible to obtain (except at a distance), owing to the strict censorship and the danger. Most are pictures of scenes on the batlefields after the armies had moved on. They show heaps of slain men and horses, revealing in many cases frightful wounds and disfigurement. They show not the "glory," but the ghastliness of war.

Vastly different are these from the pictures of war carefully staged before the camera, in which the wounded and dying fall theatrically and bloodlessly. Realistic as these may seem to the peaceful stay-at-home population that thrills over them, they are but a shadow, faint, indeed, at that, of actual warfare.

Other modern inventions, the wireless, the aeroplane, the dirigible and the automobile, may find their uses in modern war, but the moving picture camera, like the war correspondent, must be tabooed, and for the same reason, they would tell too much. Yet, if humanity could bear the sight of war in all its naked horror, these films of the battlefields might do more to shock mankind into ending all war than all the peace propagandists put together.

GERMANY'S MAIN TASK IS TO SUBDUE ENGLAND

Vice Admiral of Kaiser Makes Remarkable Statement on Aim of the War But Says Task is Not Easy One

London, Oct. 10.—A remarkable statement, made in an article from the pen of Vice-Admiral Hermann Kirckhoff, a prominent figure in the German navy, appears in a recent issue of the "Hamburgen Fremdenblatt," a copy of which has reached Hull by a circuitous route per steamer. In the article Vice-Admiral Kirckhoff, to whose views weight is attached in Germany, states: "The splendid and big victories of our armies in all directions, which have already done much to clear up the general situation, have given rise to discussion as to the final object and the final aim of the war. That France has to be beaten, but not to be wiped out as a highly cultured nation; that we must even try to be on good terms with France in the future, will be admitted by practically everybody.

Beat Enemies in East.

"It is also admitted that our enemies in the east, who have nothing to seek in Europe, must be thoroughly beaten, so as to make it imposible for them ever to make war with us again. But now we come to the contrasts, and here we encounter a vast difference of opinions, because a number of newspapers state that to do away with Czarism and PanSlavism would be equal to ensuring a lasting peace, equal to maintaining high culture, and so on. This is quite a mistaken point of view, and we must do all in our power to correct it. Let us bear in mind, first and foremost, that we have to defeat and crush absolutely the perfidious Albion, the most pernicious of all political enemies, whose policy for centuries has been full of cunning and perfidy, subdue her to such an extent that her influence all over the world is broken forever.

Subdue England Main Task.

"To subdue England is our main task; to reduce her influence would be a blessing to the culture of the whole world. England must not be allowed to keep the influential position which she has held up to the present. The first steps to destroy her harmful influence in every direction have already been taken, and there are a number of ways to destroy our powerful opponent on the other side of the North Sea, at any cost, ways and means which need not all be taken simultaneously. The task is not an easy one, but it is a task worth all the sacrifice it will demand.

Our "Account of Guilt".

"What is it that has made England's account of guilt such a heavy one in the reckonings of the world? Does it need any proof at this time of day? But here it is. Because England for centuries, pretending to fight for high ideals, has followed none but selfish objects; because England never kept the holiest treaties if the breaking of such treaties was to her advantage; because England oppressed people in all parts of the world solely to enrich herself; because England kept down all her rivals by all and any means, or at least tried to do so; because her government has ever, and always with success, made other states and countries do all the work for her, always made other people pull the chestnuts out of the fire for her; because her officials have always deceived the world, until matters were arranged in such a way that England alone derived any benefit; because British jealousy and avarice will not permit us Germans a peaceful expansion along with the rest of the world; because all English people think that through money and perfidy they can govern the world, while they themselves take a really keen interest now in all sorts of sports only, which have come to be void of any moral seriousness.

England Must Be Crushed.

"So we could go on giving proof after proof that such a country has lost all claim to dictate to the rest of the world and to despise all other people. England must be crushed. But is this possible? Indeed it is. Never have lies, falsehood and cunning during years of peace been successful, never has the world seen so clearly what so-called fair play of Old England really amount to at the present moment. It is as though the mask has at last been torn away from the face of the hypocrite. Nobody need be in doubt as to what state the world would be in if barbarous Russia, vain France and bestial Servia and Belgium were to be victorious. But the heavy German and Austrian blows have destroyed this phantom. German military and maritime forces are now ready in the North Sea and on the coast of the Channel to throw themselves on England and to destroy it by all means at their disposal—by water, in the air and on land, as well as by the forces of gold and economics. We shall not rest until we have gained our object."

RUSSIANS PRESS ENEMY ON EAST PRUSSIAN FRONTIER

Official Statement Says Offensive is Being Pushed Energetically Against the Two German Forces and Heavy Losses Have Been Inflicted on Troops at Wirballen—Przemysl is on Fire

PETROGRAD, Oct. 10.—The following official statement has been given out by the general staff:

"On Oct. 8 our troops on the East Prussian border continued to press the enemy who had formed two fighting groups.

The first group was operating in the region of Vladislavoff and Wirballen (both towns in the Government of Suwalki, Russian Poland). Our troops dislodged them from Vladislavoff and surrounded them on the north. On Oct. 8, however, this group still maintained its position east by southeast of Wirballen. All its attempts to take the offensive at that point failed, the enemy sustaining heavy losses.

"The second group of the enemy, a very strong one, commenced an energetic attack in the vicinity of Ratchka and Bakalarzewo (East Prussia). Towards morning on Oct. 8 we assumed a vigorous offensive against their front. The enemy, covered by strong rear guards, tried, it seems, to get out of the sphere of the battle. Our troops captured, by successful assaults, the positions which the enemy were trying to hold. We finally occupied Lyck (East Prussia).

"Our offensive all along the front continues energetically."

Emperor Nicholas returned yesterday to Tsarskoe Selo from his trip of inspection of the Russian armies at the front. While at Rovno and Vilna, his Majesty made a personal inspection of the military and Red Cross hospitals and spoke with the wounded.

Przemysl In Flames.

Rome, Oct. 10. — (Via London.) —The Russian Ambassador, while denying a report that the garrison of Przemysl, in Galicia, had surrendered to the Russians, added: "However, the whole town is afire, and its capitulation is now inevitable."

10,000 Prisoners Taken.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—"In the latest fighting on the East Prusisan frontier," says Reuter's Petrograd correspondent, "the Rusisans have taken 10,000 prisoners and 40 cannon. Among the officers taken were several landed proprietors who previously lived in the Province of Kovno, Lithuania, which swarms with German subjects."

Asked Passage For Wounded.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 10. — (Via London.)—The British Minister at The Hague has asked the Government to permit the free passage of a hospital ship to convey wounded from Antwerp to England. This, it is explained, was the only foundation for the report that Great Britain had asked the Dutch to allow British warships passage to Antwerp.

TORONTO GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 9.—There was a slight reaction in values, due mainly to lack of outside speculative trading. Wheat opened unchanged to ½c lower. Cash demand was fair for all grades, and both exporters and millers were buyers. Export is again hampered by an increase in New York rate of exchange. Foreign news was generally bullish.

Belgian Deputy Mayor Shot.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The Bordeaux correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. has sent the following:

"It is rumored that M. Basly, a Socialist deputy mayor of Lens (in the French Department of Pas de Calais), has been taken as hostage by the Germans and shot.

"According to another unconfirmed rumor the Germans have destroyed the Town Hall in Arras (capital of the Department of Pas de Calais). This building contained priceless art works."

Power Line Nearly Ready.

CORNWALL, Oct. 10. — The 45-mile transmission cable, to carry 85,000 horsepower electrical energy from Cedar Rapids through Cornwall and Massena, is expected to be completed by Nov. 1. It is stated that so far $760,000 has been expended in construction. There are 321 towers, 600 feet apart, 15 feet square, and 45 to 200 feet high. There are about 5,000 pounds of galvanized angle iron in each tower.

EXODUS OF REFUGEES

Stream of Miserable Belgians Fill Road Into Holland

LONDON, Oct. 10. — The London Times' special correspondent at Rotterdam says:

I have just returned from the Belgian frontier, where I witnessed the most pathetic spectacle it ever has been my lot to behold. I left Rotterdam yesterday morning, in company with two Dutch journalists, via Dordrecht Breda, for Roosendaal. The previous night thousands of refugees had arrived at Rotterdam from Antwerp.

The advance guard of the fugitives was encountered at Dordrecht, straggling little bands of men and women trudging along the wayside, with children clinging to their hands and skirts. The number increased when Exada was reached, and as we approached nearer the frontier little knots of these unfortunates grew more and more frequent. Our motor car stopped at Gundert for a moment. Instantly a weeping Belgian girl approached and begged me to tell her whether a certain Antwerp fort, in which her brother was serving, had been blown up, as reported. From this moment onwards there was no cessation in the stream of wretchedness.

We were assured 25,000 fugitives passed along one road, and that not a main road, from Antwerp to Holland. For many hours I watched the pitiful procession. Every conceivable species of conveyance was utilized for this Belgian exodus, and the roads were encumbered with the Belgian cows and calves in droves. It is said 200,000 cattle thus entered Holland. These are the source of milk supply for the homeless wanderers. Intermingled with them were people of both sexes and all ages, afoot. Large country wagons were loaded with little children. Young as the children were, they realized the tragic character of the occasion, and journeyed in unchildlike silence.

NEARLY READY TO STRIKE BLOW

German Fleet Will Begin Fight Say German Papers

ROME, Oct. 10. — (Via Paris.)— The war against Great Britain, according to German newspapers, will commence at the end of October, after Antwerp has fallen. Belgium then will become the base of operations against Great Britain, the newspapers say. They add that Admiral Von Tirpitz, the Minister of the Navy, who is now at general headquarters with Emperor William, has announced that he will go aboard the flagship of the German fleet and direct the operations of the navy.

French Fleet Is Active.

BORDEAUX, Oct. 10—The following official statement was given out yesterday: "The French fleet, commanded by Admiral Boue de la Peyrere, after provisioning at Antwerp, cruised among the islands of the Adriatic between Cattaro and the island of Lissa. Later the French fleet appeared before Ragusa and Garvosa.

"The Austrian authorities and other notables at Ragusa fled on two special trains as soon as the battleships were sighted. The Italian and Slav population remained calm. The French squadron destroyed the lighthouses and the wireless apparatus at Garvosa. The torpedo boat destroyer Sabretache made a few prisoners at the Putini lighthouse.

"The Austrian warship remained hidden in the harbors at Pola and Cattaro."

The Germans have recommenced the bombardment of Campigny, a village 14 miles south of Verdun, in which is President Poincare's residence. Forty-eight shells have dropped on the president's country home.

SUCCESSFUL AERIAL RAID

Allies Have Again Inflicted Damage on Hangars

LONDON, Oct. 10.—According to a Central News despatch from Amsterdam another aerial raid has been made by the allies on Cologne and Dusseldorf, both important German Zeppelin airship bases. The telegram follows:

"A despatch from Cologne states that hostile aeroplanes threw bombs at the Zeppelin hangars at Cologne and Dusseldorf on Thursday afternoon. The former was uninjured, but damage was inflicted at Dusseldorf."

The previous aerial raids on Cologne and Dusseldorf was made by British naval airmen from Belgium on Sept. 23.

The Evening Star's Antwerp correspondent, telegraphing by way of Amsterdam, says that eye-witnesses of the Zeppelin flights over Antwerp insist that they saw one such craft hit by shells from the forts and fall to the earth.

The British official statement says: "The secretary of the Admiralty announces that Squadron Commander Grey reports that, as authorized, he carried out with Lieut. R. L. G. Marix and Lieut. S. V. Sippe, a successful attack on a Dusseldorf airship shed. Lieut. Marix's bombs, dropped from a height of 500 feet, hit the shed, went through the roof and destroyed a Zeppelin.

PACIFIC COAST TO SUPPLANT EUROPE AS TOURIST MECCA

A telegram received by the local Grand Trunk Railway officials today confirms the opinion already held by transportation experts that the European war is likely rather to increase travel to the Panama Pacific International Exposition, opening in San Francisco on Feb. 20th, next year, than reduce it. The flood of American and Canadian tourists to Europe will be far less than in ordinary years, and the inquiring flowing into headquarters in San Francisco prove that the thousands of travellers who ordinarily flock to the various pleasure resorts of the Continent, will turn their faces towards the Pacific Coast in 1915.

"Under worst possible conditions," wired Mr. G. H. Perry, Director of Exploitation for the Exposision, "we shall lose only about 6 per cent. of our promised exhibits from Europe, and we have the assurance, from all participating nations now involved in the struggle, that their plans will not be seriously interfered with. We have heard from Exhibitors Committees in both Germany and Great Britain within the past few days, requesting that the space originally reserved for them be held in the case of the German Committee and intimation was given that increased space might even be asked for. Requests for space and for additional space from manufacturers and producers in this country and South America and of European nations not at war show marked increase since war broke out."

THE SPORTING WORLD

Plank Against James

Another Big Crowd See the Athletics and Braves in Second Game

BRAVES WON IN NINTH

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.—Twenty thousand people were in the stands at Shibe Park this afternoon, when the Boston Braves and Philadelphia Athletics appeared in the second game of the 1914 world's championship. Betting was even to-day.

The weather was sunny and warm and favorable for good baseball. The game was almost the crucial one for the Athletics, as a defeat for them meant that Boston would start at home Monday needing only two more games to carry off the championship.

Batting order for Boston—Mann right field; Evers, second; Cather, left; Whitted, centre; Schmidt first; Gowdy, catcher; Maranville, short; Deal third; James, pitcher.

Philadelphia — Murphy, right; Oldring, left; Collins, second; Baker, third; McInnis, first; Strunk, centre; Barry, short; Schang, catcher; Plank, pitcher.

Score by innings:

Boston 000000000- 1 7 1
Philadelphia 000000000—0 [illegible] 1

Hamilton Rowing Club Get Craig

Hamilton, Oct. 10.—The Hamilton Rowing club have landed Ross Craig. The big line plunger secured his playing togs last evening and will be out with the oarsmen. Ever since the announcement that Craig was through with the Tigers, the Scullers have been after him, and he finally agreed last evening to get into the game again. His presence on the east end team means a grand wing line, a regular winning combination, and means that the only worry in front of the club executive is the matter of getting Kid Smith into the game on Monday. With Dutch Baker available, Kid Smith a probable starter and Craig in harness, the Oarsmen surely appear like O. R. F. U. winners.

KELLY IS DRAFTED

Petes' First Catcher for Higher Company

Amsterdam, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Secretary J. H. Farrell, of the National Baseball association, announced the following drafts from the Canadian league:

Bierbauer, of London.
Baldwin, of Hamilton.
Kelly, of Peterborough.
Mitchell, of Ottawa.
Trout, of Toronto.

This bare information was handed out last night, but the clubs which drafted the above five players were not made known, but it is quite apparent that they were not major league clubs, since September 27 was closing day for drafts by the big league clubs. In all probability Class A league clubs have claimed the above players.

HOW THE MELON IS CUT

The basis upon which the world's series receipts are divided is as follows: The National commission receives ten per cent. of the receipts of every game, the players of the competing clubs receive sixty per cent. of the remaining ninety per cent. of the first four games played. The sum is divided sixty to the winners and forty to the losers. The remaining forty per cent. of the ninety per cent. of the first four games goes to the club owners, and ninety per cent. of the receipts of every game after the first four becomes the property of the stockholders of the two contesting clubs. Details of attendance and division of receipts each year since 1903 are appended:

Year	Attendance	Receipts	Club's Share	Players' Share	National Com.
1903	100,429	$50,000	$17,338	$32,612	......
1905	91,723	68,405	34,170	27,394	$6,841

KEEN CONTEST IN COLLEGIATE SPORT PROGRAM

Douglas McDonald and Angus McLeod Are Champions

Witnessed by a large crowd, and midst much jubilation, the annual sports of the P. C. I. were run off yesterday afternoon at Riverside Park. Although the afternoon was marred somewhat by a shower of rain it did not in any way dampen the spirits of interest of either spectators or contestants. Each event was keenly contested, and there were many entries, some events taking two and three heats. In the junior 880 yard race a new record was set up, it being lowered by 20 1-5 seconds. The new record is 2 minutes, 38 4-5 seconds. This event won by W. Common, who sets a record that is likely to stand for some time.

Douglas McDonald, with 23 points, wins the senior champoinship and Angus McLeod, with 26 points, wins the junior. In the one mile race Jr. Common was disqualified for running on the grass, which also cost him the championship, he having 24 points. In this race the finish was a hair raiser, Park winning from Common by a mere fraction. The results were:—

Throwing baseball (girls) — Miss J. Knapman, Miss M. Bulmer, Miss B. Pigeon.

100 yards dash, sr.—McDonald, Greene, Austin, Lewis.

100 yards dash, jr.—Common, McLeod, Clark.

Girls, 50 yards—Miss G. Collinson, Miss Giroux, Miss Shevlin.

Jockey race—Byers and Soward, O'Brien and Harstone, Austin and Webb.

220 jr.—McLeod, Clark, Cameron.

440 jr.—McLeod, Clark, Park.

220 sr. — McDonald, Austin, Lewis.

440 sr.—Huycke, time 58 seconds, Soward, Skuce.

Potato race (girls) — Miss Pigeon, Miss Bulmer, Miss Hardwick.

Throwing basket ball (girls) — Miss O'Brien, 47 feet, 7 inches; Miss Dobbin, Miss Young.

Pole vault, sr.—O'Brien, 7 feet; Elliott, Knapman.

880 jr.—Common, record, 2 min., 38 4-5 seconds; Clarke, McLeod.

880 sr.—Austin, McDonald, Skuce.

Jr. mile—Park, 6 min. 10 4-5 sec.; Common, McLeod.

Sr. mile—McDonald, Read, Lewis.

Field officers:—

Starter—Mr. Carson.

Timers—Mr. Morris, Mr. Petlit, Mr. Brown.

Announcers — Mr. Jamieson, F. Hooper.

Clerks of course—Mr. Harvey, Mr. Henry, L. Stuart and E. Smyth.

COMMENT

As You Like It

President Fitzgerald bats just about .106 when it comes to making out pitching averages.

Great stickers—Ty Cobb, a postage stamp, flypaper, British soldiers and the fellow who never knows when to leave.

Business is getting pretty flat. Battling Levinsky and gunboat Smith will hook up in what is billed as a fight in New York on Friday next.

Charley Deal, who is playing third base for the Boston Braves in the world series to replace Smith, who had his leg broken in Brooklyn Tuesday was first discovered by Johnny Cocash, who played with the London Canadian League team a couple of seasons ago. It was shortly before Cocash reported to the London Club that he saw Deal in action with the Jackson Club of the South Michigan League. He looked so good that Cocash immediately put the Detroit club wise, and the result was that Deal was purchased in midseason for a big sum, Cocash getting a slice for his part in the affair. Later, Deal was sent to Providence, which was a farm for the Detroit Club, and it was from there that Boston drafted him.

You can sing of your Rudolph, your
Tyler and James,
And point out their fine records of
won-and-lost games;
You can chant of your Stallings and
John Evers, too.
And of all the fine work of the whole
Boston crew;
But when all's said and done, there is
Connie Mack's gang,
With its Collins and Baker, McInnis
and Schang.

You can tell what they did to one,
Mugsey McGraw;
You can show that their playing contains not a flaw;
You can praise up "The Rabbit," and talk of his speed,
How they're there with the punch
when a few runs they need;
But the whole Boston team may explode with a bang,
Facing Collins and Baker, McInnis
and Schang.

Shampoo.

A mid-eighteenth century traveler, who is the first person known to have made English of the word "shampoo," wrote that "shampooing is an operation not known in Europe and is peculiar to the Chinese, which I had once the curiosity to go through and for which I paid but a trifle. However, had I not seen several Chinese merchants shampooed before me I should have been apprehensive of danger, even at the sight of all the different instruments." The original "shampoo," as this traveler's detailed account and other allusions for long after his time show, was very much what we call "massage" now. It was from India that the word really came, and it represents the imperative of a verb meaning to knead.

Green Animals a Puzzle.

What makes some animals green? If any reader knows and will tell he will settle a big dispute now going on among scientists who have vowed to find out. Green colorations belong chiefly to insects, worms and reptiles. Whether they get their green hue from the plants they eat or not is a question that has not been conclusively settled, although it has been shown that they will retain their color even when denied all green food.—Exchange.

Giraffe Meat.

The flesh of young giraffe, especially that of a young cow, is extremely good, somewhat like veal, with a gamelike flavor. The tongue, from eighteen to twenty inches long, is also very good. But the marrow bones afford the greatest luxury to the South African hunter.

A Great Difference.

"You always advised against speculation?"

"Yes," returned Mr. Dustin Stax.

"You never played the market yourself?"

"No, sir. I never played it. I worked it."—Washington Star.

Children of the Rich.

"Son, I'm surprised to find you playing in the mud."

"But this mud has been thoroughly sterilized, dad."

"Oh, well, go ahead with your fun."—Kansas City Journal.

Humor and Philosophy

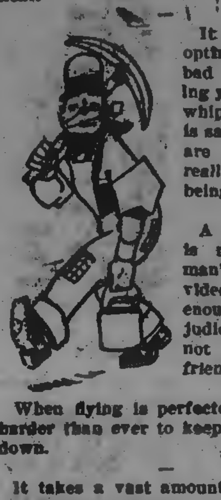
PERT PARAGRAPHS.

BLESSINGS brighten as they take their flight, but some of them would make more of a hit if they had polished up a bit when they made their advent.

Lazy people are wedded to their ideals even more securely than was Ephraim of old.

A desire to arrange the affairs of other people unless a prompt salary is attached should be firmly squelched.

When hunger is the mainspring of a man's actions he doesn't have to have an interpreter to make his meaning clear.



It is hard to be optimistic when bad luck is biffing you one every whipstitch, but it is said that there are people who really succeed in being so.

A ready laugh is money in a man's pocket provided he knows enough to use it judiciously and not abuse his friends with it.

When flying is perfected it will be harder than ever to keep a good man down.

It takes a vast amount of patience to make us endure some of our own kind of people.

If some of us could draw a salary for giving advice we would be so rich that we could qualify for membership in the millionaires' club.

It takes a whole lot of will power to make us really like to do what we can't bear to do.

We are all of us fond of having a good time for its own sake, but not all of us are frank enough to admit it.

Easy Prescription.

Speak the word cheerful,
Costs not a penny.
It may bring sunshine
Down upon many.
Things most annoying
Then will not matter
If by the wayside
Smiles you will scatter.

You may be happy,
Though hardly spending
Money or effort,
Just by unbending,
Just by relaxing
Some of your features
For the dejected,
Woebegone creatures.

Troubles in plenty
There are in pickle,
But if the fancy
Light you can tickle,
Just by your presence
Set some sides shaking,
You can send skyward
Many an aching.

Speak the word cheerful,
Have a smile handy,
For if there's craving
More than for candy,
Let your laugh ripple
Breezy and sunny,
Beats all the tonic
Purchased for money.

Reason for Anxiety

LONDON, Oct. 10. — The London News has a despatch from its correspondent, R. Mackenzie, at Rome, dated yesterday, saying: The following censored telegram has been received by The Tribuna from Berlin:

"German correspondents at the front say that the French is defending Verdun are rapidly shifting the positions of their field guns to simulate a retreat in one quarter while they advance in another. Their knowledge of the ground, which comprises hills and woods, favors these tactics. They contest every foot of ground, and compel the Germans to adopt extensive movements and advanced explorations by means of captive balloons, necessitating rapid shifting of telephone communications, heliographs and aeroplanes.

"Major Morath, the military expert of The Berliner Tageblatt, says that the serious anxiety felt is now fully justified."

Sanitary Reasons the Cause.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Telegraphing from Paris, the correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

"Sanitary reasons have been largely the cause for the withdrawal of both the German and allied forces from their entrenchments along the Aisne, and the consequent change in the battlefront which it had been supposed was due entirely to strategic reasons.

"The positions were becoming rapidly untenable because of the impossibility of burying the dead. So fierce and persistent had been the fire that the men dared not leave the trenches. It was impossible to risk the lives of men in burying the bodies of those that had fallen."

A contest which is unique in the history of Peterborough came to a most satisfactory end last evening. Judging from the number present on Friday evening, the Better Baby contest has aroused a widespread interest. The hall of the public library was filled to the doors, and standing room was at a premium. From the number of prizes awarded and the records of the babies, Peterborough has reason to be very proud of her future citizens, and we may expect great things in the years to come.

The annual luncheon of the Life Underwriters' Association was held on Friday at the Oriental hotel, at which a very able paper was read by Mr. Thomas Mark. About 30 members were present.

This week has been a strenuous one for all those interested in the various organizations in town. Meetings were held on both Thursday and Friday for the purpose of completing the tags for Saturday. Among those present were Mrs. Dunsford, Mrs. Coulthard, Mrs. Stocker, Mrs. A. H. Stratton, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Lillico, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. McDermid, Miss Edwards and her niece, who is at present visiting her, Mrs. Denham, Miss Rush, Miss Gladman, Miss Pearce, Mrs. Harstone, Miss Revell, Miss Roberts and a number of others.

It is to be hoped that the results of Tag Day will be sufficiently gratifying to those who have so willingly worked for this cause which so strongly appeals to all of us.

The members of the Ketchecum Lake club left this morning on their annual outing. Judging from the cheerful expressions of the various members, a very enjoyable holiday is expected. Amongst those leaving this morning were Messrs. E. A. Peck, H. Winch, P. Campbell, E. F. Mason, W. H. Dunsford, W. T. C. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon, J. G. Edwards (Lindsay), R. Gibbs, R. J. Munro, W. Ackerman, H. Nesbitt, W. Comstock and Webber Turner. Messrs. W. H. Bradburn, T. F. Matthews and several others are expected to join the party later.

A fact which will add much interest to this outing is that the genial Mr. Harry Winch will this year celebrate his jubilee as a member of the club, this being the fiftieth year he has been the life of the party. The united good wishes of all the members are most heartily extended to him, and long may he be of their number.

Three French Heroes

BORDEAUX, Oct. 10.—The story of how three French soldiers captured two German quick-firers and put to flight two companies of German infantry is related in a letter sent home by the captain of a company of infantry which is fighting on the Aisne.

Two corporals and a private in reconnoitering crawled within ten yards of the German trenches. Most of the German soldiers were away for the purpose of fetching dinner and the officers were some distnace back of the guns.

The three Frenchmen sprang into the trenches and turned the guns on the unsuspecting Germans, who fled, communicating the panic to two companies. French artillerymen, who had been watching the proceedings, then opened fire and exterminated the Germans.

That same night the two corporals were promoted to be second lieutenants and the soldier was made a sergeant-major as a reward for their daring work.

200 teachers of London, Ont., have donated $40,000, or an average of $20 each to the Patriotic Fund.

WISE COUNSEL TO THE YOUNG BY EVANGELIST

The Crossley meeting at St. James' church last night was a success and augurs well for the meetings of next week. Rev. J. P. Wilson was present and gave some incidents of the campaign held at Napanee last winter, which was one of the greatest revivals held there in the past 20 years. Now is the day of Grace for St. James' if the Christian workers do their part, he said, for such an evangelist as Mr. Crossley does not come every year to any locality.

The service last night was for the young people, and Mr. Crossley gave some helpful and wise counsel in his seven maxims for life. First, he mentioned the attention that should be paid to our thoughts, our spirit and our body. The Christian demand for one moral standard for men and women was workable. The woman as well as the man has a right to demand that the record of the opposite sex be clean. Such a standard would soon put the ban on swearing, smoking and drinking. A white life for the two is the ideal for matrimony and companionship. If we are to live as Christians, let us be exemplary Christians, taking Christ as our Saviour; live a life that will give confidence to others, proving the Christian life to be joyous, thus living for time and eternity, keeping the judgment in mind.

On Sunday he speaks at 11 a.m. on "Three Inestimable Treasures." At 2.30 he addresses the Sunday school on "Seven New Things." At 7 p.m., "Conversion," with a prelude, "The story of Sir John A. Macdonald"s conversion." Services will be held all next week.

A NEW MOUNTAIN IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mount Bruce—Altitude 11,500

Mrs. E. T. Parsons, of Berkeley, and Miss Lulie Nettleton, of Seattle, have returned from a mountain-climbing expedition in the Southern Selkirks. The trip was notable in that unmapped country was traversed, and the ascent of one of the highest peaks of that region was made.

Leaving Invermere, B. C., the party, consisting of E. W. Harnden, of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Gleason, of Boston; Mrs. E. T. Parsons, of Berkeley, Cal.; and Miss Lulie Nettleton, of Seattle, went to the head of Horse Thief Creek, 40 miles in. The first ascent of the unmapped peak was made September 2nd, taking nine hours from the base camp. The route lay over the magnificent Starbird glacier and embraced steep, icy slopes and interesting rockwork. The party was roped in Alpine fashion, as the snow slope below the summit required the greatest care.

On the summit axes were planted and the mountain was christened Mount Bruce, in honor of Robert Randolph Bruce, of Wilmer, B. C.

The view from the summit is described as wonderful. Glaciers of stupendous sizes and hundreds of peaks, carying from 9,000 feet altitude to 11,000 or 12,000 feet. Most of them are unnamed and unclimbed. Allowing for corrections, the aneroid readings gave the altitude of Mount Bruce as 11,500 feet.

On September 6 an attempt was made upon Mount Jumbo from a base camp below the terminal moraine of the Jumbo glacier. The party came within 500 feet of the summit, the final section of the route lying plainly before them, when a storm broke loose and they were obliged to retreat to camp.

Mr. Howard Palmer, the well-known mountaineer, has estimated that there are no fewer than 40 peaks in the Selkirk Mountains, whose altitude exceeds 10,000 feet. The rock from which these mountains have been carried, shows 45,000 feet, or about nine miles in depth. No volcanoes have been found, so that geologists are still undecided as to how this gigantic group of mountains came into existence. The range is crossed at Roger's Pass, by the C. P. R., which is, at this moment, driving a tunnel nearly five miles long in order to reduce its grade, and eliminate a large number of snow-sheds, required to protect the track.

NOTABLE PROGRESS MADE BY ALLIES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 13.—This afternoon's official announcement says the allied forces have resumed the offensive in the region of Hazebrock and Bethune against the enemy's forces, largely composed of cavalry.

The town of Lille, held by territorial detachments, has been attacked and occupied by a German army corps.

Between Arras and Albert, the allies have made notable progress, and there has been similar advance all along the line except in the Vosges and Alsace, where there is no change.

WAIT ADVICES FROM MINISTER

Col. Sam Hughes Will be in England To-morrow

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—It is expected Col. Sam Hughes will reach England to-morrow, and it is stated he will confer with the war office as to the composition of a second Canadian contingent, which will be suitable to British requirements.

Until the militia department is advised by the minister, the work of organizing a new force of 22,000 men will not be proceeded with.
